A citizen who came to town in 1845 says that the weather was such that plowing could be done any month in the year. The remark was brought out by the statement of another citizen that weather like this season was never known in New England before.

Did you ever stop to think that you, and nearly everyone else who has occasion to write at all, have been writing 1800 year after year? You will have to stop that, and stop it at once. Better sit down and practice 1900 a little while. It will seem odd at first, but you have got to get used to it.

One of the large items of expense in the highway department last year was the care of the snow, the early storm of November giving the board of selectmen quite a problem to grapple with, as well as using up funds which it was hoped might be employed elsewhere. Thus far they have escaped.

The semi annual meeting of the Benjamin Franklin Savings bank was held yesterday afternoon, with a good membership present. The report of Treasurer Stewart was read and accepted, and a semi annual dividend of 1 3-4 per cent. was voted. The affairs were found to be in a very satisfactory condition.

The splendid heating apparatus which Rev. Fr. Lee is putting into his new building will be used to heat the convent building and church as well, an underground tunnel having been dug for that purpose. When the whole affair is completed no town of this size will have any such fine looking building for anywhere near the money this energetic pastor has built this one for.

The Hyde Park Gazette recently issued a handsome souvenir supplement, the typographical work being remarkably good, a credit to the office and its energetic management. It showed many of the prominent people of the town, the buildings, etc., accompanied by an excellent sketch of the place. It entailed a vast amount of work, we know, as we've been there.

The story is going the rounds of the press that a lady presented her husband with a lamp, accompanying it with the remark, "Like you, dear, it has a good deal of brass about it, it is handsome to look at, it is not remarkably brilliant, requires a good deal of attention, is something unsteady on its legs, liable to explode when half full, flares up occasionally and is bound to smoke."

Invitations are out for the fourth annual Masonic reception at the opera house on Wednesday evening, Jan. 17. The committee of arrangements includes Joseph P. Bassett, Fred P. Chapman, Charles F. Nye, Walter C. Sherman, L. W. Stott, A. B. Palmer, Charles B Bussey, George R. Winsor, A. M. Thayer, H. A. Talbot, William H. Sweatt, H. T. Hayward, P. A. Woodward, E. D. Daniels and Marston Sanborn.

As this is the first issue of the new year we trust that it may be a happy one to you. Among other good resolutions worthy to be made and kept, is one, that if you are in arrears to this paper you will promptly pay up and start the new year with a consciousness that you have done the right thing, and also enabled the publisher to square his own little accounts. Try it and see how much better you will feel.

John Kingsley, the Franklin young man who was arrested at Worcester recently on the charge of desertion from the marine service at Charlestown, is now serving a sentence of six months' imprisonment in the barracks at the navy yard, having been tried by court-martial on Dec. 18 and found guilty of desertion. He will be allowed two months out of the six for good behavior, and if he is not refractory he will be released next April.

January started out in good winter fashion, a snow storm arriving promptly with the new year. Together with the extreme cold which has continued for the past four or five days, ranging all the way from 7 to 20 above, we are getting our winter all right. But who would have prophesied so mild a winter up to the first of January? Not even the "oldest inhabitant," who calls all winters mild except the ones he used to experience.

John E. Booth, who has been sick at the Franklin house for some weeks, died there on Saturday, and the remains will be taken to Peterboro, Can., for interment, by his wife, who has been here caring for him. An autopsy was held shortly after his death by the Drs. Gallison and Crowley, and it was found, as anticipated, that his death was due to cancer of the bowels. He was about 50 years of age and was the boss carder for the Franklin Yarn Manufacturing Co.

There are less unpaid taxes this year than for several previous years, as Collector Sherman has been looking after delinquents pretty closely. Some tax payers seem to take it as an offense if the tax collector insists upon the taxes being paid. They look upon it as a personal matter between the tax collector and themselves. That is wrong. The tax collector is a servant of the town, so that it is a matter between the town and the taxpayer, and not between him and the collector.

We congratulate the Methodist people on the speedy prospect of their having a newly refurnished house of worship, as the painters have treated the walls and ceiling to a handsome combination of colorings, a new carpet has been purchased, the woodwork has been painted, and when completed they ought to doubly enjoy the pleasure of worshipping there. The money was largely raised by subscription, some donations coming from outside the denomination, for which they are truly thankful.

The company has received the bill of rails for its entire order, 108 carload, and the whole consignment is either delivered or on the way. Ten car loads are already at the Bellingham station. Owing to the probability of continued cold weather the company will not attempt to complete any more of its lines this season, but as soon as the frost leaves the ground in the spring Contractor Tylee will put hundreds of men to work laying tracks in Attleboro, Wrentham, Milford, Hopkinton and Westboro. It is hoped that the entire road will be in operation by Aug. 1, 1900.

Revival services at the Methodist church are attracting a great deal of interest. This is the second week and promises to be much better than the first. The spirit of the Lord is present, quickening the life of the church and calling sinners to repentance. A plain, practical and powerful presentation of the saving truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ is a leading characteristic of every service. Service every night this week at 7 30. Rev. F. B. Sleeper of the Baptist church will preach tonight. The pastor, Rev. S. A. Cook, will preach each remaining evening of the week.

E. Lovell Metcalf is the juror drawn from here for the Norfolk County Superior court, January civil session, which came in at Dedham Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The trial list is not as long as usual, there being but ninety-three cases on the same. Among the other jurors from this section are Charles E. Messinger, Foxboro, carpenter; Edson J. Moore, Norfolk, clergyman; Granville Morse, Wrentham, expressman; Thomas Mullen, Medway, laborer; Ruel A. Rockwood, Bellingham, farmer; A. Ronnde, Walpole, farmer, and Herbert W. Wight, Medfield, farmer.

Miss May Whitaker, daughter of Edw S. Whitaker of McCarthy street, was united in marriage to Christian Schelde of Bridgewater last evening, the ceremony being performed in the Universalist church at Norwood at 7.30 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. Mr Eddy. Following the ceremony a reception was held in the chapel from 8 to 9, a large number of friends of the happy couple tendering congratulations and remembering them with handsome gifts. The bride and groom left later for a wedding trip, and upon their return will reside in Bridgewater, where Mr. Schelde is engaged in the gentlemen's furnishing business. Miss Whitaker has been a resident of Norwood for a number of years.

We are glad to note that "the Norfolk Woolen Co., of Franklin, Mass., is very busy in all departments. The machinery is being operated nights until 10 o'clock. Two pickers and four carders have just been added to the plant in addition to a conveyer system to blow the stock to the different departments. The concern makes wool substitutes. The company also operates the Ray Fabric mills which are likewise in full blast at present on horse blankets and linings. At the end of the season the company intends to enlarge and rebuild the plant so as to be better equipped for the production of blankets and other articles."—Textile Manufacturers' Journal.

At the M. E. church the pastor, Rev. S. A. Cook, is preaching to good audiences nightly, powerful, spirit filled and convincing sermons. Believers are being revived, sinners are inquiring the way of salvation and great good must certainly result from this series of meetings. Mr. Cook is a young man who stands for an unmutilated Bible; who preaches an unquestionable scriptural gospel; a gospel which, likened to a good cathedral, has for architect, builder and bishop the Holy Trinity, the triune God, with a grand central arch which needs no supporting pillar, never has and never will, an arch which spans from Bethlehem's manger to the marriage supper of the Lamb, even He who said "I am alpha and omega, the beginning and the end;" a gospel which holds out to the vilest sinner the same salvation as to the hide-bound moralist, who thanks God that he is not as other men are. If you believe in religion founded on Christianity, don't fail to hear him. The services will continue every evening this week.

Death of Dr. Charles Kingsley.

A wave of genuine sorrow greeted the announcement here of the death of Dr. Charles Kingsley, in his 31st year, at Marlboro, on Friday morning at 10 o'clock, of Bright's disease. Although it was known that he was seriously ill, yet all hoped that his life would be spared for further years of usefulness. He had been ill about fifteen weeks, though when he left here he was not in robust health, that fact being one of the causes of his going elsewhere.

He came here July 4, 1891, purchasing the business of Dr. F. B. Jenckes, now of Woonsocket, having just graduated from the Jefferson Medical school at Philadelphia, Pa. The following year he was married to Mary B. Elliott, of East Machias, Me, Sept. 16, 1892.

He remained here till February, '96, when he disposed of his practice to Dr. D. P. A. Jacoby. He then went south, his wife accompanying him, with the view of locating, but not finding a desirable place he went to Providence, remaining there about a year. An excellent opening offering itself at Marlboro, he went there where he had built up a lucrative and constantly increasing practice.

Dr. Kingsley enjoyed the highest respect of his professional brethren here, being a close student, a careful and conscientious practitioner. He was a member of the Mass. Medical and the Thurber Medical societies, where his opinions always received appreciative consideration.

While here he became a member of the Masonic fraternity, and served upon the school board from '93 to '96, being its chairman the last year of his encumbency. Both he and his wife made many friends during their stay here, and frequently returned to enjoy social and other functions held in town.

He was born in East Machias, Me., March 6, 1869, his parents being Austin F. and Mary C. (Cosseboom) Kingsley, his grandmother now being a resident here, Mrs. Cosseboom, mother of George D. Cosseboom of Crescent street, the latter being his uncle.

His funeral was held in Marlboro on Sunday, the body being taken to East Machias for interment. Many expressions of sympathy are heard for the sorrowing widow in this hour of her bereavement.

Alden Club Meeting.

After the holiday recess, the Alden club will resume its regular meetings on Monday evening next with a lecture on "Ainne Land," by Mrs. Mabel Loomis Todd. Mrs. Todd is the wife of Prof. David Todd of Amherst college, and has accompanied her husband in his many trips through strange lands in search of knowledge for his chosen line of work. She is accorded to be one of the best and most fluent speakers of the present day. This meeting is open to the public. Franklin has no lecture courses and only occasionally good speakers from outside the town. Will not the friends of the club, both gentlemen and ladies, show their appreciation of the few good things the club offers them?

Have you tried the famous "Hyomei" remedy for colds, coughs, catarrh, etc? A demonstrator is here this week at Mason's drug store, where free samples will be given away, and treatment given without cost. If you try this remedy once you will never be without it. Don't neglect a cold, when this will cure you so readily.

Mrs. Charles Rand will shortly canvass for a life of Moody.

A Pleasing Reunion.

Members of the Congregational church to the number of more than 150 met at the church yesterday afternoon to celebrate the annual "church day." The business session was held in the afternoon, hearing reports, electing officers, appointing committees, etc.

After the routine work was accomplished the supper committee, consisting of Mrs. Sneath, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs Bachelor, Mrs. Gage, Mrs. Hills, Mrs. Hancock, Mrs. Walter Daniels, Miss Mabel Ray, Miss Carrie Rockwood, N. C. Nye, Walter Daniels and Dr. E. C. Abbott, announced that supper was ready.

This feature of the affair was decidedly pleasing, and full justice was done to the appetising repast. Remarks were made by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Sneath, and his wife, Dea. T. B. Allen, Supt. W. S. Richardson, Clerk J. H. Baker and B. M. Rockwood. The roll call was very generally responded to, fully three-quarters of the membership responding either personally or by letter, proving both helpful and interesting.

The reports from the various organizations were especially inspiring, showing a healthy balance in the treasuries and a vast amount of work accomplished. The following are the officers and committees:

Clerk and treas., J. Herbert Baker; deacon for four years, Robert A. Stewart; supt., W. S. Richardson; lady member church com., Mrs. Charles Johnson; reception com., Mrs. H. F. Gage, Mrs. A. Farrington, Mrs. F. M. Richardson, Mrs. W. M. Fisher, Mrs. W. S. Richardson; floral com., Caroline F. Rockwood, Mabel Ray, Mrs. George Emerson, Alice M. Brock; temperance com., Rev. I. W. Sneath, J. H. Baker, T. B. Allen, E. F. Richardson, Mrs. E. F. Richardson.

Asst. supt. Sunday school, Carl B. Johnson; sec. and treas, Nathan C. Nye; directors, Ida M. Brown, Mrs. T. B. Allen, Ernest D. Daniels; librarian, Olive M. Lovering; asst. librarian, Geo. W. Blake; supt. home dept., Hattie A. Daniels; supt. primary dept., Grace C. Whiting; asst. supt. primary dept., Frances E. King.

NANTUCKET AND BENJ. FRANKLIN.

BY M. FOLGER COLEMAN.

A few generations after the first settlement they adopted the Friends' religion almost unanimously, in a liberal way of their own. But, although conforming essentially to the Friends' discipline, they rarely, if ever, showed intolerance or narrow-minded severity. And while there was instilled into the minds of the young a strong sense of responsibility to act from pure motives and live worthy, useful lives, they were not inordinately checked in the innocent fun and natural gayety of youth. This gentle reasonableness, shown in the training of the children, was distinctly seen in what might be called the government of the island. Their discussions being tempered with a respect for differing ideas, and the desire to so modify their individual predilections as to learn from each other, gave to their deliberations a quiet simplicity joined to intellectual power, with clear and logical conclusions. This caused their dealings with the natives to be entirely peaceable and satisfactory, and their own lives, although comparatively uneventful, to be varied not only by visits to and from the outside world, but by enjoyable social intercourse, and an interest in scientific investigation. It was a common occurrence for men and women who had been busily engaged all day in mechanical work, so called, to meet together and converse in a natural and animated manner upon most abstruse subjects. So much so, that Nantucket was said rather laughingly to "live scientifically." This peculiar mental atmosphere was most attractive and pleasing to off islanders," who came often to visit and confer with them. Even the every day duties were frequently made occasions of delightful excursions and gatherings, such as the annual sheep shearing and the spring and fall fishing, when they left their town homes for a sort of camping out nearer the shore.

Their manner of expressing themselves in conversation was, as a rule, simple and correct, without unnecessary emphasis. And although a few colloquialisms crept in and in time came into popular use, they were simply old fashions and not to be called corruptions exactly. Thus, when one retailed a foolish or unlikely story it was dismissed as a "lockram," and there were some other singular expressions from the old English. Sometimes in their discussions one had a habit when being almost convinced yet not entirely so, of saying "I feel quite sure?" with a rising inflection. This habit was unconsciously imitated by others until in Nantucket quite came to mean not entirely, but nearly, so. Another common expression, which showed how carefully they considered before entertaining a decided opinion was "So far as I know." Such a thing as [illegible]gged persistence was unknown, whether or not it may have have developed later.

Thus, being of a studious turn of mind, that is, thinkers, in asking Peter Folger to join them they added no inferior or alien element. He had an active, versatile mind and, unlike some of varied accomplishments, he was good in each. Nearly all his children married in Nantucket, but his youngest child, Abiah, born on Nantucket in 1667, married Josiah Franklin of Boston in 1690.

The New Legislature.

Prof. L. L. Burrington has been putting in effective work for Mr. Bennett for the speaker of the legislature, and feels quite confidant that he will win. The Republicans caucus today, instead of leaving it till the legislature convenes. The Myers men are making great claims, but as his Republicanism is questioned it is difficult to see how he can receive enthusiastic support. If he is elected by Democratic votes his position will be still more uncertain. The legislature convenes tomorrow, when it is hoped that all will be amicably settled. Ex-Speaker Bates has been sick, but is expected to be on hand in time to take the oath of office. Crane and Bates will make a good working force, and with a Republican mayor in Boston affairs in this commonwealth are looking up.

Want to Cross.

Last week Tuesday the railroad commissioners gave a hearing to the Medway Medfield Electric railroad company for a grade crossing over the New Haven track in Medfield. Some fifty persons in the towns interested appeared to testify. A petition signed by 200 from Medfield, 200 from Millis, 304 from Medway and 110 from Bellingham was presented in favor of a grade crossing. While no decision was reached the probabilites of granting the petition are most favorable

The selectmen of Medfield postively refuse to allow a trestle bridge and so state in the franchise. The track of the electric road is laid on both sides of the steam road with sixty foot girder rails, with paving. The track is laid westerly nearly to the Holbrook organ factory in Millis, a distance of four miles. The contractor will work up to the time when the frost stops him.

"My Mother-in-Law."

Miss Ullie Akerstrom will present her new laugh-provoking comedy, "My Mother-in-Law," on Thursday evening, in which she will appear as a German servant girl. This is a radical departure from the style of work she has portrayed heretofore. Miss Akerstrom is a comedienne of no mean ability, and in this line she has a part that enables her to give full vent to her peculiar style. A German servant in a play suggests fun. In "My Mother in Law" the opportunity presents itself, and in conjunction with other clever people they make you laugh irresistibly. The plot of the play is simply the interference of a mother-in law in an otherwise quiet family of a doctor.

The entanglements and disturbances are numerous. Many pleasing specialties are interspersed in the comedy and an evening of enjoyment is guaranteed. The worry caused by all kinds of worriment, that worry the worried brains of the worrying worriers, will cease their worrisome worriment when you you see the worry dispelling farce, "My Mother-in law." Please practice repeating the above rapidly, in order to limber up your jaws that you may be prepared to laugh long and loud without danger of dislocation.

TUESDAY, JAN. 2, 1900

The governor of Texas has a name with which some people are fond of taking liberties. It is Hogg, and some of his enemies once started the story that he had two girls, one of whom he named Ura Hogg, the other Ima Hogg! But, in a recent interview, Gov. Hogg has this to say: "The truth of the matter is that my girl's name is Ima Hogg. She was named by her mother. Her mother was reading a book somewhere, in which one of the characters which interested her exceptionally was named Ima. About that time the little girl came along, and she was named Ima. We never noticed the play on the name until it was called to our attention. The boys all have rational names. They are Tom, Mike and Will." So the governor cannot be accused of intentionally making the little girl say she is a small, porkish animal every time she speaks her name!

The San Francisco Wave reports that a young woman who patronizes the free library at San Jose was anxious to read Hopkinson Smith's "Tom Grogan," whenever she called for it the book invariably "out." She begged then the librarian notify her by telephone as soon as the book came in. The book was returned next day, and the librarian telephoned. It was the girl's father who answered. "Tom Grogan," he shouted, indignantly. "So Tom Grogan wants my daughter to come up after him. Look here, you tell that young man from me, if he wants to see my daughter he had better come here and do it."

A New York restaurant recently undertook to cater exclusively for obese people. Nothing of a fattening character was served. The establishment was hailed with delight by a large crowd of heavy weights. Its history was about as follows: The first day 100 ate there, the second, 90; the third, 80, and so on down until the proprietor found himself without a single patron, when the sheriff came and took everything in sight.

A pitiful story, with a very evident moral, comes from Toledo, O. Five restless boys left good homes to "see the world." They got as far as Akron, O., where an accident befell them as they were endeavoring to board a train, and now one of the five is dead, two are badly injured and in the hospital, and the other two are in jail. It hardly seems necessary to comment upon this over-true story from real life. Anyone can easily draw the most evident moral from it.

Spain will not be surprised to learn that under the management of the United States government the receipts of the island of Cuba from January 1, 1899, to June 30 exceed the expenditures by $1,480,121. The surprising thing to Spain will be that the American officials didn't pocket the surplus hastily and say nothing.

Chicago papers are printing advertisements of this kind: "Wanted—An able man to cook and wash for a private family." The demand seems likely to be met, for one who is willing to work his way up advertises: "Wanted—A position as second girl by an honest and capable young man."

Highway robbery has taken on a characteristic lately that reminds one of being choked to death on honey. It is for a woman to seize a man about the neck and give him an affectionate hug, while a companion empties his pockets. There have been several such cases in New York city of late.

According to late figures Kansas has two head of cattle, one hog, one-third of a horse, and one-fifth of a sheep for every man, woman and child in the state.

That 200 persons should be poisoned by picnic lemonade in Illinois is a new proof that it is wisest, even if not most economical, to make lemonade out of lemons.

Table Companions

Are important. The man who eats alone loses half his pleasure, and much of the benefit of his meal.

Your doctor will tell you that pleasant companionship is almost as essential as food.

We cannot always have with us our most congenial friends, but there is one table companion we need never be without.

We mean a cup of good tea. A good pure tea is synonymous with Chase & Sanborn's package teas.

These teas, because they are pure, are a real help to every one.

Tea is a healthful tonic when it is pure. Tea to be beneficial must have quality; low grade teas do not possess to any degree the tonic effect.

Because Chase & Sanborn's teas are sold only in half-pound and pound air tight, leaded forms, one may be sure they are fresh and of full strength.

The name of Chase & Sanborn on the package is sufficient guarantee that the leaf is the best that can be selected.

The Kohinoor, Orloff and Orange Pekoe are special brands, adopted to meet the requirements of individual tastes. They make an irresistible trio.

One pound makes over 200 cups.

CHILD WIT.

"What kind of a dog is that, papa?" asked small Johnny, as he observed the big animal chasing his own tail. "That's a watch dog," replied the father. "And will he go as soon as he winds himself up?" asked Johnny.

Teacher (to Tommy, whose father is a milkman)—"How many quarts make a gallon?" Tommy—"A gallon of what?" Teacher—"Anything—milk for instance." Tommy—"Four quarts: three of milk and one of water."

It was the first time little four-year old Willie had ever seen a snake, and as it writhed and squirmed along he ran into the house to tell of his discovery. "Oh, mamma!" he exclaimed, "come here, quick; here's a tail wagging without any dog."

The other evening at dinner the face of four-year-old Edith was lighted up with unusual beauty, and her dark eye had a dreamy, far-away look that prompted her mother to ask: "What are you thinking about, darling?" "Oh," replied the little miss, "I was just wondering whether you chewed your puddin' or swallowed it whole."—Chicago Daily News.

I want to let the people who suffer from rheumatism and sciatica know that Chamberlain's Pain Balm relieved me after a number of other medicines and a doctor had failed. It is the best liniment I have ever known of.—J. A. Dodgen, Alpharetta, Ga. Thousands have been cured of rheumatism by this remedy. One application relieves the pain. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

In Siam the inferior throws himself upon the ground before his superior, and the latter sends forward one of his servants to see whether the former has been eating or carries with him any smell of anything offensive. If he does, he is immediately kicked out without ceremony, but if not the attendant raises him up.

"You're always brave enough to say it when I ask you for money," said Mrs. Oldhunks.—Chicago Tribune.

Having a Great Run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Manager Martin, of the Pierson drug store, informs us that he is having a great run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He sells five bottles of that medicine to one of any other kind, and it gives great satisfaction. In these days of la grippe there is nothing like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to stop the cough, heal up the sore throat and lungs and give relief within a very short time. The sales are growing, and all who try it are pleased with its prompt action.—South Chicago Daily Calumet. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Together.

A hovel will do for a beggar—princes in state must be;
But a stormy sky, if you are by, is shelter enough for me.
Is shelter enough for me, my dear, in the weary world and wide,
So Love be with me the rosy year—so you are at my side.

It's gold that glitters an' gold that gives joys that we hold supreme;
But gold is cold when the years grow old and joy is a dream—a dream!
It's just we twain, in peace or pain, and the wealth o' the world dented,
A desert drear were a garden fair, so you are at my side.

Your hand in mine across the world—in darkness and in dawn,
And grief and gloom, or vales of bloom, so Love shall lead us on:
So Love shall lead us on, my dear, across the world so wide,
Until Love's last goodnight we hear, and slumber side by side.
—F. L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

The Man with the Laugh.

Dey's a heap a men dat's witty an'
Kin tell a bully joke,

Any funny word dat's spoke;
But dey's none dat teches Eph'm—
Eph'm Diggs, I'm down ouah way—
Kase his laugh is so contiguous—
Contidgious, I sh'd say.

What's funny about Eph'm is
Dat when he cracks a joke
It make no diff'nce ef it's weak,
Dey's sump'n 'bout dat moke,
So ef he springs a no-'count yarn
You haw-haw anyway—
Kase his laugh is so contiguous—
Contidgious, I sh'd say.

It don't seem lak it matters
Dess what de story be—
What tickles you is Eph'm's laugh,
Hit rings so full and free.
It ain't de story ketches you,
It may be ol' an' gray
But his laugh is so contiguous—

The New Year.

IN TIME there are no rests as in music. Time was in the without a beginning, and time will be ever and forever. On and on and on it goes in harmonious perfectness, knowing no age and making no record of days. "Natura non saltat"—nature never made a break or a pause. It shows no chasms anywhere in its majestic course.

Man, though, for his convenience or pleasure, or profit, establishes times and seasons. Thus he says the first day of January shall be termed the beginning of a New Year. The Romans, with an acute poetic sense that pervaded all their work, elected to have the dawn of the year show in March—the first spring month, when nature kisses new life into everything and robes the earth in garments of many colors.

Man must have his pauses and starting points. It is not so much a question of sentiment as of necessity that dates and seasons be fixed. The success of business life depends upon it, and a nation without a chronology is a people without a history. Each year must hold its own events, nor may one trench upon the other.

Leaving this line of suggestion, one is led to the thought that these year posts of man's time offer opportunity for reflection upon what has been and what may be. Each New Year day tells not only of the new birth, but also of the year that is sepultured. Here are presented in brave contrast life and death. As the old passes out, the new comes in. So with man and all other animate things. "The king is dead; live the king."

So one lesson after another may be learned, if one be but a willing pupil. What the memories of the just dead year? What the sins, the errors, the follies? What the good one did, and what progress in the knowledge that is lasting? Ah! the year is gone, gone to one and all of us; but the impression remains. These years one by one are character builders, each adding to the other until the mortal changes to the immortal!

Looking backward, what is the reckoning? Whatever most of good, or of ill, the New Year is at hand. Let the accounting be just, that one may be abler to meet justly and righteously the things that are before. One should recall the errors of the past, not that he may mourn over them, but that he may gain strength for future struggles.

One need not give the whole of New Year's day to the forming of good resolutions. Alas! there be many who do vow overmuch at such times. The hallway of the New Year, like that of hell, is paved with good intentions. One may resolve and resolve again, and swear lustily in confirmation of such purpose; yet all unavailingly, because of the frailty of his being. He acts the better part who reflects, and is not rash in promises.

Not the same to all is the history of the past year; and not two shall find the New Year the same in experience. But each year is for all, and has in abundance riches of good for every one. The year just closed was lavish in gifts; the new offers plenty as great. It is but to look for it fearlessly and the searcher will be rewarded.

The old was and is not. The new is here with its portents. A warm heart for the year just dead, and a glad hand for the one that is newly born.

GO WITHOUT HORSES.

The police department of Hartford, Conn., will soon be equipped with automobile police wagons, ambulances and prisoners' van.

An electric brougham in Boston was recently upset through the collapse of the front wheel tire, and its two occupants were badly scared, although they were not injured. The front tires of broughams and the rear tires of electric hansoms are those most liable to punctures and other injuries.

It is reported that the New York Central railway intends to establish an electric cab service in New York and other large cities along the line, and the Pennsylvania railroad has been experimenting with a sample vehicle, and it is possible that these carriages may be substituted for the horse-driven cabs at the stations of the company's system.

An automobile ambulance is being made for St. Vincent's hospital, New York city. It will be propelled by electricity, and will be a model of its kind. Electric power is more advantageous for propelling a vehicle where it is essential to have a very steady motion. The large pneumatic tires, it is expected, will also contribute in no small degree to the comfort of the patient.

It is probable that the maximum speed allowed to automobiles in Paris will be greatly decreased, and also that persons must possess certificates as to their knowledge of and ability to run automobiles. In a single week the Electrical World says that eight persons were killed and as many as 50 injured through automobile accidents in and near Paris. In nearly every case these accidents were owing to rapid traveling or to the ignorance of the drivers.

Life.

Dear God, I thank Thee for this resting-place,
This fleshly temple where my soul may dwell
And like an anchorite within his cell
Learn Thy deep love and grow to perfect grace.
The stars sweep on in their eternal race,
Thy soaring suns the stricken gloom dispel,
Yet what have these of mystery to tell
That in a blossom is not mine to trace?
Thy guest, not captive, to my visioned goal
I soar beyond all memory of strife,
Upborne and shielded by Thy power benign;
Thou art the strength of my unfaltering soul,
And from the vantage of this mortal life
The freedom of the infinite is mine.

—Peter McArthur, in Ainslee's Magazine.

When a man is tortured with backache or lame back he doesn't want to experiment with new and untried remedies.

He realizes that the backache is kidney ache.

The lame back virtually means lame kidneys, and he knows that there's very serious trouble in store if he doesn't get his kidneys to do their duty. In his trouble he naturally turns to

Doan's Kidney Pills

Others all around him have been cured of kidney complaint by this wonderful little remedy. He has the testimony of others to guide him. He KNOWS that Doan's Kidney Pills WILL cure, no matter what form of kidney complaint he may have.

He learns this by reading emphatic evidence like the following:

Mr. H. J. Woodbury, carpenter, of 37 South Chestnut street, Augusta, Me., says:

"I was interviewed in the spring of 1896 by a gentleman who asked me for my experience with and opinions of Doan's Kidney Pills. I told him that I had been greatly annoyed by the action of my Kidneys, that the slightest cold always settled there and produced intense suffering, and that Doan's Kidney Pills had cured me. It is now two years and a half since I was first interviewed, and I can conscientiously say, the longer and more fully you know Doan's Kidney Pills the greater faith you have in them. Everyone, as far as I have heard, speaks in the highest terms of their great value."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N.Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS IN EUROPE.

Miners are also the subject of similar special pension laws in France, Austria, Russia, Belgium and Roumania.

In France miners and seamen are obliged to contribute part of their wages to an old age fund, and the state subsidizes this fund, as well as approved friendly societies.

In Germany all workmen, sailors, servants and clerks earning less than $500 a year are obliged to contribute a portion of their wages for insurance against old age and infirmity and the government adds something to the pension insured. In 1891 the amount paid in pensions was $3,825,000, of which the government supplied $1,510,000. In 1897 the total had increased to $13,750,000, to which the state contributed over $5,000,000.

In Denmark relief is given to respectable persons over 60 years of age who have not contributed to any fund. It is not fixed in amount, but sufficient for the support of the person relieved and his family. It may be given in money or in kind, or consist of free admission to an asylum. The commune awards the relief and pays half of it, the other half being borne by the state. In 1896 the state and the communes together paid nearly $4,500,000 in this way.

The originator of the idea of old age pensions for Englishmen, paid out of the public purse, can certainly claim to have furnished a problem that will severely test the keenest intellects, if, indeed, keen intellects apply themselves to such a fantastic scheme. If everyone is to receive a pension at the age of 65 the larger share of the necessary funds will be provided by the vast majority of persons who do not reach that age and to whom the long livers will have rendered no service.

ODD ENDS OF INFORMATION.

Bella M. Hughes, of Atchison, Kan., recently celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of her second marriage.

Two babies were in a child's carriage, near a railroad track in Rockford, Ill. A fierce wind arose and whirled the carriage onto the track before a passing train, and the babies were killed.

The most northern newspaper in the world is published, not in Hammerstein, Russia, as recently reported, but in Hammerstein, Norway. There is no place in Russia named "Hammerstein," and no part of Russia is situated so far north as where the remarkable weekly is issued.

A cake of ice dropped from a wagon upon the foot of a three-year-old girl in Boston and the foot had to be amputated. Carelessness by an employe of the Boston Ice company, it is said, caused the accident. The parents of the child brought suit and recovered a verdict of $10,000.

The years write their records on our hearts as they do on trees; inner circles of growth which no eye can see.—Saxe Holm.

He is happy whose circumstances suit his temper; but he is more excellent who can suit his temper to any circumstances.—Hume.

Every human being has a work to carry on within, duties to perform abroad, influences to exert, which are peculiarly his, and which no conscience but his own can teach.—Channing.

It is doing some service to humanity to amuse innocently. They know but little of society who think we can bear to be always employed, either in duties or meditation, without relaxation.—H. More.

It was the saying of an ancient sage that humor was the only test of gravity, and gravity of humor; for a subject that would not bear raillery was suspicious, and a jest that would not bear a serious examination was certainly false wit.—Shaftesbury.

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently overcome habitual constipation, well informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system. SHOT AND SHELL.

The joyless man robs others of joy.

Not all new books have new thoughts

A man is what his life is to him.

Genuineness is greater than genius.

Epicurean meals do not make athletic men.

To bear misfortune calmly is to have a fortune.

Every deserter will get what Jonah had, a whaling.

We laugh at vanity, but mourn over its harvest of vice.

A man may be born in the mud and yet he may die in marble.

The secret and success of love is its sincerity and simplicity.

Into wisdom's web wise men their waiting moment's weave.

One thinker is worth more than many collections of thoughts.

Large problems are many-sided, and take many master minds.

The man who never makes a mistake never makes anything else.

There is a great difference between working for a man's good and for his goods.

The milk of human kindness is a singular commodity; when you give it away it keeps itself, but when you keep it, it sours.—Ram's Horn.

WHAT SCIENCE IS DOING.

Seven scientific expeditions are exploring Central America.

A novelty is the cold storage of hops This is done in several places in England.

The opinion that malaria is conveyed to human beings by mosquitoes has long been held by the Somali of East Africa, according to information given in Wickenburg's "Wanderungen in Ostafrika."

The party of scientists who have been investigating the Wyoming fossil beds are having remarkable success, and a large number of boxes containing fossil remains have been sent to the state university, and the work of restoration will soon be begun under the direction of Prof. Wilbur C. Knight.

Many cities in Europe are solving the problem of the destruction of iron gas and water pipes by electrolysis by substituting for them pipes made of glass. As glass is almost a perfect nonconductor of electricity, there is, of course, no electrolysis. Further advantages are the saving of electricity and the absence of danger of shock from wandering currents.

The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.

The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and mention this paper.

Trusting.

Were it not for rest in darkness.
We should weary of the glare
Of the brilliant, burning sunshine,
Permeating everywhere
God, in mercy, sends the shadows,
In their turn to east and west,
With this promise to His children:
"They who trust in Me are blest."

"Light will always shine from darkness."
And the shadows flee away
But for night we might not trust Him—
Faith grows not in brightest day.
So, when all our joys seem fleeting,
May we learn at Jesus' feet
The dear lesson He would teach us:
Hope, to those who trust, is sweet.

You no doubt already know that iron and steel have advanced more than 60 per cent. within the last few months Wagons, Plows and Machine Belts have advanced a very large percentage. People are paying higher prices now than for years in almost all kinds of food and fuel. The price of everything seems to tend upward, and, following the usual course, the advance in wages comes also, and has already reached certain lines. The western farmer is in high clover, and general conditions at the opening of the year 1900 are most favorable for a year of prosperity along all lines.

The sentiment expressed by Rev. Dr. Sneath at the temperance meeting at the Methodist church last Sunday evening will find a ready response in the hearts of all friends of temperance in town. He prayed that the Lord would open the eyes of certain transgressors who were defying the better sentiment of the community to the enormity of their offence against decency, and if no other way was possible that the hand of the law might rest upon them until their works were mete for repentance.

There's an old saying current among the farmers that Christmas day and the eleven succeeding days indicate the weather for the coming twelve months. According to the proverb, then, January is to be on the whole balmy and mild, February clear and cool, March clear and cooler. The goose bone prophecy has predicted the coldest weather of the season for March.

Everyone in town is interested in the published fact of Gen. Draper's candidacy for the vice presidency, and it is not denied that if New England will pull together he can be assured of the nomination, and, of course, this year, the election. The only possible objection to giving the office to a New England man is that the politicians will say that New England is "solid" for the party anyway. However, Gen. Draper would be an ideal candidate.

In St. Mary's parish at midnight Sunday night a high mass was celebrated, a large congregation assisting at the services. Rev. Representative William J. Bullock of New Bedford, son of H. M. Bullock of this place, was quite a factor in the recent speakership contest, he being the one who practically induced Aspirant Reed to withdraw. Mr. Bullock is well remembered here. He has served two years as Republican representative from New Bedford, and at the last election was induced to run as an independent candidate and was elected. He is one of the leading druggists of that city and quite a power in politics.

For the year ending Dec. 31, 1899, the town clerk has recorded 43 intentions of marriage, nearly double the number recorded in 1898. The oldest groom acknowledged 80 years on the earth and the oldest bride was recorded as 69. The youngest bride was 16 years of age, taking for a husband a man a few years more than double that age. All of the 86 contracting parties, with the exception of about 15, are native born, the exceptions being from Nova Scotia, Ireland, England and Canada. October, November and December lead in the number of licenses, each having six.

Grady of North Attleboro was the installing officer, assisted by George Smith, marshal, and P. Ryan and Thomas McGeough, conductors. A large number of members and invited guests witnessed the ceremonies and thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment, collation and dancing which followed. After the installation Deputy Grady delivered a brief address, after which Misses Agnes Sullivan and Elizabeth Pendergast entertained the guests with vocal and instrumental solos. A collation was then followed by dancing, which was continued until 2 o'clock this morning.

continued case of the commonwealth against James McParland and E. Knowlton, charged with the of a horse and buggy at Medway three weeks ago, came up before Doe in the district court yesterday resulted in the conviction of both ants, who were fined $25 each. ton paid the fine and McParland ed. Attorney Thomas Grover of represented the defendants. The and buggy in question was the ty of a Mr. Thomas of Milford, is in charge of his son, who with panion drove to Medway on the night it is alleged the team was taken. Evidence showed that both defendants were under the influence of liquor and had a team of their own stabled in Medway at the time. The horse and buggy were later returned to the owner, and the accused claimed that the taking of the team was a mistake made possible by their condition.

Of Practical Worth.

The annual meeting of the Farmers' club was held with L. W. Daniels on Monday evening, the treasurer's report showing a balance of $70. The new officers are: Munroe Morse, president; Charles Badger, C. M. Allen, John L. Fisher, H. H. Gates, Irving Trentham, vice presidents; L. W. Daniels, secretary; N. E. Newell, treasurer and librarian.

Mr. Daniels said in part: The best corn crop I ever grew was in 1875. I had a little over 1,000 bushel baskets of ears as my crop from six and one half acres of land. Corn needs good strong, warm land and a plenty of feed. I would put on, between December and March, from twenty to twenty-five two horse loads per acre of the best manure, spreading it direct from the cart onto the grass land, and let it lay until about the first of May. Anywhere from the first of May until the tenth plough the land five or six inches deep and immediately after plowing put on the wheel harrow and keep it going until you have a good, fine seed bed. Then I would either bush or roll the land and make it as level as possible. Then take your horse planter and put in your corn, planting it about twenty-two or twenty four inches apart in the drills, the rows three feet apart. When the corn is just breaking through the ground go over the piece with a weeder or smoothing harrow, going lengthways of the corn, or the same way that you run the planter. When the corn is two inches high I would then sow in the drill about 600 pounds of some good standard fertilizer, and then go over the piece again with the weeder or harrow, and I would go over three or four times until the corn was big enough to cultivate and hoe. One good hoeing will do if you keep the cultivator at work as it should be, but two will not hurt the corn.

A silo is the most profitable way to use the corn crop, where you can cut in all the ears with the stalks. I think the corn crop has the most money value of any. There are twenty different uses to be made of corn.

N. B. Stone said he would use the sulky plow and put the manure on top of the ground after it was ploughed. Would put corn in the silo and feed it to the cows all together. Various gentlemen said that the silo was the best way to preserve corn and fodder. C. M. Allen gave his cost of growing corn in Franklin at twenty eight cents per bushel. He gave a history of corn from Central America to Europe. He plants sweet corn, cuts stalks with ears on in the fall, leaves in the field and takes to the barn as wanted to feed the cattle. Corn should be grown thick and it does not pay to hoe it. Mr. Campbell tried raising corn one season and he found it expensive. The next meeting will be at T. L. Martin's.

You must have heard of the famous remedy for colds, "Hyomei," an inhaler. Quiets a cough at once, and cures your cold like magic. Free samples are given away this week at Mason's drug store. Wonderful for children who have colds or cough, pleasant to inhale and nothing to disturb the stomach.

Richardson's Market.

This week we have some fine poultry. Turkeys and chickens from 15 to 18 cents, fowls from 12 1-2 to 15, home made pork and sausage 12 cents. Budlong's famous pickles, horse radish for 10 to 15 cents, sweet pickles 20, mixed and plain pickles 10. We have something never before handled here, the famous Franco-American canned soups, all kinds; you have seen them advertised, but never tried them. They have no equal, just the thing when you have guests. All the vegetables and choice cuts of meats.

There has been a large demand for "Hyomei" for colds, which is being given away at Mason's drug store this week.

A Strong Presentation.

The monthly union temperance meeting was held at the Methodist church on Sunday evening, all of the pastors participating. The vestry was used owing to the repairs in the church, and this was filled to overflowing, over 200 being present. The music was furnished by Mrs C. L. Stewart, the choir and the congregation.

The address of the evening was by the pastor of the church, Rev. S. A. Cook, and he presented a number of new points in a telling manner. He said in part:

My text is "Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." The Christian beholds the perfection of all things in the exercise of the Father's will. This petition from our Lord's prayer is, first of all, personal and requires that we individually assume the position of loving, perfect obedience to God. But man's life is also social; as such it bears upon the church, the state, the community, in fact, upon all organized and unorganized good and evil. As Christians we pray that God's will may be done by us in these varied relations. Thus, as lovers of truth and as Christians, interested in the bringing in of the kingdom of righteousness, we are brought face to face with the great liquor problem, and our consequent relations and responsibilities. The nation's great evil is the licensed saloon. The drink habit is the great enemy of labor and has still more disastrous results upon the moral and spiritual life. Thousands of drunkards are asking the question "Cannot something be done?" Anxious mothers and waiting wives repeat the question "Cannot something be done?"

The latent strength of the church has never yet been marshaled in this direction. The work of agitation is a great and necessary one, and was recently illustrated in the Roberts case. That to which we silently give consent marks our moral plane and level. Education in temperance hygiene is a means for helping to bring in the better day. We should not stop short of the practical duty which meets us at the polls. The best way to secure better laws is to use the laws we have. The closing exhortation urged to look well after certain things known to be going on in Franklin.

NANTUCKET AND BENJ. FRANKLIN.

By M. FOLGER COLEMAN.

Of this marriage was born in 1706 Benj. Franklin, one of our nation's chief architects, and a man of science recognized the world over. Benjamin Franklin's character indicated unmistakably his Nantucket origin. It is quite possible that his father's character was similar in many respects to his mother's. Otherwise he took largely, as sons often do, from the mother. Although he would scarcely be classed as a Friend, there was that in his habit of mind which demonstrated clearly that he was born of a mother reared in the atmosphere of quiet self-respect and intellectual strength, which were distinctive features of early Nantucket. Even his humorous qualities were characteristic of Nantucket, although the latter was governed by the Quaker simplicity.

Abiah Folger was a distinct child of early Nantucket. The minds of children are often moulded by their environment, and when the inborn qualities agree substantially with the environment as in her case, the development is most harmonious and mentally strong. Much as is said of Benj. Franklin's humble birth, his inheritance of true superiority was royal. His active inquiring mind, while being open to knowledge and scientific observation, also rendered him in his younger years, passed as they were away from the sustaining and developing influence of the feminine or mother mind, more easily susceptible to the temptations and promptings of physical growth, and the unfolding of the latent powers of nature.

But his wonderfully versatile intellect, causing him to feel a deep interest in a variety of subjects, had no effect weakening to his proficiency. Rather, each subject being thoroughly sifted and worked at gave strength and clearness to all the others. The differing traits of his many-sided character were pitted against each other in a most astonishing manner, now blending harmoniously, again challenging each other to their best expression and advancement. And, although sometimes overcome by the many and subtle material influences of this earth life, his better and stronger nature always remonstrated with a persistence which caused even those errors and hindrances to be finally brought into subjection and used to strengthen the higher influences.

That he after earning success in one study or calling dropped it for something else was not, as sometimes appears, that he lacked industry and perseverence. His mind was a living and progressive one, which kept at work upon one thing fully as long as there was progress in doing so. But never, after success in any particular pursuit, did he relax his effort and live upon his reputation. Having the relentless Nantucket energy, he must start something else and work that all out. And his clear and comprehensive insight caused all these ventures to be worked to the end and, at the same time to bring out the latent possibilities of his remarkable mind. So on and on, until his scientific proclivities were thoroughly aroused, and he astonished the world. Then, strong as his desire and inclination were to pursue these intensely interesting scientific experiments, he calmly dropped them when needed by his suffering and struggling country. If he had lived another eighty years the world would probably be possessed of much knowledge which no one but himself could fathom and bring to the surface.

Again was his Nantucket origin shown in the desire to help strengthen the lives of people and the nation, regardless of any lasting fame to himself. Many and

FRIDAY, JAN. 5, 1900.

As a general proposition it is distinctly untrue that a married couple can live on less, or on the same amount, or or nearly the same as the young man alone, very truly observes a writer in the Chicago Tribune. There is a large personal element in the problem, and it is true that many young men with good salaries never save a dollar until after they marry, but that is neither a proof of their wisdom nor a confirmation of the fallacious aphorism above quoted. It is true that if the young wife is a skillful housekeeper she can make the daily expenses for food and lodging somewhat less than they would be at a boarding-house of the same grade. But in order to do this she must have furniture, utensils, and all the paraphernalia of a housekeeping plant. This requires capital, and if the parlor and kitchen furniture is bought on the installment plan the happy couple are likely to find themselves minus those articles some chilly morning. As for rent, a married couple almost always starts out with more than double the amount of room required for a single man, so that the rent is more than doubled. If both man and the woman are earning salaries or doing a full share of the joint labor at the outset, it must not be forgotten that this state of affairs may not continue indefinitely. If the family of two becomes one of three, the fallacy of marrying on a salary sufficient only for one will be still more painfully apparent. The test of whether a man can marry on a certain salary or not is this: Can he save money on it? If he cannot save a few hundred dollars before marrying he had better remain single. If his salary is large enough to keep a family on, but still he cannot save, then his wife may help him get a bank account, but the chances are that she will simply be a wretched drudge. Many men learn to cut off their wasteful habits after marriage, and this is the basis of the popular sophism about two living on less than one, but the fallacy remains a fallacy nevertheless. Many men find it impossible to live as economically after marriage as before, and for these the cost of living is more than doubled. It all depends upon the man and woman, but it is always safe to say that a salary too small to save the cost of a household outfit upon is too small to marry upon.

Uncle Fabian, an old gentleman of color who daily visits South Water street, Chicago, says the judging of a watermelon without use of the "plugging" process is an art practically unknown north of Mason and Dixon's line. The use of the knife in ascertaining the quality of a melon, he declares, is regarded in Georgia almost as a crime. "Ah believe dat in a gen'ral way," said the old colored man as quoted by the Record, "de no'th'n folks ah fu'theh advanced 'n' de south'nehs, but Ah don' hesitate a secon' in saying dat dey don' know it all. Dey plug a watermelon an' rob it of mo' 'n' half its flavoh. De strictly propah way to tell whetheh o' not a millon is good is to thump it on de end. If it sounds laik it was full of cotton o' excelsior—kaind o' hollow-laik—why, it wants to be given de graud go-by; but if it is solid an' don't have no ring, den it is wuth yo' money. Pluggin' spiles a millon t'll it ain't wuth shucks."

Queer matrimonial records have been discovered in Indiana. One of the most remarkable of these is the fourteenth marriage of Aunt Polly Owens, of White river township, Hamilton county. She probably holds the Mississippi valley multi-marriage belt. She is only 60 years of age and looks as though she might outlive a dozen more husbands. Aunt Polly was married the first time when she was 15 years old, and was left a widow two years later. Since then she has averaged a new husband every two years. She has procured eight or nine divorces. The rest of her husbands have died. She has only six children as the result of her multi-marriage career, but those six have as many different names.

many of his political essays were written for this purpose and easily fulfilled it, although useless and forgotten in this age of the world. And back of much of his witty nonsense is the purest unselfishness and thought for the general good. In that way only could some be reached, and either disposed of as incorrigible hindrances or aroused to better and helpful thoughts and convictions. His comprehension of the most diverse and opposite characters, and how best to plead with each and bring all together in comparative harmony, was unexcelled in his day or ours.

So it was that his underlying conscientiousness is seen in everything he undertook, and his sincere, even dignified, regret over what he called the "errata" of his life give evidence of intrinsic strength and purity of thought. And this priceless inheritance, not the least of which was the strong common sense and philosophical endurance engendered by the pioneer life of both parents became, in our country's great need, a bulwark which no power could shatter, and a steady guide and support which never failed.

And just here let us fully realize that he really disliked undue adulation, such as he felt obliged to endure from some during his sojourn in France. The sincere respect and affection of the French people he appreciated and enjoyed, but everything beyond that was thoroughly distasteful to him. He was old and infirm in health and would rather have remained in his own home. But, as usual, he was ready to help his young nation by representing it in Paris, because no one else could so easily preserve the kind feeling between the two countries.

There is much said, and it is needed, about children having a right to be well born. This right was not denied to Benj. Franklin in any degree. And his appreciation of this is seen in his lasting respect and affection for his parents. As he says on the stone which he placed over their graves: "He was a pious and prudent man, she a discreet and virtuous woman." The whole inscription, which is the expression of his matured and chastened mind, gives unmistakable evidence of his thorough realization of that foundation upon which alone can be enduringly built true mental power, the pure germ from which alone can be developed a clear and spiritual perception of universal truth.

True scientific investigation must lead up to the spiritual. The one indubitable fact is life. And matter is not life, but only animated with that life principle which pervades the universe, and exists in far greater perfection after leaving the body and its limitations.

VACATION EXPERIENCES.

If a man tries mountain climbing he is apt to break his neck over a precipice. If he stays in the valley there may be a landslide. If he travels there are uncomfortable hotels where he pays three times the price of all things and then is in luck if he gets them.

A sea trip is considered the grandest pick-me-up invented. Yet the space for one's daily promenades is limited, one's dearest enemy may be on board and not to be avoided or seasickness may step in and prevent life being a grand sweet song. No man likes to come home from a trip looking like a lemon or as though he had been through the jaundice.

Some people find their ideal of a holiday in a farmhouse or cottage by the sea. There the lover of nature is in his glory. It is heaven on earth to think about, but in reality it may rain all the time and the cottage contain nothing more interesting than a case of mineral specimens or butterflies for amusement.

Another way of tiring oneself thoroughly is to go on a bicycle trip across country. One can scorch along hot and dusty roads, push his wheel up hills till his face looks like the kitchen fire on an ironing day. Stop one night at a hotel and then push on to the next place marked on the map. People say they enjoy this sort of thing, but one has the lurking fear they are pretending. Imagine the discomfort and then be happy that home is near.

Did you ever See a Snow Storm in Summer?

We never did; but we have seen the clothing at this time of the year so covered with dandruff that it looked as if it had been out in a regular snowstorm.

No need of this snowstorm.

As the summer sun would melt the falling snow so will

Ayer's Hair Vigor

melt these flakes of dandruff in the scalp. It goes further than this: it prevents their formation.

It has still other properties: it will restore color to gray hair in just ten times out of every ten cases.

And it does even more: it feeds and nourishes the roots of the hair. Thin hair becomes thick hair; and short hair becomes long hair.

We have a book on the Hair and Scalp. It is yours, for the asking.

If you do not obtain all the benefits you expected from the use of the Vigor, write the doctor about it. Probably there is some difficulty with your general system which may be easily removed. Address,
DR. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

Not All Pleasure.

The troubles of a millionaire are illustrated by a story told of William Rockefeller by one of his attorneys. The oil magnate bought a large tract of land in the Adirondacks, which he uses as a game preserve and forest home. A local paper announced that Mr. Rockefeller intended to buy half the Adirondacks and make them into a park. The article was widely quoted, and soon letters began to pour in. The letters were soon followed by brokers, farmers, real estate agents and speculators. Mr. Rockefeller at first denied the report, but this had no effect. His secretary answered every letter in the negative, but this proved ineffective. His clerks were instructed to tell all callers that their employer did not want any Adirondack land, but even this was futile. Not long ago Mr. Rockefeller was driving, and stopped to rest his horses, when a man suddenly walked out from behind the trees and asked for a match. Mr. Rockefeller went through his pockets and handed the man three or four. The man struck a match and said: "I am much obliged to you, sir; I wanted a match very badly, and you came just in the nick of time. By the way, I believe you are Mr. William Rockefeller and you want to buy some land in this neighborhood. Now I—" The sentence was not finished. The unhappy capitalist threw the box of matches to the man and drove off in a gallop.

VERSES FOR AN IDLE HOUR.

Her Last Course.

When I married my wife she had studied stenography,
Got that down solid, then took up photography;
Mastered that science and started geography,
All in the course of a year.
She presently took up a course of theology,
Followed that up with a touch of mythology,
Got a degree in the line of zoology,
(Still her great mind remained clear),
So she took in a course on the theory of writing,
Some lessons and points on the subject of fighting,
A long course of house-building, heating and lighting,
Far over her classmates she'd soar.
So she entered the subject of steam navigation,
Took also instruction in church education,
And mastered the study of impersonation,
And still she was longing for more.
Next she tackled the latest great fad—electricity,
"Dress reform" institutes taught her simplicity,
Sought the best way to encourage felicity,
Oh, she's as smart as a book!
She at last ended up with a course of phonetics,
Gave a little attention and time to athletics,
The rest of her time she gave to magnetics,
And now she is learning to cook!

The Donkey and the Thoroughbred.

A blooded steed that cropped the grass
Once saw a laden donkey pass.

The thoroughbred was of famous stock,
But he limped with a badly damaged hock

His hoofs were split and his knees were sprung,
And it was long since he'd been young.

He couldn't work, and he couldn't race,
He was of no use around the place.

But he stopped the donkey in the road
And pitied him for his heavy load.

And he boasted of his pedigree
And put on airs for the ass to see.

"I sigh for you," said the blooded steed,
"From my heart of hearts I do indeed!"

"I work all day," the donkey said,
"And I know I'm not a thoroughbred;

"My beauty is not a thing to praise,
And I've known few joys in my busy days;

"But better a donkey that toils away
Than a thoroughbred that has had his day!"

"DAD'S" HOME COMING

EVERY volunteer regiment when ordered to return to its native state, there to be mustered out of the volunteer service feels that when it reaches home it must make the best appearance possible so as to show the friends who will be congregated to welcome it back to its native town that it is a regiment of soldiers. To start with the colonel calls a meeting of the officers and impresses them with the importance of making a good appearance. Who ever saw a colonel, and especially a volunteer colonel, who was not proud of his command and all breaches of discipline, all faults of whatever kind would be forgiven if only his men would make one last effort to produce a good effect when they reached home by making a good appearance on the street.

[illegible] that has been favored [illegible] unty has made a street pa[illegible] [illegible] hen it returned home, and it is dur[illegible] [illegible] feature of the regiment's existence [illegible] nent is expected [illegible] greater than this [illegible] istory. That was the inspection by government officers which was to determine whether or not the regiment was to be [illegible] foreign soil to engage in battle. Then no efforts were ever spared to make everything of the best. And it can be said to the glory of the volunteer soldier that many [illegible] regiments that did not secure the opportunity of displaying their valor on the battle line passed an inspection that was worthy of the best of old campaigners. So true was this that the government officers found it hard to select the best, and many that remained at home were pronounced the equals of those that went.

When the Seventh Illinois volunteer infantry were ordered to return to Chicago, there to be mustered out of the government service, it passed through the same experience that every other volunteer regiment has before or since. The colonel made the customary speech to his officers and they in turn lectured their men on the necessity of making the best possible appearance. But one battalion of that regiment secured an extra speech on this all-important subject.

Maj. Lawrence M. Ennis, commanding a battalion of this regiment, is a lawyer by profession, when he is not soldiering, and, like all lawyers, likes to make a speech when he has an audience, and such an opportunity as this was not to be lost. He had his battalion formed in close order and then proceeded to give the men his ideas of a proper return home, and what their deportment should be on the occasion of the inevitable street parade.

"Officers and men of my battalion," he began, "we have served the government that called for us faithfully for six months. We have not been so fortunate as some of our comrades, in that we were not allowed to show the valor of our command on the field of battle; but we have proved ourselves soldiers and have elicited words of praise from our superiors. Now we are to return home to be mustered out. We are to go back to Chicago to wives, mothers and sweethearts, to our various places of business. We will receive the same glorious reception that our comrades from every city in the land are receiving as they return home; but this reception must not cause us to forget that we are soldiers. We must show to our friends at home that we have not spent six months in the service of the government without learning how to be soldiers.

"There is not a man among you who has more friends in Chicago than I have; there is not one of you who will be called to more than I will from friends along the line of march in our home city. There will be a wife and babies standing on the street to wave to me, to call to me, to seek for at least one glance. There will be the same for many of you; but it is the soldier's duty to keep his eyes to the front. Under no consideration must you 'rubber.' I only ask this, that you follow the example of your major. If your major 'rubbers' you may 'rubber,' but I want every eye straight to the front while mine is there. We owe this much to our regiment. There will be many days to follow the hours of that street parade in which to look at wife and babies."

The battalion was dismissed; the men boarded the waiting trains and the trip to Chicago was made. At the depot a happy, howling crowd of friends and fellow townsmen were met, but the men were soldiers; they had not forgotten the colonel's orders or the major's speech, and every man stood at attention, with a glance of recognition for none but their officers.

Then the march through the streets began, and everywhere were encountered the same hilarious crowds of people eager to welcome the returning soldier, but in the last battalion at least not an eye was turned to the right or left; every man looked straight at the back of his major's neck, and all went well until Fifth avenue was reached. The major heard only the steady tramp, tramp, tramp, of his men behind him when his eye was attracted by a woman far ahead of him waving a handkerchief in one hand while in the other arm she held a mite of a baby, and as she waved her handkershief she called loudly: :

"Daddy! Oh, Daddy!"

And then she saw "Daddy." He was in the front rank of the first company of the major's battalion, and her joy knew no bounds.

"Daddy, Daddy, Daddy," she cried, as he came nearer.

"Oh, Daddy, won't you look?" But "Daddy" wouldn't.

"Daddy, Daddy, won't you look? Won't you look at Momsey and the baby, the pretty little baby what you never saw?"

But while a tear stole down the rugged cheeks of the big, broad-shouldered "Daddy" he looked only at the back of the major's neck. But of the major. That cry for "Daddy" had gone clear to his soldier's heart. As he expressed it, "it was enough to tear the rails from the street car tracks," and something must be done for that mother.

As his leading company reached the spot opposite which the mother was standing he turned quickly in his saddle and commanded:

"Halt! Rest!" And the other two battalions marched on. But in one bound "Daddy" had reached the sidewalk and had Momsey and the baby in his big strong arms. Quick as a flash he had bestowed half a dozen kisses on the expectant lips of Momsey and the baby and was back in place in ranks.

"Forward, double time, march," cried the major, and his battalion made rapid strides to catch the two battalions of the regiment ahead of him.

"None had seen 'Daddy's' heinous breach of discipline," explained the major. "The eyes of his comrades, his company officers and my own were so full of sympathetic tears that it was impossible to see, and the incident was never reported."

But again what of the major. The colonel learned of his halting his battalion without orders, and a reprimand was the result But the major made no defense. He felt that he needed none.

THE BEAUTY OF THE LORD.

Go, study Nature's picture book,
In flowery field and mossy nook,
And find the wealth of beauty's dower
Is of the Lord in grass and flower.

Go, watch the waters brightly gleam
In meadow brook or mountain stream:
The watery sheen in beauty shown
Has source beneath the Great White Throne.

Go, search the dome of heaven's height,
Where beauty's dress is tinted light:
Both clouds and stars with one accord
Proclaim their beauty of the Lord.

Go, stand afar on holy ground
Where righteousness and truth are found
Let beauty fill thy soul with awe,
His beauty who gave Sinai's law.

Or, rather, sit at His dear feet
Whose love and mercy justice meet;
Thine eyes shall see all beauty then
As Son of God and King of men
—Rev. W. J. Gray, in Chicago Advance.

THE FRIENDSHIP OF NATURE.

God's World Out of Doors Is Responsive—Teaches Strength and Cheer and Patience.

The friendship of nature is a phrase whose meaning can only be determined in the case of any individual by his capacity for making friends. God's world out of doors is responsive. It renders gift for gift and thought for thought. Yet it is never obtrusive. As with the dearest inner circle of loving and understanding friends one may dispense with words and share the quiet of a happy hour, so in the mood of silence as in the joy of active thought the sky broods over us, the trees give us their motion and their shade, the sea lifts and retreats upon the sands or leaps to meet the prow of our on-moving boat. If we have hearts to feel the joy of a companionship that never flatters and never denies its ministry we shall be lovers of nature and admitted to be sharers of her life.

In this responsive power nature comes closer to us than most of our human friends. We must allow for the play of our dearest companion's mood whatever our own may be, for his right of self-expression, for his need of sympathy which costs us some forgetting of our own first impulse. Though we meet upon equal terms, there is this necessary element of self-suppression in the relation which, indeed, contributes to its joy but makes it something different from communion with nature, which makes no such demands. She will go with us on our chosen path of feeling, making our joy more joyful, our grief more real, but gradually winning to purity the thought that was confused and purging the sorrow of all morbid elements. As the stream cleanses itself in flowing, the thought in its companionship with the pure life of nature grows more innocent and clear.

Her friendship, therefore, is a thing apart. A great, calm spirit breathes in her familiar scenes. It is not hurried, as men hurry. It is not caught by the eddying flattery or doubt of the moment, but its life flows on with clear prevision of the stream's purpose and the stream's final goal. Her gray skies are as healing as her blue if we will only wait with her. She seems to echo our own mood, while in reality she repays our confidence by helping us to wise and clear decisions. For the headstrong and the hasty her voice of counsel and of comfort is too low to be heard or heeded, but to the patient she speaks of strength and to the sorrowful of cheer.

She loves to lend herself to man's delight, yet often seems to withdraw cooperation that she may draw out hardihood. At first she only promises to wing man's boat in the one direction in which her breezes blow, but at last she teaches him that he may sail athwart the wind if he will only learn and trust its ways. He who fears her tempests never grasps the secret of her power. He who overcomes her hindrances learns what treasures of delight and strength are open to the strong. We make the limitations of our claim, not sh., and step by step her care will teach us lessons of God's will and work and of our possibilities of growth if we will live with her.—Boston Congregationalist.

Strive to Improve.

Wherever you are in life, no matter how low your place is, it is a good place to sprout in, though it may not be a good place to grow or dwell in. Leave your root where God planted it, but mount up out of poverty, mount up out of bad companionship, mount up out of secular ways of life, and lift yourselves toward the light. Let outward nature teach you. Oh, how a root will engineer and find the sustenance that it needs! How it will spread over the rock, and plunge down into the precipice, and go in search of the stream that is running afar off! Even the blind root finds its way without reason, and by a mere instinct of appetite, under ground; and let it rebuke you.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

Why Christians Prosper.

As a rule God's people have a plenty; they have food for their tables and raiment for their backs. This is not brought about by ministering ravens, or multiplying loaves and fishes, or any other miraculous manifestation, but in accordance with the laws of his kingdom. The precepts of His Word enjoin industry, economy, honesty, temperance, perseverance and the other virtues which are rewarded with success. They may not be rich, as the world measures wealth, but they have contentment, which is far better, and to which the men of "much goods" and "many barns" are strangers.—United Presbyterian

COLLEGE FIGURES.

Dartmouth's new freshman class has 196 members.

Mount Holyoke college began its new year with 562 students.

Radcliffe now offers 130 courses for women, an increase of 15 over last year.

Harvard has 394 instructors; Yale 245; Pennsylvania, 245; Michigan, 167 and Chicago, 175.

During the last six years the value of the property of 19 leading colleges has increased 37 per cent.

In answer to an inquiry the authorities of Cornell university have just calculated that a good student could take all the courses which were offered when he was a freshman in just 110 years. This is a rather forcible suggestion that as universities are now conducted the student cannot hope to know it all.

The college graduates of the country make a pretty good part of the population, and Harvard takes the lead with a total of 22,287 graduates. Yale has sent out into the world 18,450 men and Columbia 15,981. Princeton has graduated 7,500 students; Dartmouth, 8,504; Brown, 4,900; Bowdoin, 4,619; Amherst 4,000, and Washington university, 3,436.

A whistle that can be heard 40 miles has just been invented. It consists of three whistles made of bronze and arranged between two disks of steel. The whistles are tuned in chord, and they harmonize as accurately as a well-tuned piano. The sound emitted is quite soft and low.

Have You Heard Of It?

You may have heard about SCOTT'S EMULSION and have a vague notion that it is cod-liver oil with its bad taste and smell and all its other repulsive features. It is cod-liver oil, the purest and the best in the world, but made so palatable that almost everybody can take it. Nearly all children like it and ask for more.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

looks like cream; it nourishes the wasted body of the baby, child or adult better than cream or any other food in existence. It bears about the same relation to other emulsions that cream does to milk. If you have had any experience with other so-called "just as good" preparations, you will find that this is a fact.

The hypophosphites that are combined with the cod-liver oil give additional value to it because they tone up the nervous system and impart strength to the whole body.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remidies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at A. C. WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

Women are now employed as sign painters in Berlin.

Mrs. Bertie Smith, postmistress at Circle City, Alaska, is the only woman occupying such a position in the territory.

It costs a girl $400 to go to Vassar, $400 to go to Smith, $420 for a year at Wellesley, and between $450 and $750 to spend a year at Radcliffe.

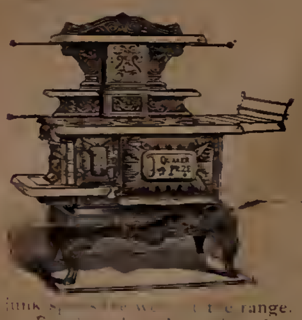
THE HIGHEST PRAISE

That can be said about a Range is that it is satisfactory. Now that fits the QUAKER GRAND RANGE exactly, for this Range satisfies the most particular housekeeper. It roasts her meats and bakes her pies and puddings in such a manner as to display her cooking abilities to the best advantage. She gets credit for being bright and clever all round.



Pay $5 down and $1 per week

There's no economy in using an old warped range that burns out two hods of coal every day, when you can have the best on earth for the trouble of ordering it, which will do your work on one hod each day.

You can pay $27.00 for the plainer Quakers, or pay $35.00 or $40.00 or $45.00 for the GRAND.

Ever hear of scrap iron or old junk? Lots of ranges are cast from a mixture of that stuff with new iron, and the junk [illegible] the range. Be careful.

Ever hear about the retailer of ready-made clothing who always went to a good tailor for his own clothes instead of selecting from his own stock? Be careful.

Here's the point. Out of seven married workers for this firm five of them warm their cozy kitchens with the Quaker Range. With complete inside knowledge we use the make with most merit in it.

Mrs. A. H. Morse left on Monday for Boston, where she will spend a day or two with Prof. and Mrs. L. L. Burrington at the Bellevue. On Thursday she will leave with a Raymond party for California, taking the "Sunset" route, through New Orleans. She will stay for a time at a hotel at Coronado Beach, going later to San Diego, where she will remain for the season. Incidentally, she will take a number of side trips through California, returning here some time in June. She can hardly fail to enjoy herself in the "sunny land."

The farm house owned by Alexander Poor, at South Franklin, was burned to the ground at 3.30 Sunday morning, after all the furniture, excepting a piano, had been removed. The fire started at 3 o'clock and a messenger came to town for the purpose of ringing in an alarm, and as water facilities were lacking the firemen did not put a stream on the fire. The barn, which was some distance from the house, was not burned. The fire is stated to have been caused by an overheated stove in the kitchen. The loss on the house and piano will reach $2,500, both being partially covered by insurance.

The various boards of officials determined at the beginning of the fiscal year to keep the expenditures entirely within the appropriations if that were a possibility. To a large degree they have succeeded. The town report will show that the school committee have closed the fiscal town year with expenses inside the appropriation and the credits which are by law given to the school fund. The poor department slightly overrun, although the amount of credits not paid in if added would perhaps balance the account. The fire department about even, with perhaps some bills for a small amount unpaid. With no special expenses, like a big snow, the road department will come out about even, with possibly a small sum to its credit.

"Under the Dome," Lincoln J. Carter's sensational comedy drama, will be the attraction at the Opera house Thursday, Jan. 18. It is a naval play, the main incidents of which were suggested by the attempted seizure of the Samoan Islands by the German government in 1888 and 1889. One scene showing the passage at night of a ferry boat from Jersey City to New York is absolutely perfect in detail. When the boat first leaves the slip in Jersey City the hugh black outlines of the buildings on the opposite shore and their thousands of dimly glowing lights can just barely be seen. As the boat pushes out into the stream and comes closer to the landing the outlines of the buildings assume more and more definite shape and the lights of the city grow brighter and larger until the clanking of the iron gates and the lock wheel announce the arrival. The effect is as if the audience had been carried in the boat. Another pretentious scenic effect is the representation of that awful calamity in the harbor of Apia, Samoa, which cost the lives of 144 brave seamen and which wrecked the vessels. As this is Manager Partridge's annual benefit, it will be well to secure your seats in advance. Tickets on sale Wednesday, Jan. 10. Prices 25, 35, 50 and 75 cents.

Showers of Blessing.

The initial "week of prayer" meeting at the Congregational church last evening was well attended, and the interest all that could be desired. Pastor and people are especially hopeful for a genuine outpouring of the spirit.

At the Baptist church the attendance was very gratifying, the sermon by Rev. A. H. Davis was interesting and profitable. The preaching for this evening will be done by Rev. G. H. Horton of Blackstone and what he says will be well worth hearing. Come and aid in the work.

Revival services at the Methodist church still continue, with ever increasing interest. Last night was indeed a Pentecostal service. The meeting closed with shouts of triumph and the hallelujahs of the redeemed. There will be services every night this week, including Saturday. A program of special interest is prepared for these services. This is to be the best week thus far. There will be solos, duets, etc., and the plain, simple gospel of Jesus, which is "the power of God unto salvation to all who believe." Be sure and come to the meeting tonight. Sermon by the pastor, Rev. S. A. Cook, from the parable of the prodigal son. Singing by quartet. Come to the banquet of the Lord.

A Pleasing Affair.

The following officers of Post 60, G. A. R., were installed by Col. George W. Nason last evening, that gentleman having the honor of officiating here for the sixteenth time: Com., Joseph H. Bird; S. V. C., William H. Jackson; J. V. C., Henry Y. Towne; adj., Alfred C. Dana; chap., Silas E. Fales; sur., George King, M. D.; Q. M., Edwin A. Mason; O. of D., David W. Corson; O. of G., Almon Sanborn; S. M., Walter M. Fisher; Q. M. S., William H. Lowell.

The following officers of Franklin W. C. were installed by Past Dept. President Mrs. Augusta A. Wales as follows: Pres., Mrs. Hattie Turner; S. V. P., Mrs. Lena Holbrook; J. V. P., Mrs. Miriam A. Sleeper; sec., Mrs. Narcissa W. Lincoln; treas., Mrs. Hannah Corson; chap., Mrs. Rosella Newcomb; cond., Mrs. Ella Thomas; guard, Mrs. Alice Fisher; asst. cond., Mrs. Clara Crafts; asst. guard, Mrs. Ellen Sanborn; color bearers—No. 1, Mrs. Annabelle Woodward; No. 2, Mrs. Minnie Corson; No. 3, Miss Alice Brock; No. 4, Mrs. Margaret Geb.

After installation a social time was enjoyed, remarks being made by Comrades Thomas Sherman of Walpole, Capt. James H Griggs and Col. George Nason of Boston. In behalf of the W. R. C. Mrs. Augusta Wales also spoke very fittingly. Col. Nason speaking in a reminiscent mood said in part: Sixty years ago, (in 1840) in this town, I joined a military company known as the Harrison Guards, composed of boys from five to ten years of age. It was during the exciting times of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too," the memorable first Harrison campaign. Horace S. DeWitt was captain, Charles H. Bemis, William E. Nason and Lewis Whittaker were drummers, George W. Nason, Jr., color bearer, and all the other members carried flags as well as little wooden guns. The Whig party had their log cabin erected near the store of our late comrade, Turner, or where the steps lead down to the railroad station.

There was then only one church in Franklin and only thirteen houses in a mile circle now occupied by this prosperous town. It was from the teachings of my good mother and the patriotic lesson at the log cabin which kindled the fire of patriotism in my heart and prompted me to be the first volunteer from this, my native, town, on the fifteenth of April, 1861, for the defence of our glorious flag and country. Since my first military experience our country, as well as Franklin, has made great strides. We have extended our possessions west to the Pacific, acquired Alaska, that immense territory between the Pacific and Artic oceans, and during the last year have extended our possessions to the other side of the world, which I hope will prove for the best interests of all concerned.

Dean 20, Alumni 5.

There was a good sized audience present at the opening of the basketball season at Dean gymnasium on Saturday evening, when Dean played a team composed of members of the alumni. There was brilliant playing on both sides, but it must be said that the Dean boys showed their superiority at the start and maintained it throughout, their skillful work being duly recognized and receiving hearty applause from the auditors at various stages. The teams were made up as follows:

Dean—Forwards, Marshall and Thompson; center, Gallison and Towels; guards, Bucknam and Jenness.

Alumni—Forwards, Wyckoff and S. Fiske; centers, Foster and Cosseboom; guards, Moors and Mason.

The Dean players were up and doing every minute while the game was on and after the twenty-minute halves the score stood: Dean 20, alumni 5. Goals from field—Jenness 3, Marshall 4, Thompson 2, Wyckoff 1, Moors 1. Goals from fouls—Marshall 1, Thompson 1, Fiske 1. For Dean, the goal throwing of Marshall and Jenness was remarkably fine, while for the alumni Wyckoff, Moors and Fiske showed up well.

Woonsocket Opera House.

"Way Down East," the great metropolitan success, will be presented on Thursday and Friday evenings, Jan. 11 and 12. It will be given with a great cast, magnificent scenery, all of the marvelous effects, including the great snow scene, will introduce a great quartet of singers and depict a vivid story of true New England life. Its success is largely due to two great lessons it teaches, to the pure and wholesome atmosphere that pervades it, to the rollicking, homely humor with which it bubbles, and in fact to a grand ensemble that makes it one beautiful, refreshing mirror of nature. "Way Down East" is repeating its metropolitan success throughout the country and will positively have only this engagement in Woonsocket during the present season. Seats now on sale.

Pushing the Work.

Work on the power house and car barn which is in process of construction at Unionville, began again Thursday morning, when the girders for the roof arrived. Up to this time there has been no work on the building since about Thanksgiving time, owing to the delay in the arrival of the material for the barn. These girders, which came Thursday, were the principal things delayed.

The girders are nineteen in number, and are fifty feet in length. They weigh two tons each and are thus quite formidable things to handle. The workmen put two of them in position Thursday and carted some of the rest to the place of building. It is the intention to continue the building by putting the roof on over these girders and then to push the work as fast as possible, so that the cars may be stored in it and the power be used.

It is intended that the new power house will not only supply the motive power for the cars on the Franklin and Milford lines, but also on all the lines of Woonsocket. This will do away with the power station now used in No. 2 electric light station and save quite an item of expense for the company. The electricity will be carried over the different lines by feed wires to any reasonable distance.

In addition to the power house, there will be a car barn, and the cars of that line will be stored in that barn nights and other times when they are not in use. There are six new vestibuled cars coming the middle of this month, and these will probably be taken to this new barn as soon as it is ready for their reception.

At present the Walworth company, plumbers, of Boston, is piping the building for steam heat, and Monday the carpenters went back to work on it after some little time. There is no knowing when the building will be finished, but there are no expected delays at present, and prospects are good for an early completion of the building.

Ready for the Wrestle.

The Ruggles rotary plow which the Milford, Attleboro and Woonsocket street railway has been expecting for some time, has come. The plow was made by the Peckham Motor Truck and Wheel Co. of New York, and is something entirely novel in this town. Instead of having a nose in front to divide the snow and throw it to one side, there are fans, constituting a sort of auger, which bores its way into the snow, picks it up and throws it through a funnel, which may be pointed in any direction wished. These fans or blades come round and just miss the rails, and as they are ahead of the wheels, and as they do not have to be pushed through the snow, it is almost impossible to stall the plow, unless the motors blow out.

The plow cannot be used to any advantage in the streets of the town, as the snow would be thrown all over the sidewalks, buildings and the passersby, but in the open parts of the line it is one of the greatest improvements ever introduced here. It is provided with four motors and eight wheels, so that it is a very powerful and effective annihilator of snow drifts. The rotary snow plow was first used on the Rocky Mountain steam roads and proved a great investment for the companies owning them. For steam roads these plows cost $12,000 to $15,000, and for street railways about half that price, it is said.

There is so little question as to the value of fraternal organizations in these days that their existence and increase are taken as a matter of course. As will be noticed by reference to the opinions of leaders in fraternal work, social and beneficiary features are most frequently referred to as, indicating the peculiar lines along which these orders are most helpful. It is not our intention at this time to enter into the financial detail as shown by the records of the different financial departments of the organizations, although that would be most interesting as a subject of comment. We do wish, however, to express our belief in the general principle that it is the duty of every man with relatives dependent upon him to protect them so far as able by some form of life insurance. Well regulated and carefully managed fraternal orders furnish a low priced and safe protection for those who can afford to appropriate only moderate amount for such a purpose.—Somerville (Mass.) Citizen.

Here is a simple explanation of the "new century" matter from an exchange: Suppose a man owes another $20 and pays it a penny at a time. He has paid 100 cents, and then he has, plainly enough, $1 paid up. But he does not begin paying his second dollar until he has deposited his 101st cent, and he has not begun paying his 20th dollar until he has given his creditor the 1901st cent. In the same way consider the centuries, for not until the close of day, Dec. 31st, 1900, have the 1900 years been fulfilled. Therefore the 20th century must begin Jan. 1st, 1901.

Jonah.

Some people think the book of Jonah ought not to have been put into the Bible, being subject to ridicule. But I can draw something from John which I think is profitable for correction. Jonah was told to go to Nineveh and preach to that wicked city. He went to the shore, strolled up and down and found a ship bound for Tarsus. He went aboard and paid his fare, being not disposed to steal a ride or cheat the ship out of its due, and hard fare he found, too. In this he was worthy of imitating.

A tempestuous sea arose, his sailors became alarmed, and when that happens you may look out for breakers. They searched for the cause and found the trouble to be with Jonah. He became convinced he was the guilty one and was willing to make all the restitution possible, even to being thrown overboard. As there is a miracle in this book, we may suppose that there was a big fish near this boat, with his head, we may say, two feet under water.

Over he went, and the fish took him down to the bottom of the sea. With the weeds about his head his mind must have been severely exercised. He prayed to God as a backslider would, in penitence. We may suppose one petition in his prayer may have been like this: "Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation and uphold me with Thy free spirit, then will I teach transgressors thy ways and sinners shall be converted unto Thee." Some people think they cannot always find a place to pray. Jonah found a place inside of a fish. Three days and three nights—by this time he must have thought decomposition would set in.

His prayer was heard, he found himself on dry ground. He arose and went to Ninevah, obeying his Master's call. What may we suppose the style of his preaching was, for he brought wicked Ninevah on its knees. Now, if some of our modern preachers would put more dynamite into their ministrations of the gospel and let King James' version alone they might see better results of their preaching, even to those similar to Jonah, and when they visit a dying parishioner they will not find a door shut against them.

"There is only one thing I'm sorry for," said Fred Holtzhauser, one of Dewey's returned gunners, "and that is that I ever shipped under an assumed name. I was out five years on the San Francisco and the Olympia, and after I get my Manila bay medal, I'm going to have my right name substituted on the records of the navy department." "What made you ship under a false name?" he was asked. "I was quite a boy when I shipped," he replied. "Whenever anyone asked me my name after I got away from home, it was so long and unusual that people made me spell it out for them three or four times, and it annoyed me and them. Then I made up my mind to take another, a short and American name, which I did. I hear that quite a lot of fellows are having their proper names substituted on the record of the navy department."

A European scientist announces that if he applies an electric battery to the brain of a man in the proper fashion that man will become twice as smart as before. The scientist claims to have used the idea upon small schoolboys. The report says he took ten pupils and sat five of them in a species of electrocution chair. The other five he sat on ordinary wooden benches. Electrified youngsters, he said, learned the multiplication table twice as fast as those who were not insulated. He does not explain exactly why this happened, but the reader is left to infer that the electric current jabbed the ideas into the young brains; in other words, made the brain conductors of ideas instead of misconductors. We may yet see every school in the land provided with the new idea injector. Then the right idea may be implanted.

The rapid exhaustion of the timber supplies of this country has induced a large number of land owners to plant trees for profit, just as they would any other crop. The disappearance of good oak since that wood became so fashionable for finishings, furniture and other purposes suggests the planting of acorns wherever the land is adapted to the purpose and is not wanted for a more immediate crop. Oak trees, where the land is not too valuable, promise to yield a good return on the investment.

A financial authority states that there are 979 savings banks in the United States, having depositors to the number of 5,385,000 and total deposits amounting to $2,065,000,000. Great Britain's savings banks have on deposit $780,000,000; France's, $652,000,000; Russia's, $198,000,000; Italy's, $89,000,000. Thus it is seen that the savings banks of the United States exceed the combined deposits of Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy by $366,000,000.

The largest state building in the United States is the capitol of Texas. It is constructed of red granite, is in the form of a Greek cross, with a central dome 311 feet high. It cost about $3,500,000, and 3,000,000 acres of public land paid for it. This the contractors accepted instead of cash.

The largest tree in the United States, it is said, stands near Bear creek, on the north fork of the Tule river, in California. It measures 140 feet in circumference. The giant redwood tree in Nevada is 119 feet in circumference.

AMERICAN WHEELS ABROAD.

Two-thirds of our bicycles are sent to countries which make a specialty of manufacturing.

American wheels are now ridden in all parts of the world, from the jungles of Africa to the wilds of Central America.

Since Cuba has become free we have shipped to it eight times as many bicycles as formerly. Porto Rico and the Hawaiian islands are good customers, though no direct exportation to the Philippines is thus far reported.

Four million dollars' worth of American bicycles were sold to European countries during the last fiscal year, and more than twice as many were shipped to France, despite her skilled workmen and ingenuity, as were exported to that country during the preceding year.

Our largest customer is Great Britain, which took nearly $2,000,000 worth of American bicycles last year; Germany coming next, and Canada, British Australia, the Netherlands, Denmark, British Africa, British East Indies, Japan, China, Dutch East Indies and Africa following in the order of the amount of their purchases.

Don't busy yourself with unimportant things.

It is easier to do right than it is to get credit for it.

A girl's idea of an eligible man is one who wants to get married.

The difference between love and dyspepsia is merely a matter of years.

No one ever heard of appendicitis resulting from a diet of sour grapes.

A few temptations beset the industrious, but all temptations assail the idle.

Results impress us more when we are ignorant of the process by which they are attained.

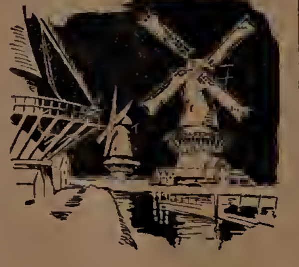
About the time a man's argument is exhausted he begins to lose interest in the subject.

A man may care but little for social recognition, but he draws the line at being cut by a barber.

If the better half was allowed to make all the bets the other half would probably come out ahead of the game.

The only difference between speculation and peculation is a little crookedness. The fact that there is a little crookedness about the letter "s" explains this.

THE WIND MILLS OF HOLLAND



Are known to all the world.

They are both picturesque and useful, but useful as they are, they could not compete with Chase & Sanborn's Coffee Mill. If they were obliged to depend on wind mills, many of their customers would be kept on short allowance, for they turn out between forty and fifty thousand pounds of coffee a day, a feat which is quite beyond wind mill power.

Stop and think what this enormous amount of coffee means, especially if you remember how famously high grade it is.

Every bean is selected and even the plantations on which it is raised are famous for the perfection of their products.

Your grocer will deliver Chase & Sanborn's Seal Brand Java and Mocha in one and two-pound tin cans—or any of the other high grade coffees in parchment lined imported bags—and you can be sure there is none better.

A WORD WITH YOU.

You no doubt already know that iron and steel have advanced more than 60 per cent. within the last few months. Wagons, Plows and Machine Bolts have advanced a very large per centage. The output of the manufacturers, of which I am acting as agent, will cost at least one-half million dollars more in 1900 than the present year. This is a conspicuous reason why farmers should buy machines this year and not put it off until next.

GIRDLED WITH FIRE.

"WELL, boys, I guess this is worth coming to see!"

Joe Elton's two cousins, Bob and Harry Barlow, quite agreed with him; and, indeed, the part of the "Western Ghauts" in which their party had settled for a week was as fine a piece of mountain scenery as could be found anywhere on the west coast of India, and that is saying quite as much for them as it is possible to say, for nowhere is there finer scenery than there.

It was true that in December they could hardly expect to see the Ghauts at their best. The parching heat of the "dry season" had already destroyed all the good effects of the summer rains. The torrent beds that cleft the mighty hills in every direction were dry and dusty. The spreading trees had lost their rich August green and the tall grass that clothed the higher slopes was as yellow as a canary.

But, despite all this, great, steep ridges that seemed to go up into the very sky, the stately palms, the deep, shadowy gorges, the tangled thickets and tremendous precipices, the rocky gullies through which a few tiny streams still trickled, with the glorious tropical sunshine and mountain breeze over all, made as fine a playground as three active American boys could desire.

"Here's a first-rate place for lunch," said Joe, sitting down in the shade of a big moss-grown rock, covered with ferns for which any collector would have paid high.

"Guess I shan't be sorry to put down this lunch bag. It's almost as heavy as a flour sack," observed Bob Barlow, as he stretched himself on the soft grass with a sigh of satisfaction.

"You'd sooner carry the lunch inside than out, wouldn't you, Bob?" suggested his brother Harry, with a broad grin.

"He wouldn't be far wrong if he did," cried Joe Elton, settling his back snugly against a palm tree and getting out his jackknife. "They may talk about sea air as much as they like, but a tramp over the hills is the best thing to give one a big appetite. I'm as hungry as ever I can be, I know that!"

In fact, such a morning's work as they had had might well have made anyone feel hungry. Ever since eight o'clock they had been scrambling up and down the hills, leaping water courses, tearing through thickets, sliding down slippery inclines, swinging themselves from bough to bough of the giant trees as nimbly as the monkeys who grimaced and chattered at them overhead; and in every way doing their best to make themselves as hot and tired and ragged as possible, but still just as eager and excited as ever, and firmly convinced that they were enjoying themselves enormously.

"I think those fellows would be mighty glad to join us," remarked Bob, with a chuckle, as he washed down a huge mouthful of cold chicken with a brimming glass of lemonade.

"Those fellows" were a gang of tall, gaunt, half-clad, wild-looking Mahrattas, who were picking and shoveling away with might and main on the railway track that ran along the very edge of a tremendous precipice on the other side of the valley.

"Not much, I reckon," answered Joe, with an air of superior information. "I've heard father say that if you were to go past where one of these Hindu fellows was cooking his dinner and your shadow was to fall on the food he'd chuck it all away, even if it was the only food he'd got."

"First time I ever knew that a shadow could do anything on its own account," grinned Harry. "It's like the story of the man with the fast-trotting horse who drove into New York at such a pace that his shadow came up five minutes after to ask which way he'd gone."

The meal was nearly over and the boys were just beginning to think what they should do next, when the question was settled for them in a very unexpected way.

Joe Elton, after sniffing the air doubtfully three or four times, called out suddenly:

"Say, boys, don't you smell something burning?"

There was no need of any answer, for at that very moment a gust of wind whirled right up into their faces a hot blast of thick, stifling smoke.

All three sprang to their feet at once, and, looking downward, beheld a sight which literally paralyzed them for a moment.

Through the forest of tall, yellow grass that clothed the whole hillside below them a long line of flame was running like summer lightning. Far to the right and far to the left, as if spreading itself to hem them in, that deadly line extended.

Higher and higher every moment rose the sea of fire straight up toward the spot where they stood, and the roar of the flames, the cracking and snapping of the lighted twigs, the hiss and crackle of burning leaves, the screams of the frightened birds as they fled before the fiery tempest, made a maddening din.

Upward ran the three boys as fast as their feet could carry them; but closer and closer behind them came the hot breath of the destroyer and the hideous uproar that accompanied his march. Still, however, they struggled on, with gasping lungs and quivering lips and limbs strained to the utmost; for they knew that the grass on the higher slopes was smaller and thinner, and, moreover, there was a chance of finding shelter in one of the rocky clefts that seamed the upper face of the mountain upon which the fire could have no power.

Suddenly Joe Elton—who was a little in advance of the other two and doing his best to guide them straight—stopped short, with a cry of horror.

The grass above them was on fire, too!

Under the shadow of the rolling smoke the imperiled trio looked at each other in silent dismay. But before anyone could speak Bob Barlow stumbled, dislodging an enormous stone, which went bounding down the slope and vanished into the flame-tinged cloud below.

"Hurrah!" cried Joe. "There's a chance for us yet. Come, boys; there are plenty of stones around. Roll 'em down on to the fire, and mind you roll them all dead straight in the same line."

Down went a second rock as he spoke, crushing the still unkindled grass flat to the earth and tearing its way through the burning mass beyond like a plowshare through light soil. Another and another followed, each widening a little more the narrow gap in the blazing circle that hemmed them in.

"Now, boys," shouted Joe, as the fire neared them, "let's make a break through that gap. Come along!"

All that followed was like an ugly dream. They were dimly conscious of plunging through lapping flames and flying sparks, their pulses throbbing, their eyes aching, a rushing, roaring sound in their ears and the whole earth and sky seeming red-hot all around them.

Then suddenly the fiery sea vanished, and they were standing, spent and gasping, with scorched feet and blistered faces, upon the clear ground beyond, while from the opposite slope came echoing the hearty cheer of their friends from the hotel, who, alarmed at the sight of the fire, had sallied forth in search of them.—Golden Days.

That life is long which answers life's great end.—Young.

Good nature is the beauty of the mind.—Hanway.

Malice and hatred are very fretting, and apt to make our minds sore and uneasy.—Tillottson.

A word unspoken is like the sword in the scabbard, thine; if vented, thy sword is in another's hand.—Quarles.

Agriculture for an honorable and high-minded man is the best of all occupations or arts by which men procure the means of living.—Xenophon.

Mohammed, hearing one of his soldiers say: "I'll turn my camel loose and trust him to God," said to him: "Tie your camel, and then trust him to God."

Poverty is hard, but debt is horrible. A man might as well have a smoky house and a scolding wife, which are said to be the two worst evils of our life.—Spurgeon.

"The last word" is the most dangerous of infernal machines, and the husband and wife should no more fight to get it than they would struggle for the possession of a lighted bombshell.—Douglas Jerrold.

He that marries is like the doge who was married to the Adriatic. He knows not what there is in that which he marries; mayhap treasures and pearls, mayhap monsters and tempests await him.—H. Heine.

Proper self-estimation is needful for due regulation of our efforts in relation to their ends. Underestimation of self involves the letting slip of advantages that might have been gained. Overestimation of self prompts attempts which fail from want of due capacity. In either case there is an average of evil experienced—benefit missed or effort thrown away.—Herbert Spencer.

An Aversion.

I always undertake to be a patient, prudent man,
And let the story teller do the very best he can,
Provided in a straight and proper path he will persist,
And not go 'round the corners in a labyrinthian twist;
I'll tolerate his gossip, whether tragic or absurd,
Save "what he heard somebody heard somebody say he heard."

I'll let him tell of interviews, and speak no word of blame,
With the man who, "for good reasons," will not give the world his name,
But there I draw the line. No moral suasion can command
My deference to a rumor which comes more than second-hand;
Since families and nations to their worst mistakes are stirred
By "what he heard somebody heard somebody say he heard."
—Washington Star

RECORD OF THE PAST

No Stronger Evidence Can Be Had.

Look well to their record. What they have done many times in years gone by, is the best guarantee of future results. Anyone with a bad back; any reader suffering from urinary troubles, from any kidney ills, will find in the following evidence proof that relief and cure is near at hand:

Mr. Patrick O. Dwyer, mason, of 62 White street, New Haven, Conn, says: "In 1896 when Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of backache which always bothered me when I caught cold, which hurt me when I stooped, or straightened after stooping, which refused to disappear under treatment of different medicines, I was only too pleased to let the people of New Haven know the fact through our newspapers. Three years from that date, or in the month of May, 1899, I just as ardently recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I did when they effected the cure mentioned above. My advice to anyone suffering from kidney complaint is, call at a drug store, procure Doan's Kidney Pills, take them as directed, and you will be surprised at the results."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name—

THE LIGHT OF FAITH.

Cheerfulness Is a Duty and May Be Cultivated—Gloom and Despondency Are Contagious.

If there were to be a new beatitude, it might well read: "Blessed are the cheerful;" for to them is given the gift of diffusing hope and courage and joy. It is not too much to say that they are not only light but life bringers; for courage and joy prolong life, as discouragement and despair shorten it. Plants dwindle and die without the sun, and men grow old and perish without the warmth and cheer of hope and courage. If these qualities were purely temperamental, those who lacked them could not hope to possess them; but cheerfulness is not only inheritable, it may be cultivated. A cheerful face is the outward and visible sign of an inward condition, and that condition may be secured by anyone who is willing to pay the price of effort and steady purpose which the acquisition of any virtue exacts. It is as easy to cultivate cheerfulness as to cultivate patience or good temper or courtesy. These qualities society demands of every man, and if nature has not bestowed them upon him, society insists that he shall cultivate them. The bad-tempered and discourteous person finds himself living in an ever-widening zone of silence and solitude; people do not care for his society, and are eager to give him exclusive enjoyment of it. In like manner, society ought to demand cheerfulness of all its members; the man who spreads depression and breeds discouragement ought to be ostracized, because he strikes at the very heart of the social life. Depression and despair are preeminently unsocial vices; and in so far as they are diffused they sap social courage and drain the fountains of social happiness.

The depressed man, whose spirit kills joy and makes gloom contagious, owes it to his fellows to keep his despair to himself, as a man suffering from a contagious disease owes it to society to keep his fellows free from danger. This often involves inconveniences and hardship, but inconveniences and hardship must be borne when the good of society is at stake. Sorrow longs for companionship, and ought never to be denied it; but sorrow and the pessimistic temper have nothing in common. Some of the most beautiful examples of cheerfulness which society has known have been furnished by those whose sorrows were more than their joys. Men need hope and courage for the power of growth and the peace of spirit which these noble qualities bring with them; and cheerfulness is, therefore, a duty which every man owes to his fellows. For cheerfulness and despondency are alike contagious. A discouraged leader can chill the bravest army ever put in the field; a serene, buoyant leader can put resolution into cowards. The roots of cheerfulness are in faith; the hope which shines on the faces of some men and women is the reflection of the light which shines in the face of God.—N. Y. Outlook.

KEEP YOUR BLOOD CLEAN

A bedbug thrives best on a blood diet, but it can live long on air. George O. Smith, a Brooklyn entomologist, confined one in a tin box, where it was forgotten for six months. When he opened the box the bug seemed dried up and lifeless; but when he put it on the back of his hand it at once began to draw blood.

Niagara falls is to be illuminated by electricity during the coming Buffalo exposition. The idea is to erect a series of tall poles on both the American and Canadian sides of the river. On top of them will be placed search lights, and the colors of the lights which are thrown on the falls will be constantly changed. Arc lights will also be placed in the Cave of the Winds, which will give to the water which falls in front of it a weird phosphorescent color. The current is to be obtained from the falls itself.

CELERY KING
NATURE'S CURE

A Young Girl's Experience.

My daughter's nerves were terribly out of order. She was thin and weak; the least noise startled her, and she was wakeful at night. Before she had taken one package of Celery King the change in her was so great that she could hardly be taken for the same girl. She is rapidly growing well and strong, her complexion is perfect, and she sleeps well every night.—Mrs. Lucy McNutt, Brush Valley, Pa.

Brussels, which is fond of being called "Little Paris," is almost two towns in one, for side by side with the medieval portion of the city are the splendid modern streets, which recall nothing so much as those of the French capital. The law courts, on the eminence in the center of the city, are exceptionally beautiful, and are built of white and dazzling stone.

A curious thing has happened on the western shores of Mull and Iona. Thousands of apple seeds have taken root along the highwater mark of the spring tides, where the apples from the wrecked Dominion liner Labrador were strewn in much profusion. The stems are already from two to five inches high, and the plants are healthy and vigorous. The crofters are transplanting the strongest roots to their gardens.

Journalism in Greenland is represented by a single paper, conducted by a certain Mr. Moeller. This energetic gentleman performs single-handed the functions of editor, printer and distributor, and the entire paper is the product of his own pen. He has set up a primitive printing establishment at Godthaab, and twice a month he performs a long journey on skates through the country to dispose of his journal. Originally nothing more than a collection of crude illustrations, Mr. Moeller gradually introduced into the pages of his paper first words, then sentences, and finally regular articles on the affairs of the day. In fact, he may be said to have actually taught his subjects to read.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours, a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. If it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble, too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

HAVE BECOME WILD PESTS.

Pigs. Pigs were put ashore on many islands—such as Bermuda, the Galapagos and islands along the southern coast—as food for shipwrecked sailors. In every case they have multiplied and become wild. Capt. Cook put some ashore on New Zealand, where they are now shot as game.

Goats.—St. Helena, a mountainous island of small extent, 2,700 feet high, was heavily wooded at its discovery. To-day it is a rocky desert, owing to the introduction of goats by the Portuguese in 1513. When the goats ate off the underbrush rain washed away the soil and the big trees tumbled.

Horses.—In 1897 Nevada passed a law permitting the killing of wild horses as nuisances. In Washington they are cut up to bait traps. Most of the wild horses on the continent are descended from a few loosed by Cortez in Mexico. In Australia hunters shoot wild horses, which eat grass needed by sheep and cattle.

Cats.—Cats have made a home on Cat island, one of the Kergueleus, where they are so wild that it is impossible to tame them. Their progenitors escaped from whaling vessels. They were put ashore on Sable island, off Nova Scotia, to kill the rabbits that had become a pest. Now the rabbits are gone and the cats are worse.

Rabbits. Rabbits are the worst of all animal scourges in Australia and New Zealand. They are poisoned, killed for their skins, for their meat; but still they multiply. Rabbit-proof fences have been devised to thwart them, but they seem to do pretty well. Cats alone can kill them off; but then cats become a pest also. Since 1873 New Zealand has shipped more than 200,000,000 rabbit skins.

The last car from Woonsocket was stalled by the ice last evening this side of Unionville, and about twenty "camped" in the car till six o'clock this morning—a rather unpleasant experience.

In spite of Prof. Burrington's opposition to Speaker Myers the latter made him chairman of the committee on education and also continued him on the committee on parishes and religious societies.

The Congregational Sabbath school has added seventy-five volumes to its library. One hundred and ten persons received roll of honor badges last Sunday for regularity of attendance during the past quarter.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs Charles A. Robinson, at the home of her mother, Mrs. L. A. Harris, on Sunday. Mr. Harris was unfortunately confined to the house with an attack of scarlet fever at the same time. All are doing well

F A. Hartshorne received a fine present from his son, Fred, recently in the shape of a handsome meerschaum pipe, taken from the Maria Theresa, one of the Spanish vessels destroyed at Santiago. It must have belonged to an officer of high rank, as it is a valuable relic.

Look out for poor punctuation. A newspaper said: "Two young men from Leoti went with their girls to Tribune to attend the Teachers' institute, and as soon as they left, the girls got drunk." The comma belonged after the word girls.

Interest in the meetings at the Congregational church continues with increasing force, new faces being seen each evening. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Sneath, prepares himself very carefully for each service, and a spiritual uplift is manifest. The afternoon meetings have also proven very helpful.

To the suggestion of an editor that apples may be kept through the winter by wrapping each one in a piece of newspaper, a contemporary suggest that the newspaper must be those on which the subscription has been paid, otherwise dampness resulting from what is "dew" may cause the fruit to spoil.

Rev. Dr. Hodge proposes a series of discourses on the question, "Is Death the End?" He will speak of "The Answer of Nature," "The Answer of Man," "Identity in the Life Beyond," "Progress in the Immortal Life." These topics will be discussed at the vesper services at the Universalist church.

Investigation shows that the fire at Henry Poor's house, at South Franklin, was probably caused by mice. The loss was about $2,000 on the house, and nearly the same upon the furniture. The neighbors did noble service in assisting. Mr. Poor, who has been in feeble health for a number of years, died on Wednesday, the funeral occurring today. He was sixty-one years of age, a veteran, and received a pension.

A friend who is watching the Boer war very closely says that Gen. Joubert has said: "England is mighty, but God is almighty. If it be His will that we be annihilated, so be it." It doesn't look much like annihilation thus far. Again, the Boers have done one thing which shows good common sense in the eyes of prohibitionists. During the war the sale of intoxicating liquors is forbidden in the Transvaal.

Members from the two Rebekah lodges at Woonsocket and the West Medway lodge were present at the installation ceremonies held by Lady Franklin lodge Tuesday evening in Odd Fellows' hall. The occasion was a most enjoyable one and the visitors were entertained handsomely by the local members with a banquet, dancing, etc. The following officers were installed: N. G., Lizzie S. Cook; V. G., Bessie Clements; secretary, Harriet E Turner; treasurer, Sarah T. Razee; financial secretary, Addie W. Jewett, chaplain, Emma J. Clegg.

Franklin has paid its county tax of $2,738 to County Treasurer Smith. The total amount for the entire county is $160,000, divided thus: Canton, $3,857; Cohassett, $4938; Dedham, $7071; Dover, $880; Foxboro, $1714; Holbrook, $1338; Hyde Park, $8142; Medfield, $1261; Medway, $1201; Millis, $619; Milton, $17,285; Needham, $2833; Norfolk, $452; Norwood, $3238; Quincy, $15 880; Randolph, $2000; Westwood, $904; Weymouth, $6214; Wrentham, $1333; Brookline; $57,714; Braintree, $4142; Bellingham, $660; Avon, $738; Sharon, $1495; Stoughton, $2714; Walpole, $2071; Wellesley, $0500.

In these days of big fortunes there is a good deal said of large gifts, and surely no man is to be blamed simply because he has amassed large wealth. The methods of obtaining it is often open to question. The following from an exchange hits the nail on the head: "Rockefeller and other multi-millionaires every little while throw out a few hundred thousand dollars for some public and already wealthy institution and their names are published to the world as great benefactors. If they would stop grinding the poor by demanding monopolistic prices for their goods in order to pile up more millions, they would be benefactors indeed. It is base hypocrisy to needlessly raise the prices of the necessities of life at the expense of the struggling masses, and then give liberal instalments to public institutions."

Now is the time to get a good, ripe cold. Put all the heavy clothing you own right on. Do up your neck in swaddles of all kinds; heat up the house to eighty—and have a good cold the rest of the winter. It is ten to one that the mamma or papa, who sees with horror the family joy running off with his skates coatless and without his neckcloth, will have more cold and throat troubles than the careless boys. The fact that you feel cold is no sign that you will have a cold, for you may often take cold while you are quite warm. It is the body which is cold and which is most exposed to the weather that can best stand the sudden chills and draughts which bestow colds right and left among careful, well protected ones. Don't be reckless, but remember that colds are more often taken from too much clothing than from the lack of warmth.—Exchange.

The practice, which is altogether too common, of leaving lighted kerosene lamp burning in stores, especially under which families reside, is a very dangerous one. It puts human life and property in peril. It is not an uncommon thing for kerosene lamps to explode, or the blaze to shoot up out of the lamp chimney in such a way as to set fire to the woodwork or something else near by and cause serious results. Although there is no town bylaw against the practice, yet the law of reason should be in effect. If a light is to be left over night in places of business it should be an electric light, and not a kerosene lamp, or sooner or later sad results are likely to follow.

A Terrible Bereavement

Word was received here Wednesday morning that Alfred Whiting had just been killed while at work at the Broadway bridge in Roxbury. He was working upon the bridge with a number of men, and as he was in the act of driving a nail, and with his head down, he was struck by a train of empty cars which was backed down upon him. His skull was fractured, and he was taken to the emergency hospital in Boston, where he died in about a half an hour, never having regained consciousness. The funeral will be held on Saturday, at two o'clock, at the house; his pastor, Rev. Dr. Sneath officiating. Deceased was fifty years of age, and had been a member of the Congregational church for about thirty years. The widow is nearly prostrated with grief, and there are six children dependent upon her for support. Indeed, the stricken family have the deepest sympathy of everyone in their affliction.

Farmers' Club.

Tl [illegible] :lin Farmers' club met Monday [illegible], Jan. 8, with Dr. T. L. Martin [illegible] ct, "The Diseases of Cattle [illegible]." Dr. Martin said, in part, [illegible] een one of the worst diseases [illegible] yman to contend with, milk f[illegible] hich there had never been a [illegible] medy. It attacks the best c[illegible] most useful age and condition (just after calving), and has nearly always proved fatal. At first she is excited and restless, and soon after her steps are unsteady, and she lays down and cannot rise, growing weaker and weaker, then is unconscious till death.

Within the last two years a remedy has been discovered. The first cow to which he gave this remedy was perfectly unconscious when he was called, and in two days she was eating and practically well. Since that time he had given this remedy many times, and in all but one case it had been a success. In horses spinal meningitis is practically the same disease, and the same remedy is nearly a sure cure. Remarks and questions by many of the club made it very instructive.

After adjournment another hour was spent in social chat, lunch and hot coffee, making it a very enjoyable evening.

Revival Services.

Revival services at the Methodist church still continue with great interest. Several have been converted, and the Spirit of the Lord is working mightily among the people. The service tonight will be of social interest. There will be a short sermon by the pastor, S. A Cook. Subject, "The Almost Christian" Mrs. Chas. Stewart will sing. Come and help us by your attendance! There will also be service Saturday night.

Next week the services will be held in the new and beautifully furnished auditorium.

"O come, let us worship and bow down! let us kneel before the Lord our Maker." "Whosoever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely."

The modern redowa, which some one has aptly named the hobo dance, will be danced at the Masquerade.

Richardson's Market.

This week we have some fine poultry. Turkeys and chickens from 15 to 18 cents, fowls from 12 1 2 to 15, home made pork and sausage 12 cents. Budlong's famous pickles, horse radish for 10 to 15 cents, sweet pickles 20, mixed and plain pickles 10. We have something never before handled here, the famous Franco-American canned soups, all kinds; you have seen them advertised, but never tried them. They have no equal, just the thing when you have guests. All the vegetables and choice cuts of meats.

A Rich Treat.

A most enjoyable open meeting was held by the Alden club on Jan. 8. Owing to the illness of Mrs E. K. Ray Mrs. Wiggin presided There was a most interesting lecture on "Ainne Land and the Eclipse Expedition of 1896," by Mrs. Mabel Loomis Todd, wife of Prof. Todd of Amherst. Her charm as a speaker had preceded her, but none realized what a rare treat was in store for them, as scene after scene of this wonderful trip was brought vividly before them. The expedition was organized by Prof. Todd to observe the astronomical phenomena of the eclipse of 1896 in Northern Japan, and was made possible by the generous assistance of Arthur James and his father, Willis D. James, of New York, who put their beautiful yacht, "Coronet," at the service of science and sent it from New York to San Francisco, laden with the heavy and valuable instruments of research. Here the party of scientists and travelers embarked for their trip across the Pacific to Tokio, where the Japanese government, with warm cordiality, took possession of them and sent the expedition by special steamer to the northern part of the island of Yezo, to Isashi, the spot chosen from which to make their observations.

In the meantime the sight-seers of the party left at Tokio traveled through different parts of Japan, seeing many strange and beautiful sights. Finally, when Mrs. Todd found herself ready to rejoin the expedition, she found herself hundreds of miles away, with no direct way of communication. With a young Japanese companion she started on the long trip, her soul thrilled with longing for adventure and discovery, and with a great desire to learn all about the strange aborigines of Japan, called the Ainu, among whom no foreign woman had ever before traveled. Instead of the difficult trip she had pictured, fraught with exciting surprises and strange adventures, the Japanese government, hearing that one of the astronomical party had been left behind, immediately provided her with a special steamer to take her straightway to her destination, a favor not to be refused. Fortunately an Ainu was taken aboard by her permission, who, though he almost fell prostrate at first sight of the strange white woman, exclaiming again and again, "What is it? What is it?" was finally induced to tell many of the strange and interesting tales of his people. Mrs. Todd before her return was able to make a very valuable collection of Ainu things which she afterward presented to the Peabody institute at Salem.

All were thrilled with excitement as Mrs. Todd described the last few days of waiting for the eclipse, the preparations made, the enthusiastic interest of the Japanese officials, many having come hundreds of miles to this remote spot to see the strangers—and finally the weather. Alas! the weather; how it can fill the soul with despair! Beautiful days were succeeded by two of rain, then the final day came, calm and bright, and all were glad. It darkened suddenly, then cleared, darkened and cleared till within a few minutes of the exciting moment that all had looked forward to so long. Finally it cleared enough for one of the strangest, most awful, and most magnificent sights ever viewed by man, but not enough for a single perfectly clear picture to be taken by the patient, enthusiastic astronomer who had himself invented an electrical instrument by which his different telescopes could have taken 400 fine photographs in the two and one-half minutes while the eclipse lasted—if only the clouds had lifted. Such is the life of the astronomer, and for that $30,000 had been spent and 45,000 miles traversed.

The next meeting of the Alden club will be held on Jan. 22, and the lecturer will be Mrs. May Alden Ward, who will speak of the "Moral Problems of George Eliot's Novels." R

For Better Music.

Mrs. Lizzie Treen Hosmer, instructor, of music in our schools, has, during the past few months, been actively engaged in stirring up an interest in the appointment of a state director of music in the public schools of Massachusetts, and has secured many influential signers to her petition to this end. For twenty-seven years there has been in the state a supervisor of drawing, who has carried on a similar work concerning drawing that is now proposed for music, and the signers of the petition have realized the benefit to be derived and the need of something in this line. The petition is as follows:

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled:—The undersigned petitioners of Massachusetts respectfully represent that music is taught in all the public schools of all the cities, and in more than 80 per cent. of the towns in the Commonwealth; that said cities and towns are giving such instruction entirely independent of one another, and with varying and imperfect results. Wherefore, your petitioners pray for the enactment of such legislation as may be expedient to provide state supervision of the instruction of music in the public schools, either by the appointment of a state agent or director, as provided in the accompanying bill, or by any other method.

To this she has received the signatures of some of the most influential people of the state. The bill will be introduced by Prof. L. L. Burrington as follows:

Section 1, The Governor, with the advice and consent of the council, shall appoint a director of music, whose term of office shall commence the first day of October, 1900, and who shall hold office for the term of three years or until a successor is appointed, and thereafter every three years a director shall be appointed to hold office for the term of three years. The Governor may remove such director at pleasure and may appoint a director to serve for the unexpired term.

Section 2. Said director shall visit the several cities and towns for the purpose of inquiring into the manner of the instruction of music, of conferring with teachers and committees, of lecturing upon the subject of music, and in general of giving and receiving information, suggesting improvements and rendering aid in such instruction.

Section 3. Said director shall receive such compensation as the Governor and council may determine.

Manager Partridge's Benefit.

The Bridgeport Evening Post of Jan. 5 says, "A good-sized audience saw one of the best melo-dramas last evening that has been presented at Smith's theatre this season. The storm in Apia bay, Samoa, was applauded to the echo by the audience, causing the curtain to be lifted five times before the people were satisfied. The ferryboat scene, leaving the pier and arriving at Jersey City, was so real that some of the audience fancied they would have to get off the boat. There were numerous changes of costume and the scenery was entirely the company's."

Manager Partridge has secured this great company for his annual benefit, which takes place Jan. 18. This same play was seen here two years ago and was said to be the best ever seen in Morse Opera house. As many are inquiring when tickets can be secured it is certainly wise to get them early. Went on sale at Dana's Jan. 10. Prices 25, 35, 50 cents, and 75 for balcony.

Found Dead.

Joseph Sumner, of Foxboro, about sixty-five years of age, was found dead in Frank Woolford's barn this morning. He had been about there a couple of days, and last evening had been down toward Woonsocket with George Woolford, arriving home about 10.30. Both were intoxicated, and Woolford went to bed, leaving Sumner in the buggy, where he was found this morning. There are a few bruises about his head, but possibly not sufficient to cause death, alcoholism being most likely the cause. He was fairly well dressed, and had $12 in his pockets.

Grand Reopening.

Next Sunday will be a great day at the Methodist church. The extensive repairs, which have been going on for the last months, are now complete. The renovation has been so thorough that the building is now practically new on the inside. The work has been well done, and the church is now both comfortable and beautiful.

The services next Sunday will be evangelistic in character, and of special interest. The program is being carefully arranged, and a great day is expected. Special music will be furnished, at both morning and evening services, by the talented and inspiring soloist. Mrs. Charles Stewart.

Baptist Church Week of Prayer.

The meetings of the Week of Prayer at the Baptist church have been exceedingly interesting, and gaining in numbers and spirituality. The large vestry was not sufficient to hold the people, and they have overflowed into the small vestry.

The sermons by the different preachers have been of a marked evangelistic character, appealing directly to the heart and conscience.

Rev. A. H. Davis spoke Monday evening on "Troublesome Thoughts;" Rev. G. H. Horton Tuesday evening on "The Blind Man;" Rev E. C. Ramette Wednesday evening on "Unbelief." Rev. A. B. Loremer was unable to be present Thursday evening, but sent an excellent substitute, who spoke on "Sons of God." There was fine solo singing Monday evening by Miss Lillian Coleman; Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Stewart rendered three duets, spiritual and divine in their tendencies; Wednesday Rev. E. C. Ramette sang "Tell Me the Old, Old Story" in French, and offered the Lord's Prayer in French; Thursday evening Mr. J. R. Hosford, choister of the choir, and Miss Fanny Darling, alto, sang two duets, finely blending in harmony and melody.

This evening Rev. R. M. Briggs, of Woonsocket, will preach. The meetings have proven a great success. The large audiences that have gathered have been delighted with the short, earnest spiritual services, full of the Holy Spirit and prayer. Some conversions have taken place, and more seemed promised very soon. The Sunday congregations are very large. Four are awaiting baptism. The church is in a spiritual and revival state, and has a grand corp of workers.

FRIDAY, JAN. 12, 1900.

All the states in the Louisiana purchase show the most cordial interest in the coming international exposition in St. Louis four years hence. Each will be represented by a distinct state building and exhibit, says the Globe-Democrat, and they will be a revelation to the world of what a few years ago was dimly known as the far west. While this region is peculiarly rich in minerals, it is also developing fast in agriculture. The territories will be on hand to surprise spectators by the extent and variety of their natural wealth. In products of the soil, in grain, cotton, cattle and fruit, Oklahoma, the juvenile in the list, expects to make it interesting for the older states. An Alaska building would be a good idea, and, at its present rate of advancement, the territory will be able to get up a striking exhibit in 1903. Our new tropical possessions will be there. The basis for an American world's fair has widened greatly and the opportunity will be improved to the utmost in St. Louis.

For the last three years Miss Sarah Cunningham, of Vancouver, B. C., has blindfolded her eyes whenever she stepped outside the door of the little cottage in which she lives all alone. Miss Cunningham is a woman about 40 years old. For years her conscience was troubled by the sights of sin and immorality everywhere visible as she walked the streets of Vancouver. Finally she decided that she could stand it no longer. If she could not put a stop to the wickedness which oppressed her she could at least shut her eyes to the outside world. Consequently she bandaged her eyes. Since that day, in 1896, her eyes have never looked upon the earth. As a result Miss Cunningham reports that she is becoming cheerful. The bright side of life now occupies her mind, and, though she is aware of the fact that there is still sin in the world, it does not trouble her as it formerly did.

The female swindler who knows her business doesn't put chemicals on her hair, says the Cleveland Leader. She doesn't wear many diamonds. "This," she will say, "was my poor, dear mother's marriage ring," and she will show a quaint little stone which she picked up in Buffalo. The chap who is with her, possibly he is a very shrewd lawyer or perhaps a business man who is strictly up to snuff, will gulp down the story, hook, line, sinker and all, and then climb up on the bank after the bait can. His vanity is now so inflamed and he is so infatuated with himself and with the tremendously clever game that he is playing that he has become a helpless imbecile. Women weak? Bah! Go to the fox, thou son of a goose.

There is nothing at all incompatible, feelingly observes the Philadelphia Times, with wishing surgeons and doctors well and entertaining at the same time a violent loathing for the uncivilized boor who, while eating a banana on the street, thoughtlessly lets the treacherous peel drop just where, with the reckless depravity natural to inanimate things, it can best trip up the pedestrian. Fruit is good, eating is not a crime, surgeons must live, and people will go afoot, but there is no necessity for any dangerous combination of this quartette that may be avoidable by a little thought.

Keep Coughing

We know of nothing better to tear the lining of your throat and lungs. It is better than wet feet to cause bronchitis and pneumonia. Only keep it up long enough and you will succeed in reducing your weight, losing your appetite, bringing on a slow fever and making everything exactly right for the germs of consumption.

Stop coughing and you will get well.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

cures coughs of every kind. An ordinary cough disappears in a single night. The racking coughs of bronchitis are soon completely mastered. And, if not too far along, the coughs of consumption are completely cured.

It will aid the action of the Cherry Pectoral.

SOME LATE INVENTIONS.

Leaks in metallic pipes can be easily stopped by a new patching device, a U-shaped yoke being passed around the pipe, with the ends of the yoke carrying a detachable head, with a screw in the center, which presses a cushioned patch over the leak.

A combined mop head and wringer has been placed on the market, comprising a pair of fluted rollers held in proximity in the mop head, with a folding crank attached to one roller by which it is made to revolve and wring the cloth.

A Maryland woman has patented a cover for ironing-boards which is always smooth and retains its place securely on the board, the fabric having a series of lacing holes around the edge, in which a lacing strip is inserted, with cords at each end to prevent the cover sliding in either direction.

In an improved fifth wheel for wagons a double row of links is formed into circles, one outside the other, with a series of rollers carried by the circles and adapted to revolve on a circular track, supporting the weight of the front end of the wagon and allowing the truck to turn easily.

GUARDING AGAINST FROST.

In the orange-growing districts of the south irrigation affords the most effective protection against frost, while in sections where this process cannot be employed damp smudge fires, properly handled, are best adapted to general use.

The danger of damage from frost can be materially lessened by placing early and tender plants on high grounds and crests, and hardier plants in low grounds and hollows. When ground can be selected in the lee, or to the south and east of considerable bodies of water, the danger will be further lessened.

In the dry climate of the citrus fruit region of California and in promising fruit districts of Arizona small and numerous fires, preferably of coal burned in iron baskets, have been found the most effective device used for protection against frost; second in point of utility may be placed irrigation, and the practicable process which affords the least protection in that respect appears to be smudge fires.

SOMETHING NEW.

Horses' tails are protected from mud and rain in wet weather by a newly-designed cover, consisting of a tubular sack of rubber or other waterproof material, to be slipped over the tail, a strap being provided at the upper end to attach it to the tail.

Dishes can be secured in a handy position for scalding and draining by the use of a newly designed sink board, which is formed of a series of wooden strips set on edge on a base board, with slots cut in the strips for the insertion of the dishes in a slanting position.

In a new device for hanging or removing pictures from high walls a long pole is provided at one end with a U-shaped bracket, having slots in the ends for the reception of the picture cord, with a central hinged finger which supports the hook by which the cord is attached to the molding.

IF YOU WOULD BE POPULAR

Don't find fault.

Don't contradict people, even though you're sure you are right.

Don't be inquisitive about the affairs of even your most intimate friend.

Don't underrate anything because you don't possess it.

Don't believe that everybody else in the world is happier than you.

Don't conclude that you have never had any opportunities in your life.

Don't repeat gossip, even if it does interest a crowd.

Don't be rude to your inferiors in social position.

Don't express a positive opinion unless you perfectly understand what you are talking about.

Don't jeer at anybody's religious belief.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she could not live till morning" writes Mrs. S. H. THEIR EASTER GOWNS

(Written for this Paper.)

"MRS. MARTIN was over to-day, John, and she was telling me of the wonderful new gowns both herself and her daughters are to have for Easter Sunday," and Mrs. Powers gave forth a sigh that meant volumes to her husband.

The Powers family were hard up. The ledger of the Powers manufacturing concern showed a steady loss instead of the expected gain, and everything in the way of needless expenditures had been stopped in the Powers' home. The wardrobe at the Powers' home was full of gowns of all descriptions, all of them in good condition, but a season or more out of style.

"I am sorry to say, my dear," replied Mr. Powers, "that Martin is making money, while I am losing it. He told me a few days ago that he had made $200 more during the past month than he had ever made in any one month before since he had been in business. The Martins can afford new clothes while we cannot."

"Well, there is just this much about it, John, if we are to be compelled to wear our last season's clothes, I, for one, am not going to display our poverty by attending the Easter services, and I had counted on doing so very much." And again Mrs. Powers sighed for the benefit of her husband.

"I am sorry to deprive you of the pleasure of attending church Easter, my dear, but, as I explained before, it is necessary to economize. Why, if my creditors were to push the collection of their accounts at the present time they would force me to the wall. Were it not for the sake of appearances I would suggest that we give up our pew at the church entirely. To a certain extent, however, appearances must be kept up to prevent my creditors from guessing my financial condition at the present time."

Mrs. Powers studied carefully over the word "appearances," and its connection with the business affairs of her husband.

"Your father says he must keep up appearances, and yet can't afford to allow us the money to get the spring clothing we need," Mrs. Powers explained to her two daughters. "I really would like to help him if I only knew how."

"It seems to me," said Ethel, "that he would like to have us get the dresses with which to make a good showing if we can do so without the cost being too great."

"I have an idea, girls," said the mother. "I believe I know of a lady tailor who has just opened an establishment, and who would be willing to make at least one gown, if we furnish the material, in exchange for our influence. In that case, the main question is which one shall have the gown?"

"You, by all means," said both daughters.

And it was so decided. By practicing a little household economy they could get the needed goods, and they would exchange their influence for the services of the tailor. The tailor was seen and signified his willingness to accept such a proposition if based on what he considered business principles. He would charge them a fixed price for the gown—the fact that this fixed price was twice his usual charge mattered neither to the tailor nor to Mrs. Powers, and he would credit them with a certain commission on all work they sent him before Easter. The work on which the commission was to be allowed was to be determined by the ladies presenting one of his cards signed by either Mrs. or the Misses Powers.

"I must tell you what a jewel of a tailor I have found," said Mrs. Powers to Mrs. Smith-Jones, a few days later. "He makes perfectly exquisite gowns, and at a price that is quite reasonable, considering the quality of the work, and quanty is always more of a figure than price, especially at this season of the year, when we wish to look our very best for Easter."

"Do tell me where to find him. I have become so disgusted with all the tailors that I have tried that I had almost decided to do without a new tailor gown for this spring."

"I believe I have his card in the library. Wait a moment and I will see if I cannot find it for you."

When Mrs. Smith-Jones called at the tailor's the Powers gown had been just begun, but was laid aside for more profitable customers who were paying cash.

Mrs. Powers repeated her conversation to Mrs. Pratt the day after Mrs. Smith-Jones had called, and another card was found. Other callers followed and to each of them was told the same story of the wonderful tailor, and to each was given a card. Each caller found it convenient to order her spring gown of the new tailor because the Powers had been leaders in their set, and it would be quite the proper thing to have their gowns made by the Powers' tailor.

When Mrs. Powers called at the tailor's to have her gown fitted it was not yet ready, but there was still an abundance of time. She inquired if her various friends had been there and found they had, at which she was so elated at the success of her scheme that she ordered gowns for her two daughters, expecting that her commissions would more than pay for all three of them. But the existence of all the dresses was to be a surprise to Mr. Powers on Easter Sunday, when she would explain how they had been secured. She was really sorry that the tailor could not make men's clothing, for in that case she would have ordered a suit for her husband as well.

As each order was booked it represented a cash customer and took precedence over the Powers' gowns which did not. But while each new customer brought with her a card none of them had the name of Mrs. Powers on them with the exception of the one presented by Mrs. Smith-Jones, and to the tailor the commission business looked dubious.

As Easter drew near Mrs. Powers and her daughters became excited over the completion of their gowns, and when but a week remained, and they were still not fitted, it seemed as though only a miracle could save them.

Easter Sunday came and the gowns were not completed, and Mrs. Powers and her daughters feigned illness as an excuse for missing the Easter services. A week later the gowns were finished, and with them came the following bill to Mr. Powers:

"To three tailor-made gowns, at $50 each, $150, less commission allowed on Mrs. Smith-Jones' gown, $10; balance due, $140."

Mrs. Powers was astounded. She raved at the tailor and explained to her husband, but all to no effect. The tailor demanded a settlement, and insisted that Mrs. Smith-Jones was the only customer who had brought him a card signed by Mrs. Powers.

When the bill was not paid promptly he sued for a judgment and secured it. That judgment broke the camel's back; the Powers manufacturing concern went to the wall, and all because of Mrs. Powers' attempt at combining appearances and economy.

RAILWAY NOTES.

The Italian statistician Luigi Bodio reports in the Giornale degli Economisti that the Italian railways carried in 1897 nearly 12,500,000 foreign passengers, of whom 6,219,813 traveled first-class, 5,668,444 second and only 389,000 third.

The somewhat sharp curves at Lineberg on the second division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad are being removed and replaced with a tangent, thus eliminating about 24 degrees of curvature. About 14,000 cubic yards of material will be excavated.

Railway traveling in Algeria certainly leaves very much to be desired. From Algiers to Biskra is 400 miles, and it requires 36 hours to perform the journey. The trip from Oran to Algiers is 263 miles, and this requires 12 hours. Sleeping cars are required on all night trains and restaurant cars on all through trains.

The new clock on the Great Eastern railway terminus will, when completed, be one of the sights of London, for it will be one of the very largest clocks in the world. It is designed to show the correct time to all the 18 platforms in the station. The case is so large that it would comfortably hold a dining party of four or five persons.

The Central railroad of New Jersey has instituted examinations for its baggagemen. All of the men employed in the baggage department will be compelled to undergo an examination in order to retain their positions. The examination will be in the nature of questions concerning the route of a piece of baggage from one station to another, and methods of tracing lost pieces of baggage, etc.

ASK YOUR DOCTOR!
Ask your physician this question, "What is the one great remedy for consumption?" He will answer, "Cod-liver oil." Nine out of ten will answer the same way.
Yet when persons have consumption they loathe all fatty foods, yet fat is necessary for their recovery and they cannot take plain cod-liver oil. The plain oil disturbs the stomach and takes away the appetite. The disagreeable fishy odor and taste make it almost unendurable. What is to be done?
This question was answered when we first made of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Although that was nearly twenty-five years ago, yet it stands alone today the one great remedy for all affections of the throat and lungs.
The bad taste and odor have been taken away, the oil itself has been partly digested, and the most sensitive stomach objects to it rarely. Not one in ten can take and digest the plain oil. Nine out of ten can take SCOTT'S EMULSION and digest it. That's why it cures so many cases of early consumption. Even in advanced cases it brings comfort and greatly prolongs life.

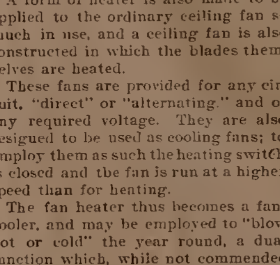
HEATER AND COOLER.

An Electric Fan That Blows Warm in the Winter and Cold During the Dog Days.

The ventilating fan for use in the torrid periods of the summer is familiar to almost everybody, and its service is greatly appreciated by everyone who has felt its cooling currents of atmosphere. There has recently been invented a new device which closely resembles the ventilating fan. It is like the ventilator placed in the wall of a room, but instead of cooling it heats a room. By this process of heating the atmosphere in a room is kept throughout the dimensions of the chamber more evenly heated than by any other known process. It is an electric arrangement and a very clever one.

This heater consists of a wire resistance, in which the heat is generated. It is put into or out of use by simply closing or opening the special switch provided for this purpose, and located in the heating-web.

Another form of fan-heater is arranged so that the blades of the fan are heated by having a heat developing wire mounted on them in a coating of enamel. This enamel becomes hot upon connecting the wire with the circuit which is led to the blades thorugh collector rings on the shaft of the fan.



BOTH HEATER AND COOLER.

A form of heater is also made to be applied to the ordinary ceiling fan so much in use, and a ceiling fan is also constructed in which the blades themselves are heated.

These fans are provided for any circuit, "direct" or "alternating," and of any required voltage. They are also designed to be used as cooling fans; to employ them as such the heating switch is closed and the fan is run at a higher speed than for heating.

The fan heater thus becomes a fan-cooler, and may be employed to "blow hot or cold" the year round, a dual function which, while not commended in individuals, may fairly be claimed to be of the most meritorious character in this inanimate form, and one likely to win for this invention great popularity.

ELECTRIC HAIRCUT.

Paris Has a Shop in Which Tonsorial Operations Are Performed in a Unique Way.

An electrical barber's shop is one of the latest attractions of Paris. This does not mean simply that motors are used for driving fans and the establishment lighted by an electrical current, but that hair is curled, cut and dried by electricity, and many other things done through its agency. Haircutting in this Parisian establishment is done with an electric cutting comb, which, because of its simplicity and the dexterity with which it may be used, must soon become widely employed. This comb looks like any ordinary one, except that a thin wire is stretched above the upper portion of the teeth along the handle. The wire is connected electrically with a storage battery. When the battery is connected the wire becomes red-hot. Therefore when this comb is passed through the hair the latter is burned off by the red-hot wire. The whole operation is so rapid that a heavy head of hair may be clipped in a few minutes. Not only this, but the ends of the hair cannot bleed, so that the benefit of singeing is part of the operation. Hair which has been shampooed is dried very quickly by means of electric fans, facial imperfections are removed with electric needles, and it is understood that the owner of the shop is patenting an electric motor-like device which will be used in place of the hands for shampooing.

How Long We Have to Live.

There is a very simple rule for finding the average number of years which persons of any age may expect to live. If the present age be deducted from 80, two-thirds of the remainder is the answer required. This result is not absolutely accurate, but it is near enough. For instance, a man aged 20 might, by this rule, expect to live 40 years longer, which is just what the latest actuarial tables give. At 40 the expectation of life works out at nearly 27 years, while the tables give it as more than 25 years. At 60 the above rule allows just over 13 years, and the table shows a little less.

Corns and the Weather.

People feel their corns ache and their bones rheumatic when rainy weather is at hand because of the dampness of the atmosphere upon the body, which causes a temporary disturbance of the system. All general disturbances of the body manifest themselves in those parts which are in a morbid state—as in a corn, a rheumatic bone or a decayed tooth.

American bicycles are gaining favor in distant parts of the world. In the same period the exports to Japan have increased from $60,997 to $95,640, and those to the British East Indies from $21,091 to $116,638.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

NORFOLK, ss.

SUPERIOR COURT.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court, holden at Dedham within and for the county of Norfolk:

Respectfully represents Abbie M. Darling of Franklin, in said county, that on the first day of January, A. D. 1868, at said Franklin, she was lawfully married to Nathan E. Darling, now of Providence, in the state of Rhode Island; that thereafterward your libellant and said Nathan E. Darling lived together as husband and wife in this commonwealth, to wit: At said Franklin and at Wrentham, in said county, and in said Providence; that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations, but the said Nathan E. Darling being wholly regardless of the same on or about the twenty seventh day of September, A D. 1896, at said Franklin, wilfully and utterly deserted your libellant and has continued such desertion for more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel.

And your libellant further says that the said Nathan E. Darling, being of sufficient ability, has grossly, wantonly and cruelly refused and neglected to provide a suitable maintenance for her.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Nathan E. Darling, and that such further orders and decrees may be made in the premises as to your Honors may seem just and reasonable.

Dated at said Franklin the thirtieth day of December, A. D 1899.

ABBIE M. DARLING.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

SUPERIOR COURT.

On the foregoing libel, it is ordered that the libellant give notice to the said Nathan E. Darling, the libellee, to appear before the justices of this court, to be holden at Dedham, within and for said county, on the first Monday of March next, by causing an attested copy of said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published once in a week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper printed at Franklin, in the county of Norfolk, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said first Monday of March next; and further, by sending through the mail, as soon as may be, by a registered letter addressed to the last known residence of the said Nathan E. Darling an attested copy of said libel and of this order thereon, that the said Nathan E. Darling may then and there show cause why the prayer of said libel should not be granted.

By the court.

LOUIS A. COOK, Clerk.

The following musical programme will be given by the American band orchestra, 10 pieces, at Manager Partridge's benefit on Thursday evening: Military march, "First Brigade;" overture, "La Dindeme;" rag-time march, "The Belles of Dixie;" medley march, "Where the Sweet Magnolias Bloom;" medley overture, "War Songs of the Boys in Blue;" march, "Our Naval Cadet;" "Pastimes on the Levee;" galop, "On the Campus." The orchestra will be accompanied by Mrs. Mabel Tracy, pianist.

In a letter received here recently from John Kingsley, who is serving a six-months' sentence in the prison at Charlestown navy yard, the writer states that he was not convicted on the charge of desertion, but, on the contrary, was acquitted on that allegation after a trial, in which he acted as his own counsel, although he was permitted to have regular counsel had he so desired. The offense for which he is now undergoing a term of imprisonment is for absence without leave, to which charge he plead-ed guilty. Had Kingsley been found guilty of desertion the sentence would undoubtedly have been at least two years' imprisonment and the taking away of his citizenship.

A rather significant thing in regard to the death of Alfred Whiting comes to our notice. Although a member of the Congregational church his work for the railroad, especially upon bridges, had not admitted of his being at home upon the Sabbath, since that was the time when his services would be most in need, on account of the light traffic upon that day. But upon the Sabbath preceding his death it came about that he spent the day here. He attended evening service and also went into the after meeting. While there he spoke briefly in regard to his faith in God. It is safe to say that nothing could have been further from his thoughts than that within a few short hours he would be called upon to put that faith to the test.

Christ Church Guild of Medway will give an attractive entertainment this evening, at 7.30 o'clock, in Sanford hall, which may be of interest to Franklin people. Stanton H. King, superintendent of the Sailors' Haven, Charlestown, Boston, an ex-Seaman of varied and extensive experience in the Merchant Marine and U. S. Navy, will deliver a lecture replete with anecdote, wit and adventure on "Reminiscences of Twelve Years Before the Mast." Mr. King will bring with him six sailors, who chance to be in port, who will sing "Shanties" or Sea Hauling songs and choruses, and will give the remarkable sailor dances which so delighted a Franklin audience recently. After the entertainment all who wish may dance on the fine new floor until 12 o'clock.

The machinery was started in the new linen mill at Unionville last week, and operations may be said to have been commenced, although not as yet on a large scale. There are twenty new looms set up and in running order, and a quantity of toweling was turned out last week, the first ever manufactured in this section. Four looms are now kept running and the company intend to have the twenty new looms in operation as soon as weavers can be obtained. The Textile plant at Worcester, which is still running, will shortly be closed and the machinery removed to the Unionville plant, and it is expected that in the spring the mill will be operated to its full capacity and that between 150 and 200 hands will be at work. The alterations and additions to the building are now about completed and the company is losing no time in the effort to have the plant running to its full capacity at as early a day as possible.

Lincoln J. Carter's great naval drama, "Under the Dome," in Dresser Opera house Thursday night was undoubtedly the best play seen here for a long time. It was produced by a very strong cast of characters, fourteen people being represented. A very large lot of special scenery is carried and it was shown to very good advantage even on the small stage. Some of it was very realistic, especially the fore-deck of the ferry boat from Hoboken to New York, with the perfectly natural noise of the engines, swish of the water and rattle of chains as she entered her dock and was moored; also the firing of the admiral's salute from the assembled war vessels in the harbor; the storm scene, showing the Trenton going to her doom, was as realistic a piece of stage setting as was ever shown in town, and the curtain had to be rung up several times before the audience had seen sufficient of the thrilling scenes. A very large audience was present taking into consideration the severity of the weather. The play may be produced here again by special request later in the season.—Southbridge Herald.

Night Officer Connor is looking for William Mahoney, a Boston mason, who has been working in town lately, and whom the officer had in custody for a time on Friday night on the charge of breaking a window in an electric car while the latter was stopped on the bridge in Central square. Mahoney had been placed in the lockup about 11 p. m., the officer not locking him in a cell, but allowing him the freedom of the corridor. Officer Connor locked the outer door and then went to the store of Alfred Farrington, where he had in keeping the remains of Joseph Sumner. When he went to the lockup next morning he discovered that Mahoney had escaped. The officer says that he will have Mahoney returned here for trial It is stated that Mahoney went to Woonsocket Friday and returned on a late car, which was in charge of Conductor Ward. Trouble arose between the conductor and Mahoney on the trip, and when the car reached here Mahoney got off at the bridge and went into the lunch cart. The car went on to King street and soon returned to the bridge. Here Mahoney, it is stated, came out of the lunch cart with a coffee cup in one hand and threw it at Conductor Ward, but the cup went wide of the mark and went through a window glass instead. Mahoney is said to live in Cambridge.

"Home Again."

There was a happy reunion at the Sanger homestead on Pond street last Saturday. For the first time the entire family of Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Sanger were together. Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Chamberlain and Miss Grace B. Sanger of London, Eng.; Mr. and Mrs. Wales R. Stockbridge of New York and Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sanger and four children of Boston. With the latter came Miss Mina E. Wells, one of "Grandma" Sanger's California "girls." The children and grandchildren, coming from New York and Boston, met at the station at 9 o'clock. A light express wagon had been transformed into a picnic wagon, which carried the entire party to the farmhouse on Pond street. "Home Again" was sung with much earnestness as the team drove up to the door. After that fun reigned supreme until the children and grandchildren departed on the evening train for Boston.

The family was together at the silver wedding anniversary eighteen years ago. Mr. Sanger was then in business in California, whither he returned immediately after that interesting occasion. In the following year the oldest daughter was married, and shortly afterwards Mrs. Sanger and the two unmarried daughters joined Mr. Sanger in California. Since then the family circle has not been complete until last Saturday's reunion.

H. R. Chamberlain, the husband of Abbie Sanger, is the European correspondent of the New York Sun. He began his career as a newspaper man on the Boston Journal, and one of his first "assignments" brought him to Franklin to write up the opening of the railroad line between this town and Providence. He has written several books that have had widespread circulation, the best known being "The Farmers' Alliance" and "Six Thousand Tons of Gold."

W. R. Stockbridge, the husband of Harriet Phippa (Daisy) Sanger, is junior member of the export commission firm of Cumming & Stockbridge of New York and Hamburg.

W. H. Sanger, the son, is assistant clerk of the Massachusetts Senate. Formerly he was connected with the Boston Journal and covered Franklin news for that paper. His wife was Nellie S. Bridgman, daughter of Joseph C. Bridgman of Hyde Park. C.

> "Then fell upon the house a sudden gloom,
> A shadow on those features fair and thin;
> And softly, from that hushed and darkened room
> Two angels issued where but one went in."
> —Longfellow.

Sadly dissonant with the chimes of the Sabbath bells and the gladsome beauty of a perfect winter's morning came the unwelcome tidings of the death of Rachel M. Thayer, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Addison M. Thayer, after a month's wearying and exhausting battle with typhoid fever. Not a little of the time she had been delirious, her thought being mainly upon her studies at Dean and the necessity for her immediate presence again in her classes at that institution.

All that medical skill could do was hers; trained nurses watched every symptom, encouraging or otherwise, but for the past week or two there was nothing but to wait for the turning point of the fever and hope for the best. This came on Saturday night, but then the already enfeebled frame was unable to sustain the heavy demands made upon it, hemorrhages set in and the young life slowly ebbed away.

It is of infinite comfort to the grief stricken parents to remember that her last words were, "Don't cry, papa; I'm only going home." Her life had been a singularly bright and sunny one, and one of her joyous nature could find in it much of pleasure and happiness for herself and others. Indeed, she had often said that if people were as happy in heaven as she was upon earth it must be a veritable paradise.

It is not difficult to believe, and it is a pleasing thought withal, that her entrance into the other world was marked by a welcome from her grandfather, Rev. William M. Thayer, who died a year or two ago, and whom she loved dearly. One can imagine her saying to mourning loved ones:

> "I hear a voice you cannot hear,
> Which says I must not stay;
> I see a hand you cannot see,
> Which beckons me away."

She was gifted in many ways, an apt pupil, developing into an excellent scholar, a clever musician, and as a child possessed a certain grace of movement peculiarly her own. She was the idol of her parents, who lavished a wealth of affection upon her, and was exceedingly popular with her mates in school and out. Gifted with a lively, vivacious disposition, she made friends easily, winning them to her by very force of attraction.

In the newly remodeled house every effort had been made to provide for her comfort and convenience, consulting her taste and wishes to a marked degree, little thinking how brief would be the time afforded her in its enjoyment. Only a week before her death she was awarded, with others, the badge for constant attendance upon the Sabbath school, it being taken to her bedside by her dearest friend and schoolmate, Miss Marjorie Ray. Among the flowers that will tomorrow grace her casket will be one from the Sabbath school in loving remembrance of her.

The funeral will be held at the house on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Rand of Watertown officiating, assisted by Rev. Dr Sneath of this place. She was 16 years and 3 months old at the time of her death.

Words are indeed inadequate to express the grief of the parents as they face the future with the loved one out of sight, though so constantly in memory, and not unnaturally the question comes to them as it would to us, "Why should this thing be? Why this young life cut off in its first blossoming when the future appeared to hold for it so much of happiness and joy?" The only answer which comes to aching hearts is:

> "The death change comes.
> Death is another life. We bow our heads
> At going out, we think, and enter straight
> Another golden chamber of the King's,
> Larger than this we leave, and lovelier.
> And then in shadowy glimpses, disconnect,
> The story, flower-like, closes thus its leaves,
> The will of God is all in all. He makes,
> Destroys, remakes, for His own pleasure all."

Revival Services.

Revival services at the Methodist church still continue with ever increasing interest. This week has started out better than any week thus far. A large number have already been converted, and many others are deeply interested. "Behold what God hath wrought!" This week will finish these special services. There will be a meeting every night including Saturday. Special singing at every service, solos, duets, quartet, etc. The gospel of Jesus preached in its simplicity is proving itself to be "the power of God unto salvation to every one who believes." Come as often as you can this week. This is a gracious season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. You cannot afford to miss it. Come, and welcome. Come tonight. Bring your friends and neighbors.

Have you taken that trip to Woonsocket yet to get your clothing at Longley's? Don't delay till the bargains are gone.

Accident or Murder?

The cause of the death of Joseph Sumner is still unknown, though every effort is being made to ascertain it. Last week District Attorney Harris notified County Examiner J. C. Gallison to make an examination, and this was done by the Drs. Gallison and Dr. Crowley. They report a fracture of the skull and a bruise upon the head, the fracture not necessarily causing death, but that might be a possible result. The stomach was removed and is reserved for future examination. No smell of liquor was discernible about the person of Mr. Sumner when he was examined, though that does not imply that he had not been drinking. The body is still under the control of the district attorney, who has given permission for its removal to Foxboro and placed in a tomb.

The story had gained credence that in his pockets was found a bottle of laudanum. This was not so, but a small half-ounce vial of chloroform, none of which had been used, was found, and another still smaller bottle empty. Those who know him assert that he was accustomed to carry it with him to alleviate the distress of asthma. Various stories are current upon the street such as being met on the way to Woonsocket, when with Woolford, and having the appearance of being tied into the wagon, Woolford being out of the carriage at the time. If such be the fact, it would give all the more color to the theory that Sumner, in his intoxicated condition, fell from the buggy, and was replaced by his companion and brought to Franklin. Whether Woolford realized the condition of his companion may never be known, as only he can say, and it is doubtful if he could be drawn into anything incriminating, provided there be anything of that nature.

For forty years Joe Sumner has been noted in the vicinity as a sport and a man who wanted to get along without hard work. For many years he lived on a farm in the south part of Wrentham and occupied the attention of the officers who watched for illegal liquor selling. For the past few years the public has seen and heard little of Joe. It is said at times he was almost a total abstainer from alcoholic liquors and at other times a hard drinker. He was more or less associated with the Woolford boys, Frank and George, for many years the Woolfords, when young, living near the northern line of the town of Wrentham. Sumner has one or more sisters living, but no children.

Woolford says that Sumner said when leaving a friend whom they met while out driving: "I will never call on you again." Woolford also said that the dead man spoke to him something about death, but he could not remember what it was, because he was so drunk at the time. His was simply a recollection, he said, of some talk about the matter, but his memory of what it was failed him.

At all events the matter is at a standstill until there is further action by the district attorney, which will not be until all of the facts are placed before him, so that he can decide as to bringing the matter before the grand jury. Meanwhile public interest is at a very low ebb, and it is quite likely little further thought will be given the matter.

Unfair Discrimination.

An attorney of Kenosha, Wis., has presented to the city council a bicycle ordinance which prohibits women from riding unless they have passed an examination as to their fitness to guide a wheel. When the attorney announced his determination to draw the ordinance the matter was considered as a huge joke, but the affair now has gone so far that it seems certain that the city council will take some action on the question. The ordinance provides that it shall be unlawful for any female to ride in Kenosha without having first obtained from the city clerk a license. To obtain this license the applicant must be examined by three experts as to her ability to ride without endangering the safety and personal rights of others. If the experts put their "O. K." on her riding she must file a $100 bond "that all damages caused by the careless riding or other improper handling or manipulation of a bicycle will be paid by the said female if the accident is shown to be resultant from the carelessness of said licensee." The experts will conduct their riding academy in Market square. It is further provided that it shall be unlawful for any woman to ride within the corporation limits of Kenosha without having first obtained a license, and any violation of the ordinance is to be punished by arrest and a ten-dollar fine. The fines are to be the compensation of the experts. In no case is the ordinance to apply to any woman riding with a man escort on a tandem.

The Mad Rush for Riches.

There is a solemn warning to be read in the fate of a New York broker, who is reported to have collapsed mentally while endeavoring to execute an order in the stock exchange. The excitement proved too much for his overstrained brain, and he fell deliriously, calling out "37," the price he offered for the shares desired by his customer. This tragic occurrence does not stand alone to point the dangers that humanity encounters daily in the race for riches. Many men are in sanitariums and asylums as a result of straining their physical and mental powers to the breaking point while trying rapidly to acquire wealth. Others nerve themselves to a continuance of the conflict by the indulgence in stimulants, which in time causes either disease or a general weakening of the system. A few survive the battle apparently uninjured because they are by nature strong in body and mind beyond the average of their fellows. A man should endeavor to gauge his capacity with accuracy in order that he may not attempt accomplishments beyond the reach of his abilities. His success depends upon the judgment displayed in this particular. It would be better for him to achieve less than to seek too much and collapse in the effort to excel.

Miss Jane L. Buchanan, a young woman of Southern Pines, N. C., has discovered a new field of industry for women in grape-packing. As the grape season lasts only a few weeks, in order to make it pay she contracts with various vineyards, and has a corps of experienced girl workers, trained by herself.

Maine is not called upon for as much ice as in former days, but the thrifty people of that state are well qualified to discover new industries. In the past year 6,400 Angora cats raised in Maine have been disposed of in the large Atlantic cities. Some of the finest specimens sell for $50 each.

HE FEARED THE GATE.

Doctor Aptly Illustrates to His Patient His Belief Concerning Death and the Hereafter.

Late one stormy evening the old doctor was summoned to see a man who had been attacked with sudden illness on the cars and had stopped at a little inn near the railway station, about three miles from the village. The patient proved to be Squire Joyce, from the neighboring county, whom the doctor slightly knew. He examined him carefully, and gave him medicines taken from his saddle-bags. Then he rose to go, smiling cheerfully down at the anxious face of the sufferer.

"You will, I think, find yourself better in the morning; able, I hope, to go on your journey," he said.

"Yes. Stay a minute, doctor. I want you to be honest with me. I have had seizures like this before. Shall I have them again?"

"It is probable."

"I want the truth—all of it."

"Yes, they will return."

"I may die in one of them—to-morrow?"

"Yes. Or it may be, not for years. It is uncertain. Do not waste your life in anticipating them. We all must go through the same gate some day."

"The gate—yes! But beyond the gate—what is there?"

His eyes were on the doctor's face, full of doubt, almost of pain.

The two men were silent a moment. "What is there?" Joyce repeated, harshly. "You are a member of a church—a Christian. I have no religious belief. Tell me, for the love of God, what is there beyond? If I may go to-morrow, what shall I find?"

"I do not know."

Joyce did not speak for awhile, and then gave a forced laugh. "I need your help more for this than for my disease. I'd rather talk to you than to a clergyman. You are a shrewd man of the world, and a good man. Sometimes I am greatly depressed, thinking of this darkness into which I am going. For thousands of years men have gone out into it, leaving their loved ones behind, and not one has sent back a word to say how it fares with him—not one."

In the silence that followed the rain beat against the windows. There came a slight whimpering cry from without.

"You are an old man, doctor," said Joyce, turning quickly on him. "You are not far from the gate yourself. Are you not afraid of what may be beyond?"

"No," said the old man. "No, I am not afraid. May I ask you to look here." He rose and opened the door. Outside, in the dark hall, lay a little fox terrier, drenched with rain. He was crouched on the floor, his eyes fixed on the closed door.

"This is my dog, a bright, affectionate little fellow. He has followed me through the storm, and has been lying outside the door, knowing that I was in this closed chamber. He never was here before. He did not know what was in this room. He did not care to know. I was in it, his master, whom he loves, who has cared for him. He was not afraid."

Joyce looked at the doctor keenly a moment before he spoke.

"You mean—"

"I mean that I am like poor Punch. I am not afraid of the dark room to which I am going. I do not ask to know what is there. I believe that my Lord and Master is there. In all these later years of my life I have felt that He cared for me. My confidence has been such that I have been assured that in my hours of trial He has never failed me here. I sincerely believe He will not fail me yonder."

"But I—I do not know Him."

"He knows you. I think I am authorized by the declarations of the Bible to say that His hand is stretched out to you. You can accept Him as your Guide and Teacher if you will. That done in sincerity, you will not fear the gate nor all that lies beyond."—Youth's Companion.

FOR HAULING MANURE.

How to Construct a Platform Which Robs This Disagreeable Work of Its Worst Features.

Manure hauling is generally a hard and disagreeable job, yet it is one that all successful farmers must perform. By the usual method of hauling it in the farm wagon both the loading and the scattering are hard work. If a man does his duty by his farm he will use a manure platform often enough to pay for having one. The accompanying sketch will show one on low-wheeled running gears, and without the sideboards, which are easily put on when required. It is merely a platform nailed to two by fours, which are bolted securely to a frame made of two by six plank which fits inside the standards that hold the wagon box in place. There are holes cut through the platform to let the tops of these standards through. The platform sets just high enough to be free of the wheels. It can be made seven feet wide if that width is desired.

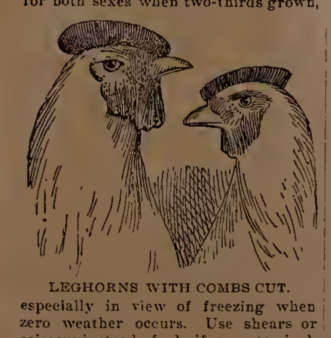
TRIMMING THE COMBS.

It Is Not a Painful Operation for the Birds, Considering the Comfort It Assures.

The drawbacks of large combs and wattles are freezing in our northern states and the discomforts and strain resulting from carrying so much weight on the head. It appears as though the circulation of blood in the head is somewhat affected by these excessive appendages, for it has been observed that a Leghorn having frequent spells of giddiness and staggering can sometimes be quickly and permanently cured by trimming the comb, and we would always recommend the trimming of both comb and wattles for both sexes when two-thirds grown, especially in view of freezing when zero weather occurs. Use shears or scissors instead of a knife so as to pinch the blood vessels and mitigate the flow of blood.



LEGHORNS WITH COMBS CUT.

The operation is not so painful as might appear, we will state for the benefit of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Nature evidently provided that the comb and wattles should be comparatively destitute of feeling. As during the thousands and thousands of years the males fought for the possession of the females and the combs and wattles were the parts seized upon in the struggle a lack of sensitiveness in these appandages would be perpetuated and augmented on the principal of natural selection.

So indifferent is a fowl that after being dubbed it will unconcernedly fall to eating its own comb and wattles if allowed the privilege. This dullness or fewness of nerves of feeling in the comb, when understood, may alleviate the pangs felt by many persons at the mention of what has been wrongly called a cruel practice. It is easier for a fowl to stand dubbing than to endure a frozen comb.—H. H. Stoddard, in Farm and Home.

PRESERVING EGGS.

Directions for the Use of Water Glass Furnished by Prof. Ladd, of North Dakota College.

Prof. Ladd, of North Dakota College of Agriculture, in bulletin No. 35, gives the following directions for the use of water glass in keeping eggs. Water glass is silicate of soda or silicate of potash, the former being cheaper. It is not expensive.

If wooden kegs or barrels are to be used in which to pack the eggs, they should first be thoroughly scalded with boiling water to sweeten and purify them.

To each ten quarts of water, which should first be boiled and then cooled, add one quart of water glass. Pack the eggs in the vessel and pour solution over them, covering well.

Keep the eggs in a cool, dark place. A dry, cool cellar is a good place.

If the eggs are kept in too warm a place the silicate is deposited and the eggs are not properly protected. Do not wash the eggs before packing, for by so doing you injure their keeping quality.

For packing use only perfectly fresh eggs, for stale eggs will not be saved and may prove harmful to others.

All packed eggs contain a little gas, and in boiling such eggs they will crack. This may be prevented by making a pin hole in the blunt end of the egg. To do this hold the egg in the hand, place the point of a pin against the shell of the egg at the blunt end, and give the pin a quick, sharp blow, just enough to drive the pin through the shell without further injury to the egg.

How to Get Top Prices.

To get the advantage of full market prices for eggs nothing is more important than the style of the cases and packing. Of course size and cleanness are very important considerations, but the first thing that strikes the eye of a purchaser is the exterior quality. I notice many lots of eggs, especially from the south, which come into the stores in all sorts of cases—scarcely two alike, and none of them neat and trim. These goods are generally condemned before they are looked at and can only be sold at a concession, no matter how good the eggs may be. Shippers may accept it as a fact that while all eggs in first-class packages may not sell at top prices, no eggs in second or third class packages will do so.—N. Y. Produce Review.

Keep the Henhouse Dry.

Build the poultry house so it will be dry at all times. It is easy enough to have a poultry house that is dry in the middle of summer, but that is just the time when the fowls are in it least and are least affected by its condition. But in the winter, when they must remain indoors for days at a time, is when the fowls need to have a place that is not favorable to the increase of disease germs. Wet and dirty houses are often the beginning of epidemics of roup and other equally fatal diseases.—Farmer's Review.

WHAT THE LAW DECIDES.

The right of a non-resident to the statutory exemption of household furniture from execution is sustained in Bond vs. Martin (Ore.), 44 L. R. A. 430.

The creditors of a member of a fraternal beneficiary society are held, in Fisher vs. Donovan (Neb.) 44 L. R. A. 383, to have no right to or interest in his certificate either before or after the death of the member, and can have no share in the proceeds thereof.

A statute providing that a trial by jury shall be waived unless certain steps are taken before the trial is held, in Silberman vs. Hey (O.), 44 L. R. A. 264, to be on a subject matter of general legislation, and therefore invalid when limited in its operation to a single county.

The right of possession of property sold under foreclosure of a mortgage is held, in Danehower vs. Dawson (Ark.), 44 L. R. A. 193, to be in the purchaser during the year allowed by statute for redemption, where the statute transfers the title subject to redemption and is silent as to the possession.

The obligation of the lessee of a railroad to maintain and operate the railroad during the term of the lease is held, in Southern Railroad company vs. Franklin & P. R. company (Va.), 44 L. R. A. 297, to be a necessary implication of a lease in contemplation of which the road was built and which provides for the use of the receipts, so far as necessary, to repair the road.

A person employed to cut merchantable timber by a contract calling for a settlement each month and the retention of a certain per cent. as a forfeiture for the satisfactory completion of the job is held, in Clark vs. Renninger (Md.), 44 L. R. A. 413, to be a contractor and not an employe, within the meaning of a statute providing for a receiver of one who fails to pay employes.

LONGEVITY HINTS.

An energetic temperament and active habits conduce to longevity.

An important part of the primary inheritance is good digestive and nutritive power.

Temperance is necessary in the use of the nutritive functions both in eating and drinking and in regard to all kinds of food and drink.

The primary factor in a long life consists in an inherited durability: the vital machinery is wound up to go for a given period, and but for accidents or in spite of them it will go till the time appointed.

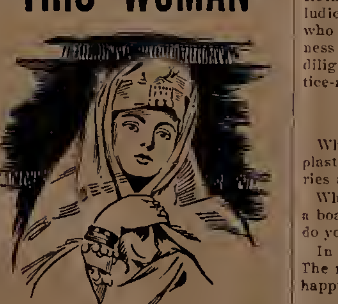
THIS WOMAN



Applied for a divorce and got it.

The reason for doing so would be thought strange by us, but the Turkish courts of her time considered her grounds ample and valid.

What were they?

Her husband refused to supply her with good coffee.

We do not think these gounds sufficient for divorce, but if one finds chicory and other adulterations in the coffee grounds at home, it will often be found to be the primary cause of domestic disaster.

Good coffee is enjoyable, and what is more, healthful.

Good coffee can be had by anyone who will buy Chase & Sanborn's Coffees. Their Seal Brand is used in the best families in the country, and their high-grade coffees which come packed in parchment-lined imported bags are unequalled in excellence.

Pure, perfect, carefully selected and prepared, and what is more, it is all coffee; nothing in it in the way of an adulteration. If it ever paid to buy the best in anything, it does in buying coffee.

Salted whale meat is considered a delicacy by the Japanese. The whales are caught off the coast of Corea, the flesh and blubber are cut up and salted, and sent to Japan for food.

Unique properties are possessed by the River Tinto, in Spain. It petrifies the sand of its bed; and if a stone falls in the stream and alights upon another, in a few months they unite and become one stone. Fish cannot live in its waters.

Over 1,000 houses in London are tenantless because they are supposed to be haunted. Seventy-one of them have been the scenes of murder, and from some of the remainder occupants have mysteriously disappeared.

A "geographic board" in the Dominion of Canada settles all questions as to the correct spelling of geographic names in the Dominion. When a man submits a question and the board agrees with him, he calls them learned; when the decision is against him, he says they are orthographical jackasses.

Beekeeping is an expensive enjoyment at Bath, England. Miss Kerley, an inhabitant of that beautiful city, sued her next-door neighbor for $250 damages, caused her by defendant's bees. She was badly stung twice and the bees frequented her garden to such an extent that she had to let it go practically out of cultivation. The jury awarded her $50, and the judge granted an injunction, with costs on the higher scale.

FILIPINOS' MAUSER BULLETS.

Of 1,100 Americans wounded in the Philippines, but three required an amputation of a limb, though 820 were wounded in those members. All cases of amputation resulted in death, strange to say.

The main artery in the leg of a Nebraska boy serving in the Philippine islands was severed by a mauser bullet and its usefulness destroyed, yet the man will have a good limb when he gets well, so perfect is the collateral circulation.

To the small caliber of the insurgents' mausers many lives are owed, for the bullets bore a clean little hole, rarely fracturing a limb, and it takes a center shot through the skull to kill. A half-dozen men shot through the brain with mausers have survived.

A Montana boy was struck an inch back of the outer angle of the left eye, the bullet passing through his skull and making its exit in the same locality on the other side. He lost the sight of one eye and though the other may follow be will recover his usual health.

A Nebraska man was shot directly over the left eye, the ball passing down and out underneath the edge of the jaw, reentering the shoulder and out near the elbow, again entering the wrist and going out of the back of the hand. He also got well.

INDIVIDUALITIES.

Rev. John Naille, of Trappe, Pa., is the oldest clergyman in the United States. He is in his ninety-ninth year.

Jason Brown, son of John Brown, of Harper's Ferry, lives a hermit's life in the Santa Cruz mountains in California.

Hiram Cronk, of New York, is the only surviving pensioned soldier of the war of 1812. He is 99 years old.

Edward Walsh, a St. Louis policeman who died lately, had been 33 years on the police force, and had never used a weapon in making an arrest.

Herbert Paul says Emperor William is the greatest journalist, because the emperor always expresses an opinion on all subjects, by telegraph or otherwise, and he generally expresses it exceedingly well.

KEEP YOUR BLOOD CLEAN

Going Through the Motions.

"What is your purpose in remaining so silent?" asked the practical politician's friend.

"Are people wondering about it?"

"Of course they are."

"Well, that's what I want. I have noticed that nearly every politician who amounts to much in the country's affairs is at some time or other spoken of as a sphinx. I don't know as it does any particular good, but it seems customary."—Washington Star.

Sermons in Trees.

De Long Stayre (who has been prosing on in the same manner for three hours)—See the trees, Miss Bright; how like human beings they are. They know when it is time to doff their summer garb and don their autumn trappings. And in the spring—"

Miss Bright—In the spring, Mr. Stayre, they show their intelligence by leaving at the proper time.—N. Y. World.

A little light work should not make a woman's back ache—

And it wouldn't if the kidneys were right.

Sick kidneys are to blame for three-fourths of the pain and misery in this world.

If all the kidneys in the world could be made strong and healthful, backache would disappear like magic.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Are making well kidneys just as fast as people let them. They never fail. Have cured thousands of men and women.

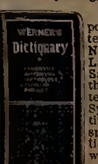
Read this testimony of their merit.

Mrs. J. F. Jencks, of 532 Bank street, wife of the foreman at the Brown Carriage Co., New London, Ct., says:

"It took five or six boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills to radically cure me of backache, in the winter of 1896, and all I can add to the statement I gave at that time for publication in our New London papers is, the cure then effected has been permanent. I as conscientiously and as emphatically endorse Doan's Kidney Pills to-day as I did when they were first brought to my notice over three years ago. My advice to anyone suffering from either weakened or over-excited kidneys is to procure Doan's Kidney Pills at a drug store, take a course of the treatment, and the results promised will inevitably follow."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

Werner's Dictionary of Synonyms & Antonyms, Mythology and Familiar Phrases.



A book that should be in the vest pocket of every person, because it tells you the right word to use. No Two Words in the English Language Have Exactly the Same Significance. To express the precise meaning that one intends to convey a dictionary of Synonyms is needed to avoid repetition. The strongest figure of speech is antithesis. In this dictionary the appended Antonyms will, therefore, be found extremely valuable. Contains many other features such as Mythology, Familiar Allusions and Foreign Phrases, Prof. Loisette's Memory System, "The Art of Never Forgetting," etc., etc. This wonderful little book bound in a neat cloth binding and sent postpaid for $0.25. King of Belgium a Speculator.

The king of Belgium is a born speculator. From his parents he inherited three quarters of a million sterling. With this capital he began to speculate, and showed his masterly skill as a financier in his dealings in Panama canal stock. By judicious buying and selling he is estimated to have made four millions. Then he was seized with the Congo Free State hobby, which obtained such a mastery over him that his financial acumen was overpowered, and he sank his private fortune in it. Whether it will ever return good value for the money remains to be seen.—N. Y. World.

There are no persons more solicitous about the preservation of rank than those who have no rank at all.—Shenstone.

Pleasure is very seldom found where it is sought. Our brightest blazes of gladness are commonly kindled by unexpected sparks.—Johnson.

Since time is not a person we can overtake when he is gone, let us honor him with mirth and cheerfulness of heart while he is passing.—Goethe.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently overcome habitual constipation, well informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system. Buy the genuine, made by the California Fig Syrup Co.

Necessary Precaution.

"What a fine-looking little boy!" exclaimed the good-natured woman to her traveling acquaintance. "How old is he?"

"You're not connected with the railroad, are you?" asked the suspicious mother.

"Certainly not."

"Not in any capacity whatever?"

"No."

"Well, just wait until the conductor gets out of bearing and I'll tell you."—Chicago Post.

RELIGIOUS BREVITIES.

D. L. Moody says he owes his conversion to the efforts of his Sunday school teacher.

The United Brethren church has recently opened a kindergarten and primary school at Ponce, Porto Rico.

There are 56 deaconess institutions in the world, comprising over 800 deaconesses and probationers.

There are now reported to be 100,000 proselytes from Judaism, and the Gospel is preached by Jewish lips in over 600 pulpits in America and Europe.

The total number of foreign missionaries, including their wives, who are doing Protestant Christian work in Japan is 692, an increase of 33 over last year.

Six hundred children, representing 15 nationalities and all creeds, attend the Five Points mission school, which occupies the site of the "Old Brewery," 63 Park street, New York city.

The average pastorate in the Presbyterian church is reported as eight years and eight months, the average service of ministers as stated supply is two years and five months, and the average of ministerial service, including both pastors and stated supplies, is five years and seven months.

Interest in the medical mission in foreign lands is constantly increasing. Natives in the north of Africa come long distances for treatment, and wild Bedouin characters, encouraged by the sultan and living in lawless independence, who tortured their own women as cattle, are singularly amenable to the women missionaries.

ALL SORTS OF USEFUL THINGS

Water is delivered gradually to the roots of plants by a new flower-pot collar, which is made of porous material, fitting around the edge of the pot and extending down inside nearly to the bottom, being filled with water to moisten the roots by percolation.

The screw covers of jars and cans can be easily removed by a new device, consisting of ears formed on opposite sides of the cover, with slots in the upper edge of the ears for the insertion of a bar or rod to twist the cover and loosen it.

A new method of attaching the ends of hat bands has been patented, consisting of stamping a piece of metal on each end of the ribbon, the metallic ends being provided with hooks to clasp them together around the crown, making a much quicker operation than sewing.

Sunken ships can be raised with little effort by the use of an Ohio man's apparatus, comprising air-tight bags of proper shape to fit the different compartments, the bags being inflated to accomplish the two-fold purpose of expelling the water and increasing the buoyancy of the ship.

Ice can be rapidly cut into cakes by an Iowa man's machine, which can be operated by either power or manual force, having a system of gears by which a circular saw is rapidly revolved, the latter being mounted at the end of a pivoted beam which can be adjusted to the proper depth.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

THE KANSAS PHILOSOPHER.

If anyone hates you, overcome his hatred by asking him for any kind of information.

Every man should have two wives—one to cook for him, and the other to amuse him after he has eaten.

Every engaged girl makes the mistake of imagining that she now has him too secure to be scared off by her appearance in curl papers.

When a watchman at a railroad crossing sees that the occupants of an approaching vehicle are lovers, he doubles his vigilance.

A terrible thing happened in town last night. A North Atchison man went home mad and couldn't find anything wrong to scold about when he got there.

The women all envy a certain Atchison woman who has bluffed her husband into the belief that she has heart disease, and is liable to drop dead if crossed in her wishes.—Atchison Globe.

To Do Better.

The greatest enemy of the best is the better. There are crises in life most fatal to man when he temporizes with self and promises to do better. To do better means a patching up, as it were, rather than doing the best. When a man is brought face to face with a crucified Saviour, to do better simply means to put Him away.—Dr. Cyrus Hamlin.

A Plan in Life.

There is a plan in every man's life, and, being a plan, it has a purpose. Nothing helps us more, nothing more certainly makes the mystery of life easier to bear, than to keep that truth firmly fixed in the mind.—Rev. W. T. Phillips.

Enterprise in Tennessee.

A WORD WITH YOU.

You no doubt already know that iron and steel have advanced more than 60 per cent. within the last few months Wagons, Plows and Machine Bolts have advanced a very large percentage. The output of the manufacturers, of which I am acting as agent, will cost at least one-half million dollars more in 1900 than the present year. This is a conspicuous reason why farmers should buy machines this year and not put it off until next.

A TERPSICHOREAN SUCCESS.

The Masons Provide the Society Function of the Year.

MIRTH and music reigned supreme at the Opera house last Wednesday evening, when the fourth annual concert and ball of the Masonic fraternity was enjoyed by many dancers and a large number of spectators, who had come to enjoy the magnificent music, note the brilliant costume display, as well as to partake of the fine repast provided by Caterer Cook of Boston.

As each succeeding event has surpassed its predecessor so the ball of 1900 was all that could be wished in point of numbers, congeniality, music, banquet, etc. The hall had been handsomely decorated with the same good taste and lack of gaudy show as has characterized the decorative work of other years, the additional electric lights in symbolic arrangement flooding the place with a brilliancy of illumination at once pleasing and appropriate, thus aiding in the general effect obtained by the handsome gowns and tasteful costuming.

The presence of an unusual number of out-of-town guests, many of whom had been here before, added to the pleasure of the occasion, renewing former acquaintances and forming new ones. It is safe to say that next year, when Franklin is connected electrically with Milford, Wrentham and the Attleboroughs, the attendance of the society people from these places will be largely augmented.

Poole's orchestra, which has been heard here before with such gratification, surely outdid itself in the excellence of its work, the fifteen artists all vieing with each other in the effort to maintain the well deserved reputation of the aggregation as being one of the best concert and ball orchestras in New England.

Their music has such a "swing" to it and is characterized by such perfection as to tone, time and tune, that it carries one right along. Indeed, it often sounds as if made by one grand instrument rather than by fifteen. The players are so directly under the sway of Leader Poole that often the strains appear to be evoked by the motions of his baton. It is superfluous, therefore, to say that the concert was thoroughly enjoyed.

As the guests arrived they were escorted to the ante rooms by attentive ushers, who made all feel at once at home, thus ensuring a certain feeling of welcome, and in a measure dispelling the usual chilliness which is so often apparent in the room "before the ball opens" The reception committee were Joseph P. Bassett, Fred P. Chapman, Henry A. Talbot, George R. Winsor, Charles F. Nye, William H. Sweatt, Harry T. Hayward.

After the concert the dancers formed for the grand march and circle, the handsome costumes and the conventional dress suit, without exception, making a picture striking in the extreme The march was led by the worthy master of the lodge, George R. Winsor, and Mrs. Winsor To the strains of the march music the couples, about seventy in number, circled the hall and executed a number of movements in twos, fours and eights, the kaleidoscopic colors and changes being very attractive to the eye. Then the dancing commenced, continuing till about 11 30, when the banquet was announced.

As in previous years the tables were spread in Central square hall, thus admitting entrance to the room without leaving the building. Here the sight was remarkably beautiful. The tables were illuminated with handsome silver candelabra, and the fine china, toothsome viands, frozen delicacies and appetising dainties would tempt even the most confirmed dyspeptic to forswear his resolution not to partake. No finer banquet has been spread in town, and each guest affirmed that Caterer Cook and his efficient waiters had fairly outdone themselves.

Succeeding the banquet the dancers returned to the hall where music and mirth held sway till after 2 o'clock, and no one confessed weariness. Only the labors of the coming day compelled a cessation of the occasion's enjoyment.

Palmer A. Woodward, who officiated so acceptably last year, was again master of ceremonies, and his efficient aids proved most satisfactory officials. They were: Leroy W. Stott, A. Burt Palmer, Marston Sanborn, Ernest D. Daniels, Walter C. Sherman, Charles B. Hussey.

That our Masonic brethren provide a dance that is divested as far as possible of every objectional feature is attested by the attendants and the continually increasing number from out of town, many of whom assert that they should very much dislike to miss one of these most enjoyable occasions. This is emphasized by the fact that each year they return to enjoy these social functions. Among some of those from out of town this year were the following:

Woonsocket—Mr. and Mrs. Levi Lincoln, Miss Flossie Lincoln, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Marty, Harry Jillson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Thayer, Eugene Hamlett, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Prue, Mr and Mrs James Staples, Lattimer W. Ballou, Miss Louisa Ballou, Miss Florence Bullock, Eugene Getchell, Dr and Mrs. E D. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. John L Burden, Miss Edna Wartield, Arthur Ballou, Ariel Edwards, Charles Parker, Miss Grace Hamlett, L. B. Swratt, Miss Grace Pond, Miss Jennie Sayles, Charles Wheelock. Walpole—George Graves, James Miller, Miss Sarah Hartshorn, S. T. Moore, Miss Elizabeth Stone, E B. Schuyler, J. S. Leach, Charles Allen, Philip Allen, Mr. and Mrs Robert Hartshorn, Charles Gilmore, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Merrick Medway—Dr and Mrs. Charles F. Hamlin, Mr and Mrs. W. L. Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Parks, ex Senator and Mrs. Clarke P. Harding, Miss Snow. Attleboro — Miss Edith Smith, Miss Blanche Gowen. North Attleboro—Mr. and Mrs. Alton Riley, Fred Howlands. Providence—Charles Ray, Fred V. Hussey, Blakeley Smith. Wrentham—Fred Gilmore, Charles Gilmore. Miss Etta Razee of Southbridge, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sweatt of City Mills, J. E. Moran of Chelsea, Dr. T. H. Moran of Boston, Miss Bughee of Willimantic, Miss Wilson of New York state, Miss Atkins of Quincy, Miss Brownell of Ware.

The Baptist Roll Call.

There was a large attendance Tuesday evening as both church and congregation were invited. The exercises began by the audience standing and singing, "Blest be the Tie that Binds." Prayer was offered by Rev. G W. Nead of Norwood. After two persons had been voted in by letter the list of church members was called by the clerk, Thomas A. Clark. There were fine solos by Miss Lillian Coleman, Miss Fanny Darling, Miss Hattie Bly and an instrumental duet by Bert Briggs and Robert Culgin. Mrs. M A. Sleeper and Mrs. Ethel Carr gave interesting readings.

Rev. G. W. Nead was introduced and spoke words of hearty congratulation on the great progress of the past year and the bright prospects for the future, saying that Pastor Sleeper's name ought to be changed to Sleepless. He spoke of the 90,000 gain in membership in the Baptist denomination in the previous year. Rev. A. B. Lorimer of Woonsocket gave a fine address setting forth the urgent demand for loyalty to Christ and to the church of our own faith, and to the purest principles of the gospel.

Coffee and cake were served and a social time enjoyed. It was an ideal Roll Call, combining the elements of religious devotion with those of literary and social life, and inspiring greater interest in the congregation in the spiritual work of the church. Early in the evening the pastor, Rev. Frank B. Sleeper, read the following poem which he had written for this occasion:

THE YEAR 1900.

Our Roll Call summons us once more
Within this dedicated place,
Where the redeemed their Lord adore
And seek His constant, helpful grace.

The saints are gathered here tonight,
With songs of joy, and praise and love.
To dwell upon the vision bright
Revealed to us from heaven above.

Leading our band there is a person,
Who never fails us in our need;
Upright and true—Deacon McPherson,
Noble in thought, and word and deed.

God spare him for long years to come,
God keep him ever well and strong,
While larger victory here is won
Over all sin and earthly wrong.

Surely, our prospect is not dark,
With officers so true and kind;
Heaven bless our Deacon Thomas Clark,
A man of pure, exalted mind.

Two deacons, one in holy thought,
Two deacons, one in work divine;
Grandly together they have wrought,
That here the gospel light might shine.

Young Martin holds the helm all right,
Our finances kept well in charge;
An honest lawyer, able, bright,
With future prospects grand and large.

Two more with us have nobly stood
In constant service, pure and brave;
Father and son—their name Greenwood—
Anxious their fellowmen to save.

This house of God, again we share it
With one who toiled here hard and long;
We welcome back our Deacon Barrett,
Whose heart is warm, whose hands are strong.

We choose to be a working church,
We are not like dumb cattle driven,
Nor subject to a hapless lurch,
And not by wicked schism riven.

Not we ashamed of our own creed,
Based on the Holy Book divine,
That satisfies the soul's great need
With things eternal and sublime.

God grant this church shall ever be
A tower of His most wondrous grace,
Strong in His truth and majesty,
To fill her holy, ordained place.

The Last Sleep.

" When round my bier ye come to weep
Let me, most loving of you all,
Say, 'Not a tear must o'er her fall—
He giveth His beloved sleep.' "
E. B. Browning.

Into a house almost oppressive with the odor of flowers, so many were the floral remembrances, came the mourning relatives and friends of Miss Rachel M. Thayer on Wednesday afternoon to pay their last tribute of love to one whose memory was so dear. About the rooms everywhere were articles of hers or those reminding one of her, the banjo with the broken string expressing mutely its story of the one who had gone.

Her pastor, Rev. Dr. Sneath, referred to her in a most sympathetic and helpful manner, bringing out the thought that one's work must not be measured by the years; God knoweth best when the life work is accomplished. His prayer touched everyone deeply, bringing comfort to aching hearts and speaking consolation to those whose cherished hopes had been so suddenly blighted.

Rev Mr. Rand of Watertown was in his most sympathetic mood. He had known the deceased intimately and was thus able to pay a loving tribute to the many qualities which had endeared her to him and to others. He pictured her meeting with the loved ones gone before, and with tender words of sympathy and hope foreshadowed the time when hearts now broken with grief should be reunited in a union which should have no end.

The Harvard quartet of Boston rendered "Eternal Goodness," "Meet Me There," and "Sleep On, Beloved" in a most exquisite manner, bringing tears to the eyes of the listeners. So sweetly did they sing and with such pathos that their music will not soon be forgotten.

Schoolmates of hers at Dean, six young men, bore the casket to its resting place, the last service which it would be in their power to render their beloved associate. They were: C. L. Butnam, Arthur Marshall, R. G. Bicknell, M. H. Harris, W. H. Towles. Earle J. Jenness.

The funeral was in charge of William A. Wyckoff and of Mrs. S. H. Frost, the latter having entire charge of the floral decorations One touching incident was a request of Miss Angie Marion, whose relationship with "Little Rachel" dated back to babyhood. Coming to the house about an hour before service she asked the privilege of placing a bunch of sixteen pinks just where she wished. The privilege being granted, she placed them in the left hand of her loved one.

It is doubtful if at any funeral in town there were so many beautiful and expressive floral remembrances, testifying in a marked degree to the feelings of the donors to their young friend. Silently they spoke of the departed one, whose life had been so full of sunshine, and music, and flowers.

Those from the family were very beautiful, as also were the contributions from friends, some of which were as follows:

Bride roses, Miss Clara B. Woolford, Dean; American Beauty roses, the teachers at Dean; wreath of Jacquiminot roses, Miss Marjorie Ray; pink roses, Samuel M. Goodrich, Providence; wreath of white roses, Edward E. Howard, Boston; roses and ferns, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. They Will Not Do It.

It will be remembered that Rev. W. W. Shenk, former pastor of the Methodist church here, was one of the nine students who left B. U. School of Theology on account of alleged heretical teachings of Prof. Mitchell

When these students withdrew, one of their number, W. E Verity, entered the Drew Theological seminary at Madison, N. J., thinking that he and his copartners were free to go where they pleased, as they withdrew of their own accord.

After a few days the Drew Theological School faculty received a statement from the Boston University faculty, saying that none of the men who had withdrawn from the Boston school would receive an honorable dismissal, nor would they be credited with the work they had already accomplished on the course.

Upon receiving this the faculty immediately terminated Mr Verity's connection with the school, and passed a vote that no more students from Boston University could enter Drew seminary without a proper paper honorably dismissing them from Boston University.

It will be impossible for them to enter any theological school in the United States without first withdrawing their names from a series of specific charges drawn up and sent to the faculty of B. U. on the day of their withdrawal. This they will not do

Nearing Boston.

Arrangements have been pending for some time between the Milford, Holliston & Framingham company, the Norfolk Western, the Medfield & Medway, and other companies interested, with a view to running through cars from Milford to Forest Hills, where they will connect with the service of the Boston Elevated street railway company It is understood that arrangements to this end have been so far completed that an agreement has been reached in the matter, and that if a grade crossing is allowed at Medfield it will be possible before the approach of summer weather for Franklin people to take an electric car here and ride practically to the Boston city limits without change of cars. The trip would take a passenger into at least ten towns, would traverse a section showing a great variety of scenery.

With the completion next summer of the lines to Milford and the Medways, Franklin's position as an electric railway center will have been greatly strengthened, her advantages for residence and trade improved, and the town will be nearer its manifest destiny.

FRIDAY, JAN. 19, 1900.

Probably what was the most unique celebration ever given a home coming soldier from the Philippines occurred at Mulvane, Kan., a few days ago. Private E. W. Philipps, of company H, Tenth Pennsylvania, had written home from the Philippines that he would give a month's salary for a piece of mother's pie. He said all the other boys in his regiment were in the same fix. Just before Philipps reached Mulvane the women of the town joined together and cooked a pie six feet in length and four feet wide. It was placed on a table in the center of the opera house and all the people in town gathered to meet the returning soldier. The condition was made that he eat the whole pie that night.

Some university men are notoriously slovenly in the matter of dress, probably as a protest against the swagger of the city clerk. The question of whether it is worth while to keep up appearances has been recently a subject of discussion in the London Telegraph, and the Cambridge Union Debating society has just decided that it is not desirable to do so. In their protest against the dude the Cantabs have probably gone too far. There is a great difference between swagger and self-respect; between the man who tries to appear twice as wealthy as he really is and the man who desires to maintain his proper position as a social unit.

A St. Louis girl who went to a party recently got mixed up in a kissing game and now has a sad case of blood poisoning to deal with. The young man who named her as "it" not only kissed her but bit her on one of her cheeks till the blood came, the result being that she is now in the care of doctors. We have no comments to make, says a Chicago exchange, we merely set forth the facts, and girls who think of being kissed by St. Louis men can govern themselves accordingly.

In a Gardiner (Me.) office building, which is inhabited by several jokers, an old pocketbook was kicked around the corridors for nearly a week, everybody supposing it was a dummy. Then one day a stranger from the country came along, picked up and opened the old wallet, and found therein $55 in cash. Now the joke is on the jokers.

A man in New York struck by lightning said that the sensation was like that of a violent blow on the head with a baseball bat. His impression is confirmed by the fact that the chair on which he sat was smashed into splinters. It must have felt like a home run strike too.

The lumber industry of the northwest is in an exceedingly prosperous condition. It is reported that the total value of the output of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota is $80,000,000 annually.

Figures collected from the manufacturers of clothing go to show that during the past ten years the girth of the average American citizen who wears "pants" has increased from 46 to 47¼ inches.

An Ohio couple who have been twice divorced have made up for the third time and renewed their marriage vows. There is in this case an example of the pernicious effect of habit.

LIZARDS.

In captivity the lizard does well on meat diet, but seems to require a change of food; small particles of raw beef every few days appear to contain nourishment of the right kind when insect food is missing.

The scaly and the sand lizards are the most common of the English lizards, and both seem to need the presence of water, yet they like dry quarters and a cold, wet day will see every one of them vanish.

Lizards are little studied and little known. In Shakespeare's day they were branded as venomous and in England to-day country people hold them in awe. The forked tongue and serpentine movement add to the fear in which they are held.

It is the tongue of the lizard which does most execution and secures the prey of which it is in quest, more especially flies and spiders, which fall a ready victim to its sudden dart; caterpillars are not above the lizard's attention and small earthworms are a favorite food, the great power of the lizard enabling it to force its way under any stones and roots in search of food.

The skinning of the lizard is an event well worth watching, beginning at the ears and progressing gradually tailward, taking about a week or ten days in progress. The skin is shed in sections of perhaps half an inch in length, and, going right around the body in the case of the sand lizard, measures quite two inches in breadth. The sand lizard seems in no way inconvenienced in the process and scrambles about with half-shed skin as agilely as before; nor does his grip of claw or mouth appear to suffer at all by the transaction.

HANDLING CORN FODDER.

When Cut at the Right Time, and Properly Cured, It Is a Mine of Wealth to Farmers.

Corn fodder is not an article of commerce, but as a feed it is worth about as much, acre for acre, as hay. In order to get the most out of corn fodder it is necessary for the farmer to keep stock enough to consume it all and to cut, cure and save it in the best possible condition. It should be cut when most of the husks have turned brown. If cut earlier it is apt to be injured by molding in the shock or by warm rains before it is thoroughly cured. If it is left standing too long it declines steadily in value as a feed until it is worthless. Shocks should contain from 1[illegible] to [illegible] hills. Smaller shocks leave too much of the fodder exposed to the action of the air, sunshine and rains which injure the outer leaves and stalks. As soon as the corn will do to crib it should be husked, the fodder shredded and run into a mow in the barn; it is then secure from injury and is in the very best form to feed and also to use as bedding. The cheapest way to husk and shred the fodder is to use a machine which does both at one operation. Shredded fodder will not make animals' mouths sore as that cut in short pieces does. Another good method of caring for fodder is to tie it in bundles as it is husked, and haul it into the barn or stack it in long, narrow ricks that can be used from the end as wanted. If the bundles are set up in the field in large shocks and securely tied, the fodder will keep well nearly all winter. Fodder left standing in the field to be gleaned over by the stock is mostly wasted and is a nuisance on any farm. It is also hard to plow under for the next crop and it is an expensive job to break it off, rake and burn it. When cut, properly cured and cared for, and fed to stock, corn fodder is a mine of wealth.—Evan L. Chalfant, in Prairie Farmer.

Opening of the Florida Season.

The placing in service of "The New York and Florida Limited" of the Southern railway, the handsomest train in the world, always signifies the opening of the Florida social season. This superb train left New York on its initial trip for the season of 1900 Tuesday, Jan. 16, at 12 40 p. m., and will run daily, except Sunday, throughout the season, reaching St. Augustine at 3 35 the next afternoon. The train is composed exclusively of compartment cars, finished in royal elegance; Pullman drawing room sleeping cars, constructed especially for this train, a sumptuous dining car and library and observation cars. It runs through solid to St. Augustine except one drawing room sleeping car, which is detached at Columbia, S. C., and runs through to Aiken and Augusta for the convenience of travelers to these popular resorts. One car is also detached at Jacksonville and runs through to Tampa and Port Tampa, on the west coast, where direct connection is made with Plant Line steamships for Key West and Havana. "The New York and Florida Limited" affords passengers the most delightful way of reaching Florida resorts under conditions of the greatest comfort and speed, and it is universally acknowledged that it illustrates, more than any other train in the world, the wonderful development which has been made in construction and elegance in railroad equipment. In addition to the "New York and Florida Limited" the Southern railway also operates two other daily trains to Florida. One of these, the "U. S. Fast Mail," leaves New York at 12 10 a. m. every day in the week. This train carries Pullman drawing room sleeping cars through to Jacksonville, St. Augustine and Miami, connecting with steamer for Nassau, Key West and Havana. Meals are served in dining car. The other, the "New York and Florida Express," leaves New York at 3.25 p. m. daily, and carries Pullman drawingroom sleeping cars to Jacksonville and Port Tampa. Like the other trains, it has a dining car service. The Southern railway runs through the charming Piedmont region of Virginia and its entire route is most picturesque and attractive. Its road-bed and equipment are up the highest standard of excellence. Full information, reservations, rates, etc., may be had by applying to the offices of the Southern railway, 228 Washington street, Boston, Geo. C. Daniels, N. E. P. A.

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says: "I was taken with typhoid fever that ran into pneumonia. My lungs became hardened; I was so weak I couldn't even sit up in bed; nothing helped me; I expected to soon die of consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief; I continued to use it and am now well and strong; I can't say too much in its praise." The Return of the Volunteers.

Oh! all the flags are flying,
And all the drums are beating,
The air is full of color,
And rings with happy greeting,
As the soldier boys come marching,
Through the old familiar places,
God help us, who in silence
Hide our pallid, grief-worn faces.

He knows we thank and bless Him,
For those we see returning,
And none but He can measure
The heart-break and the yearning,
For feet that went full gladly,
And lips that smiled in going,
How lonely is their slumber,
When soft sea-winds are blowing.

Our eyes are dark with sorrow,
We see the ranks but blindly;
If we cannot lift our voices
Still think upon us kindly.
None give you greater honor,
O men, by outward token,
Than we who sit in silence
That never shall be broken.
—A. E. Woodworth, in Chicago Advance.

By the Patter of His Feet.

I can tell my little boy
By the patter of his feet,
Whether in the bare old kitchen,
Or upon the village street.
I can tell the restless footfall
Just wherever it may be,
Whether with a dozen urchins,
Or with only two or three.

I know not how I know it,
That is hidden e'en from me,
So I cannot tell to others
The sweet little mystery—
Like the secret of the sunlight,
Shining on the happy earth,
Like the secret of dear childhood
Filled with artless gentle mirth.

Shall I know my precious boy
By the stepping of his feet,
After years have left their sunlight
On his fair and manly cheek?
May his footfall have the music
Of the holy days of youth,
May my boy walk forever
In the way of right and truth.

The Great Sailing Race.

We are sailing, we know not whither,
Into the great Somewhere.
And we have no charts of the dangers
That loom or are hidden there;
And some of us lag or hurry,
And some of us only worry,
And some of us never care.

We are sailing on life's broad ocean,
And each has his little bark,
And here and there is a sailor
Who steers by some steadfast mark;
And many a rudder is never
At any service whatever,
In the daylight or the dark.

We are going, we know not whither,
And some of us trim our sails
For all the changes of weather,
For calms or fair winds or gales,
And here and there is one lagging,
Whose canvas is ragged and sagging,
And he is the one who fails.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

NOTES ON DRIVING.

A Four-Horse and a Three-Horse Hitch Described and Illustrated by an Expert.

Many and various are the methods of driving horses with the three and four-horse lines. The arrangement shown in Fig. 1 is the only true way to drive four horses abreast with two lines, and after using them once a person will not want to try any other way, as it gives a direct line on three of the horses' bits. Use the ordinary lines (c d) for the two inside horses, and long run straps to connect the outside horses, as from a to b in illustration. Fasten the outside horse to the inside ones by means of a rope or strap, or these may be fastened together in hame rings with halter straps, as the horses work best.

A FOUR-HORSE HITCH.

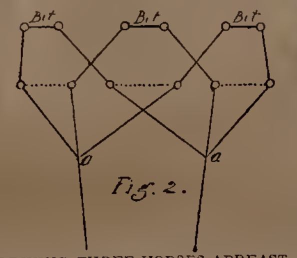

Fig. 2.
DRIVING THREE HORSES ABREAST.

The correct way for using three horses with two lines is shown in Fig. 2. The lines proper should be used on the outside horses. The run straps are the same as in Fig. 1, and are used by crossing over the withers of the middle horse and passing through the hame rings and fastening into the bits (a to b), as in Fig. 2.—R. A. Osborn, in Farm and Home.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY.

Universal Introduction of the System Must Lead to the Construction of Better Roads.

The Chicago Record in a recent issue gives an interesting resume of the operation of numerous free rural delivery routes in Montgomery county, Ind., a typical community of the middle west. It has demonstrated that all of them have been operated to the entire satisfaction of the Indiana people enjoying the convenience, and also of the post office department. The Record's correspondent gives figures which sufficiently vindicate the action of the department. The routes are about 30 miles long. During the first month of the delivery each of the carriers delivered about 1,600 pieces of mail matter; at the end of the first year they were delivering more than 5,000 pieces a month. During the first three months they would each collect from eight to ten letters daily; now they collect 50 to 60 daily, besides many packages. Facts are cited to show the many improvements that have come about, and the three most significant are those which show the concrete fact that farms have raised in value, the department is receiving a net profit of $40 per month and that the convenience has stimulated the building of two new macadamized roads to induce the government to establish more routes. With these roads and without the free delivery system has come a greater value to the farms lying along them than has come to those with free delivery and poor roads, and the net result has been a larger and more vital interest in the movement that was first inaugurated by the League of American Wheelmen.

It will only be a matter of time, and a comparatively short time at that, when the motor vehicle will assume large proportions in this matter of free rural mail delivery. Already the bicycle has become the one great feature, but in the system necessarily in vogue and that will be greatly extended in its operation and in its mileage its value must needs have its limitations because of the carrying capacity of the machine and the mileage ability of the letter carrier.

Territory having good roads and free delivery will show so marked an increase in land values over adjacent sections that have not these signs of progress and prosperity that the local fathers will have before them selfish inducements to advance the cause that the wheelmen have so long and unselfishly fought for. It would be strictly within reason and should not be beyond the province of the postal department to make it a sine qua non that to be without roads would mean to be without free delivery. Under such conditions matters would soon assume a shape that would promise the gridironing of the country with roads in place of muck holes. When this comes about motorists will enjoy every advantage that could be wished for, and from so simple a thing as a postage stamp would come a large impetus to the newest of industries.—Cleveland Cycling Gazette.

No Right to Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble her impure blood will cause pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvet skin, rich complexion. It will make a good looking, charming woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50c. at A. C. Mason & Co.'s drug store.

Help...
Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL
WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

Just Singing.

When clouds threw shadows o'er the sky,
And all the world seemed like a sigh,
He found a ray of sunshine by
Just singing!

Not that his heart was happy—no!
But, like a river in its flow,
The music ever made it so—
Just singing!

And cheeks forgot the falling tear,
And souls in valleys dim drew near—
Crept to him in the dark to hear
That singing!

It led from grief, and gloom, and loss—
It led from seas where billows toss,
To light, illumining the cross—
That singing!

Sing! Sing! When sound the stormy knells,
When high the darkening tempest swells;
Sing! Sing! and hear the harbor-bells
Just singing!
—Atlanta Constitution.

A Morning Prayer.

Let me to-day do something that shall take
A little sadness from the world's vast store,
And may I be so favored as to make
Of joy's too scanty sum a little more.

Let me not hurt, by any selfish deed
Or thoughtless word, the heart of foe or friend;
Nor would I pass, unseeing, worthy need,
Or sin by silence where I would defend.

However meager be my worldly wealth,
Let me give something that shall aid my kind,
A word of courage, or a thought of health,
Dropped as I pass for troubled hearts to find.

Let me to-night look back across the span
'Twixt dawn and dark, and to my conscience say—
Because of some good act to beast or man—
"The world is better that I lived to-day."
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in Youth's Companion.

A Little Word.

She smiled upon him when they met,
He said a little word or two.
The sun in golden glory set,
She smiled upon him when they met,
That night they parted with regret.
What wondrous things a word will do!
She smiled upon him when they met,
He said a little word or two

But he had said her hair was red—
In truth it was an auburn hue—
A gossip told! Her passion fled!
Once he had said her hair was red,
The happiness he had is dead—
Ah, what a little word will do!
Once he had said her hair was red,
In truth it was of auburn hue

CRANBERRY PATCHES.

How to Utilize Waste Places on Farms Where There Is a Perennial Spring or Brook.

On a well-tilled farm between cultivated fields was a mud-hole covering an eighth of an acre, caused by the spreading out of the brook. The farmer believed in utilizing the waste places and making every part of the farm contribute to the general purpose. The spring from which came the brook could not be interfered with because it produced excellent water and was worth more than anything that could be grown in the meadow, for after passing through the swamp it ran into a trough in the pasture where the cattle had access to it.

There were several ways of improving this meadow and of giving the water from the spring uninterrupted flow, but all were costly except the one decided upon. He made a cranberry bog of the meadow. It costs about $300 an acre to make a good bog, but it pays. Several things are necessary, and one of them is facility for flooding in the fall to prevent damage by early frosts. In this bit of meadow the farmer raised cranberries as large as cherries, always welcome to any table, and always in demand in the market, especially when sugar is low. Wherever there is a perennial spring or brook (heaven help the farm that has neither) there are usually moist, untillable places, but exactly adapted to cranberry culture. Put in a few cranberry plants, for cranberry sauce is sauce for anything. It is more than sauce; it is food, and may be just the medicine the system needs.—George Appleton, in Farm and Fireside.

Economy with Fallen Apples.

There is much waste in the common practice of turning hogs into orchards to pick up fruit and make that their exclusive diet. The hog will soon learn to eat only the ripened fruit, saving that which is wormy. This fruit can be sold or dried, and if forced to do it the hog will eat the wormy fruit before the worm escapes. But to make this really economical some grain and milk should be given to hogs in addition to their fruit diet. This will make the young pigs grow and will strengthen their digestion for the exclusive corn feeding that will come when they are put up to be fattened.

Green Crops for the Orchard.

Bare soil soon loses its humus and becomes infertile. This must be prevented. Here is one way of preventing it: Plow the orchard in the spring, cultivate both ways and keep all weeds down till September 1, at which time the soil will be in fine condition for a seed bed. Sow rye at the rate of two bushels per acre. This will cover the ground well before winter, and therefore protect the ground from blowing or hard freezing during the winter. Let the rye stand till knee-high in the spring, then turn under and proceed with clean cultivation through the summer.

What We Eat

Is intended to nourish and sustain us, but it must be digested and assimilated before it can do this. In other words the nourishment contained in food must be separated by the digestive organs from the waste materials and must be carried by the blood to all parts of the body. We believe the reason for the great benefit which so many people derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla lies in the fact that this medicine gives good digestion and makes pure, rich blood. It restores the functions of those organs which convert food into nourishment that gives strength to nerves and muscles. It also cures dyspepsia, scrofula, salt rheum, boils, sores, pimples and eruptions, catarrh, rheumatism and all diseases that have their origin in impure blood.

BICYCLES AND DOGS.

Wheelmen Have Some Rights Which the Owners of Vicious Canines Must Protect.

The civil tribunal of the Seine recently decided a point which will be of intense interest to the cyclists of New York, who have been so pestered and worried by barking and snapping dogs along the cycle paths of the city and country roads of the suburbs. The Paris court has decided that the owners of dogs may be held responsible for injuries received by bicyclists when falls are due to dogs.

The test case was that of a dog belonging to a resident of the Bougival, who ran after a wheelman barking and snapping at his feet and legs.

In chasing the troublesome animal the cyclist lost his balance, fell from his wheel and broke a very valuable cigarette case which he carried in his pocket.

The cyclist claimed 500 francs damages from the owner of the annoying animal. The case was hotly contested, as it was looked upon as a test one, and the court finally awarded the plaintiff 200 francs damages.—N. Y. Herald.

Automobiles in France.

The Boston Herald publishes this extract from a private letter describing the Paris automobiles: "We went to Fontainebleau, five in the party, for breakfast, 4[illegible] miles in three hours, and such a ride! We came back by a longer route, 48 miles, in the same time, through the forest at sunset and along the Seine in the moonlight. Fancy going [illegible] miles for breakfast and enjoying it—that is, 80 miles by road. I have always detested automobiles, but for quick traveling they beat everything I have ever tried. They have the automobile coupes and victorias in the streets here. I mean the public ones, at the same tariff as the other carriages.

Tremont Theatre.

Miss Mary Sanders, the young, bright, pretty, clever and fascinating little actress, who is one of the most popular impersonators of ingenues on the contemporary stage, and is universally regarded as a worthy successor to the genius and the roles of the famous Lotta, will begin on Monday, Jan. 22, at the Tremont theatre, a starring tour in "Little Nell and the Marchioness,' a new dramatization by Harry P. Mawson, of Dickens' famous novel, "The Old Curiosity Shop,' which competent critics have declared the best ever made. Miss Sanders, of course, will play the dual role of Little Nell and the Marchioness, which is well calculated to display her unquestioned abilities, her remarkable versatility and charming personality. Her supporting company has been selected with great care, and includes such well known artists as Max Figman, P. Augustus Anderson, Harold Hartsell, John Jack, William Seymour, Charles Stanley, H. J. Holliday Aubrey Beattie, Misses Anne Caverly, Mary Mackenzie, Lilly Eldredge and Mollie Revell. The piece is staged by William Seymour, and set with beautiful new scenery, and the production is as complete as unremitting attention, untiring effort and lavish expenditure can make it.

When you see people cured by a remedy, you must believe in its power. Look around you. Friends, relatives, neighbors all say that Hood's Sarsaparilla, America's Greatest Medicine, cleansed the blood of their dear ones and they rise en masse to sing its praises. There's nothing like it in the world to purify the blood.

SUPERIOR COURT.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court, holden at Dedham within and for the county of Norfolk:

Respectfully represents Abbie M Darling of Franklin, in said county, that on the first day of January, A. D. 1888, at said Franklin, she was lawfully married to Nathan E. Darling, now of Providence, in the state of Rhode Island; that thereafterward your libellant and said Nathan E. Darling lived together as husband and wife in this commonwealth, to wit: At said Franklin and at Wrentham, in said county, and in said Providence; that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations, but the said Nathan E. Darling being wholly regardless of the same on or about the twenty-seventh day of September, A. D. 1896, at said Franklin, wilfully and utterly deserted your libellant and has continued such desertion for more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel.

And your libellant further says that the said Nathan E. Darling, being of sufficient ability, has grossly, wantonly and cruelly refused and neglected to provide a suitable maintenance for her.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Nathan E. Darling, and that such further orders and decrees may be made in the premises as to your Honors may seem just and reasonable.

Dated at said Franklin the thirtieth day of December, A. D. 1899.

The controlling interest in the Milford-South Framingham electric road has been sold to New Haven parties. The new company declares its intention to extend the Medway branch four miles to Medfield, there to connect with the Dedham & Medfield road for Forest Hills. There was a large gathering of young people at the summer dress party given under the auspices of the U. T. D. S. at Foresters' hall last evening, and the event was a pleasing social success. Guests were present from Boston, Milford, the Attleboros, the Medways, Woonsocket and Walpole, and the dancing continued until after 2 o'clock this morning, an hour's intermission being taken for refreshments. A sad and sudden death was that of Miss Medora A. Rockwood on Saturday morning. She had been suffering from a cold for some time, but was able to be about. She arose that morning, but was compelled to return to bed. A physician was summoned, and pronounced the case pneumonia. She died about 9 o'clock. She was a member of the Congregational church, a faithful and earnest member of the Christian Endeavor, and beloved by all who knew her for her Christian bearing and sweet, gentle disposition. A mother and sister survive her. The funeral was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock, her pastor, Rev. Dr. Sneath, officiating. The quartette was composed of the Misses Whiting, and the Messrs. Hosford and Hartshorne, and many remembered the deceased with floral gifts.

The Christian View.

Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath addressed his people last Sabbath morning upon the theme "Chastened but Loved," basing his remarks upon Hebrews 12: 6, "For whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." He said: A smooth sea never made a skillful mariner. Michael Angelo never produced his Moses out of stone by fondling the marble, but by chiselling it. God never made a Christian fit for the realms of eternal delight by simply loving and sweetly caressing him, but by chastening and scourging. Pain is God's angel of love. Wherever there is suffering in the life of a Christian there you will discover the clue-thread to the heart of God.

It is a law of the spiritual life that God manifests His love through suffering. This law is as old as religion. It must not be inferred that there are not other ways in which He reveals His love to man, nor must it be inferred that chastisement is the result of God's sore displeasure. He does punish sin and disobedience. But there is a vital distinction between punishment for sin and scourging for disciplinary purposes. Punishment is the attitude of justice toward disobedience and is administered primarily for the welfare of society. Secondarily it may seek the reclaimation of the criminal. Chastisement from the Father on the other hand is sent by God out of His infinite love. He must love us to afflict us and the chastisement is for our larger fruitfulness here and our perfection of character hereafter. He is too wise to err, too good to be unkind, and only out of His infinite wisdom and love does He cause us to bear the discipline of trial. There is no malice or revenge or delight in suffering which moves the heart of God. It is His love and the end sought is our perfection of character and fruitfulness.

The rationality of such a course on the part of God becomes evident through analogy from nature and from the testimony of the scriptures. The bar of steel in the hands of the smith passes through a severe ordeal before it becomes a perfect and useful tool. The florist causes the rose plant to experience a life of sacrifice that it may bear a wealth of more perfect roses. The lawn which receives continuous cuttings is greener and more beautiful in consequence thereof. The clearest glass attains its perfection of transparency by passing through the hottest fires. And so the Christian is not punished, but disciplined by chastisement for his perfection, and these scourgings are always the appointments of God's love. Christ was made "perfect through suffering," and we can only become "like Him" by passing through the same experience. Philosophy also assures us that pain is not an evil, but a blessing, and ever seeks beneficent ends. In view of these testimonies from nature, philosophy and revelation it is not irrational to say that "a heart without sorrows would be a heart without the sweetest revelations man can receive from above." Let us learn the great lesson of life. God loves his children. His love sends the chastisement, not as punishment, but as the means of a larger fruitfulness and of the development to a perfect life. The constituent elements of illuminating gas are the same as those in the oil of roses, taken from our most fragrant roses. A life full of iniquity may become a life like Christ's, but the individual must pass through the alembic of suffering which the love of God provides.

Incalculably Helpful.

The special revival services at the M. E. church closed with the very helpful meeting of Saturday evening, though, as Pastor Cook announced Sunday morning, the special revival efforts will be continued indefinitely; the Sunday evening 7 o'clock service and the Friday evening prayer meeting will be especially evangelistic; the church is now just ready to begin work. Sunday twelve persons were received to probationary membership and several others are expected to follow very soon, but this indicates only a small portion of the benefit accruing to the church through this series of meetings. The hearts of the members have warmed toward the Lord and toward each other; they have been revived, invigorated and interested in the work for the Master, and a new spiritual activity must surely result. Temporally, a new era of prosperity is promised. With the recent repairs on the church interior, all bills practically met and arrangements about completed for firstclass music the outlook for the people's church was never better. The start made by Rev. W. W. Shenk has been faithfully and successfully pushed forward by his successor, Rev. S Arthur Cook, and a larger amount of even more vital work accomplished. He has proven himself the man for the occasion. Strangers in town and any having no church home will find here a cordial welcome and a pure, straight gospel. All seats free at all services. R.

Mrs. Charles Rand will shortly canvass for a life of Moody.

An Active Life Ended.

The funeral of Frederick Eugene Aldrich will take place tomorrow afternoon at 1 30 from his late residence on Summer street. Rev. Mr. Miner will read the Episcopal service and Rev. Dr. Hodge will make the funeral address. Friends who desire are invited to attend, but it was the wish of the deceased that no floral remembrances be sent.

Mr. Aldrich had been sick since September, 1898, with progressive and pernicious anaemia, and his death was not entirely unexpected. He was born in Cumberland, R. I., June 4, 1849, and was educated in the public schools. For a number of years he was a salesman for, and later a partner with, Frederick Thayer of Woonsocket, the business being in Millville. He came to Franklin in 1889, where he was occupied as a dealer in flocks, shoddy and wool waste, in which he built up a very gratifying business.

He was married in Walpole, Oct. 31, 1878, to Miss Emily F. Munn, two daughters having been born to them, Mabel H. and Emily M. Aldrich. After removing to Franklin he purchased the property on Summer street, remodeled it, built a large storehouse and maintained one of the best kept establishments in town. He was energetic, of quick perceptions, knew exactly what he wanted, and was thoroughly honest and upright. In business transactions he was quick to perceive and take advantage of his opportunities, and had amassed a comfortable competency.

He held no public office, though a number had been tendered him. He was an attendant at the Universalist church, and an official of that body, his counsels being regarded as of worth and the result of acute perceptions and good judgment. Franklin can ill afford to lose such men.

Why He Didn't Get In.

He stood before St. Peter and meekly applied for admission to the Better Land.

"Cannot admit you, sir."

"Can't admit me!" exclaimed the dismayed aspirant. "Haven't I obeyed the laws of the land?"

"Oh, yes."

"What then has been my offense?"

"You wanted to stop your newspaper, and instead of dropping a line to the publisher and paying arrearages, you had the postmaster send him a message to the effect that his paper was refused. A man so contemptible would find no company in heaven; so please move on below."—Exchange.

The Town Reports.

The town officers should generally bear in mind the fact that during the last two or three years there has been a growing feeling on the part of the voters that the annual financial reports should be issued earlier, so that they may be studied in advance of the town meetings, to the end that when the voters assemble together for the transaction of business they may be better informed as to what ought to be done. To that end Auditor Woodward is endeavoring to get his "copy" into our hands so that we may get the reports out at least a week before the meeting, if possible.

A Musical Treat.

Manager S. J. Treitel and Secretary J. H. Rickard, Jr., of the Piacere Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar club, were in town last week making arrangements for a concert in Odd Fellows' hall for the early part of next month. Local society people are interested and two large trolley parties from Woonsocket are expected.

The Woonsocket papers praise the Piacere club highly. The precise date is to be announced later.

The Moody Biography.

R. B. Stewart has taken the agency for the Moody book, and the following letter from Mr. Moody's son will explain itself:

DEAR SIRS—Since making the arrangements for the publication of the authorized biography of my father I have been surprised to see the very misleading statements of other publishers that they are preparing biographies with our approval. I want to assure you that all these claims are false and calculated to deceive the public, as we have given our consent to none of these works and they are not "approved by the family and friends" of my father. I would also state that without exception we have expressed our regret at the multiplication of these works which have been prepared in spite of our urgent protest.

I felt that this statement was due to you in view of these false announcements which are the source of great annoyance to us all. Yours truly,

W. R. MOODY.

COMMUNICATIONS.

[The editor assumes no responsibility for matter under this caption. This column is entirely at the disposal of the public, avoiding, as far as possible, trivial and controversial matter.]

MR EDITOR:—In the press of other duties, the last statement of my orthodox friend escaped my attention. When it finally came to my notice, I saw that he felt I had read into his words a meaning he did not intend to convey. He says, "That elsewhere an opportunity will be given for repentance cannot be read into my statement, or be found in orthodox doctrine." That it cannot be found in orthodox doctrine I know. That was the ground for my statement that the Protestant Evangelical Christian abandoned his loved ones at the gates of death, but looked at from my standpoint it could be read into his statement. The truest good of any human being is the privilege of learning the right way by doing right. There is no other way of learning And so, if God is seeking here and elsewhere the truest good of his children, He is seeking to lead them into right ways of living. If, at any period of our lives here or elsewhere, we are denied the privilege of ceasing to do evil and learning to do right, and left to suffer the disastrous results of whatever evil we may have committed, God in so leaving us ceases to be a loving parent, and becomes the stern and unforgiving administrator of remediless punishment. When punishment ceases to be remedial it becomes vengeance. If it does not, will my orthodox friend tell me what he does call it? He misled me into a wrong interpretation of his words by saying, "God only punishes us for our good," a statement I perfectly agree with. When the opportunity of repentence is denied us, while the punishment goes right on, is that for our good? I am unable to see how it is, and unable to see how any one else can

Now I trust my friend can see why I misunderstood him and welcomed him to a larger hope, a broader faith, a more reasonable interpretation of God's government.

But, alas, he cannot be so welcomed. He believes just what I said he did He only objects to my way of expressing it. Suppose, then, we rearrange it after his style: The Protestant Evangelical Christian abandons his loved ones at the gates of death, and abandons them, as he believes, to an everlasting punishment prepared for them by God, who, like a loving parent seeking here and elsewhere the truest good of his children, punishes them only for their good. It sounds rather queer, but being his own statement of belief, expressed in his own words, I trust he will be satisfied.

The Colored Swells.

Graham's Great Southern Specialty company will appear at Morse Opera house Feb. 3. Society last season was particularly partial to "coon" amusements among themselves In the list of the New York 400's swellest society functions the "smart" set took to cake walk affairs At Newport the very elite of that fashionable resort's summer colony seemed to have gone fairly "coon" mad.

Mr. Graham's name in this part of the country has always stood for that which is most up to date and best in the way of "coon" entertainment and has introduced many novelties in this line. Whatever is latest will be found conspicuously exploited. The cake walk, for which particular colored feature Mr. Graham has always held the palm, will be more elaborate than ever this season.

If you want to hear all the latest "coon" songs they may be listened to in this Graham entertainment when the company appears here.

The Only One.

A woman who lives in a large western city recently asked Postmaster Gordon, of Chicago, to obtain her certain information and inclosed a stamp for reply. The information sought could not be given, but the office assisted her to the best of its ability. The woman, evidently, had made similar inquiries at other offices, but in [illegible] case received a stereotyped official [illegible]r. She desired to show her ap[illegible]lation of the courtesy of the Chicago office and in a letter of thanks received the other day she concludes thus: "There is only one kind postmaster, and he is in the wicked city of Chicago, as our minister used to tell me." A similar letter was received at the same time in the inquiry division. An error in address was made in forwarding the letter to Chicago. The person addressed made inquiry at the post office, and the letter was traced, found and delivered. In acknowledging the favor the woman says: "I have received letter and am very much obliged. Allow me to say Uncle Sam, [illegible] Chicago [illegible] nend the [illegible] man in the general office, whom I saw when I started the church. Chicago is all right." The name of the clerk referred to is kept secret by the postal officials, but each employe in the inquiry division is taking the compliment to himself and declares he was active in finding a missing letter.

In a Boston tenement house a family had a cat which for some reason became distasteful and was turned out. Two weeks later it returned one night, got into the flat where it formerly lived, and tried to awaken the head of the family by mewing and scratching at the bedclothes. The indignant man got up and threw the cat out into the hall. A short time later the eldest son of the family, a messenger boy, came home, and as the cat followed him he noticed its strange actions. The cat ran around, clawing the boy's trousers, until he observed that the kindling wood, which had been placed behind the stove, had been scattered around the floor. Looking closer, he saw smoke coming from the fire board at the back of the stove. He roused the household, and the fire, which was well under way, was put out. It is hardly necessary to add that after that night the cat was not driven from home.

An employers' association, representing from $7,[illegible] to $9,[illegible]0,000 of local capital, has been organized in Spokane, Wash., to resist the demands of organized labor which its members may regard as unjust. The lumber mills, breweries, flour mills, street car companies, electric light companies, gas company, water company, factories, contractors, merchants and other interests are represented in the association.

In a single year the value of canaries raised in Germany is estimated at $250,000, and it is satisfactory to learn that the greater part of this sum goes into the pockets of the poor.

MAKING REAL PEARLS.

A Method of Manufacturing Them at a Trifling Cost Has Just Been Discovered.

At various times attempts have been made to manufacture genuine diamonds and other precious stones, but the cost of manufacture has in each case proved so great that up to the present time no such diamonds have been placed on the market. This statement, of course, does not apply to the manufacture of artificial precious stones, which seems to be thriving at present, judging from a recent cable dispatch to the New York Herald, which told how artificial diamonds and rubies are being manufactured in Europe.

The point of interest just now is the fact that a method of manufacturing genuine pearls at a trifling cost has just been discovered. Manufacture, however, is hardly the right word, for it is nature herself which does almost the whole business. A natural pearl, we know, is formed through the intrusion of a foreign body into the shell of a mussel.

The sea mussel is popularly supposed to have a monopoly of this business, but this is an error. A certain species of river mussels, technically known as Margaritana margaritifera, also produces beautiful pearls.

The attention of a French naturalist, M. Boutan, a professor at the Sorbonne, was recently drawn to this fact, and he at once conceived the idea of producing pearls by means of these river mussels. His first step was to prepare a sort of oyster bed for the propagation of the mussels, after which he began to aid nature in her work of making pearls. In each shell he bored a small hole, and through it he introduced a tiny bit of mother-of-pearl into the body of the fish.

His work was now complete, and all he had to do was to wait until nature had completed the process. That he will in time reap a rich harvest seems to be the general opinion among naturalists. By the way, this method of manufacturing pearls is not new, as the Chinese are said to have practised it for centuries.

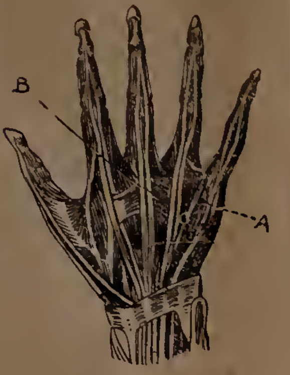
IDEAL PIANO HAND.

Delicate Surgical Operation Is Said to Be Quite an Aid to Musical Execution.

The ideal piano hand is the result of considerable practice and study, and the very best results cannot often be obtained for the simple reason that the hand and fingers of the piano players may not be limber enough at an early age, and, when once the muscles are developed and set, it is a matter of considerable difficulty to train and develop them with the view of obtaining freedom of movement. The most difficult problem is to obtain the freedom of the little and ring fingers from the movements of the middle finger.



THE IDEAL PIANO HAND.

When the anatomy of the muscles of the hand is studied it will be found that these fingers are connected crosswise by tendons of great strength, which are the cause of their simultaneous movements and render independent motion almost impossible.

Dr. Rartaz, of Paris, has undertaken recently a number of operations on the hands of pianists, successfully cutting the muscles (a and b in the cut) connecting these fingers, and giving their hands a freedom of movement which could not have been attained even by the most persistent efforts in the ordinary way. It appears that the first operation of the kind was made by a Philadelphia surgeon, a Dr. Forbes, with whom the idea was original.

Many years ago Abbe Liszt, the famous virtuoso, had a similar operation performed, which went much further. He had his hand split between all the fingers as far as the first joint. As a result his stretch was greater than that of any artist before or after him, permitting him to execute effects impossible with others.—Philadelphia Record.

Microscope Detects Crime.

Modern scientific discoveries seem to be of the greatest use in running down criminals. A German diplomat was telling the other day of a curious use of the microscope for this purpose recently made in Prussia. A barrel of specie sent from the frontier to Berlin was robbed and filled with sand. This was supposed to have been done on the way to Berlin. An eminent chemist obtained samples of all the sand near the stations of which the barrel passed, and by means of blowpipe and microscope found sand of the station at which it had been emptied and filled, and from this circumstance the thief was discovered and arrested.

Counting Her Pulse.

"You and young Dr. Pilkins seemed to be sitting very close together on the porch last evening," said her incorrigible brother.

"Yes," replied the fair one, blushing and glancing quickly in the direction of the other members of the family. "He was counting my pulse-beats."

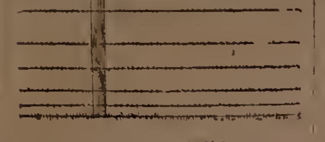
A DOG-PROOF FENCE

It Has to Be Compactly Built If Really Satisfactory Results Are to Be Obtained.

The owner of two large sheep farms in New England has recently described the miles of dog-proof, barbed-wire sheep fences that inclose his farms. As dogs are the bane of sheep keeping in all parts of the country, a diagram of his fence, given herewith, will be of wide interest. Cedar posts about four inches in diameter are driven into the ground eight feet apart and seven strands of barbed wire are stretched and stapled to them, as shown in the cut. The lowest wire is close to the ground. The second wire is four inches above the lowest. The third is five inches farther up the post, the next six inches higher, while the fifth goes up another six inches. The sixth strand is located eight inches above the fifth, while eight inches farther up is a rail to steady the fence. Eight inches above the rail is the seventh wire, which effectually prevents dogs from leaping over the rail. Orange Judd Farmer.



DOG-PROOF FENCE.

Cruel Man!

"Sometimes," he said, with a far-off look, "I envy the Mormons."

"George, I am shocked. Don't you know it's an awful sin to have a dozen wives?"

"I know that; but then, perhaps out of 12 wives you could find one that could really cook."

And she can only burst into tears.—Brooklyn Life.

The End.

"All's over," she wrote, "'twixt you and me—
Life now is one keen misery;
No more I'll sing, no more I'll smile,
But—let me wear your ring awhile."

MIGHTY BEE HUNTER

He Tracks the Insects as Unerringly as a Honey Bird.

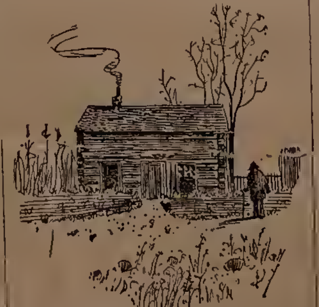
Jacob Mowers, of Half Day, Ill., Who Is Approaching the Century Mark, Is Sighing for a Country Where Game Is Plentiful.

It was a mild sort of a joker who said that time must stand still at Half Day, Ill., for there necessarily it must always be noon. When a visitor to Half Day sees Jacob Mowers, trapper, bee hunter and occasional blacksmith, he feels that joker had some little foundation in fact for his witticism.

Jacob Mowers, like the hundreds of bicyclists who whirl through Half Day on summer Sundays is, according to the Chicago Tribune, making a century run. At present Mr. Mowers is somewhere about the ninetieth milestone, but he still hunts bees, fells trees and carts honey homeward in great chunks. Jacob is the oldest inhabitant of the region in which he lives. He has lived in the same log house for upwards of half a century, and the structure has stood time and weather conditions as well as has its builder and owner.

It was in the early '40s that the bee hunter struck Half Day. It was not called Half Day then nor any other name. The pioneer camped under a tree and shot for his dinner a deer which was browsing in the bush where the well-populated village graveyard is now located. He has seen the burying place wax fat with the succeeding years, but the old hunter does no intend, if he can help it, to increase its proportions by the length and width of his own body, for he is bent on removing shortly from this scene of his early labors and going to some place where game is thicker and honey more easy to be found.

At Mr. Mowers' log cabin are to be seen evidences of his three callings. Ancient horse shoes hang on the outer wall, animal pelts are to be found within, and the bees are busy just beyond the threshold. He has a marked aversion to entering any modern blacksmith's shop. "The smithing art has been lost," he said. "They don't do things now as they used to. Once in a great while I wander into one of the shops, but I soon come out because it makes me angry to hear four blows on the anvil to one on the iron."



THE BEE HUNTER'S CABIN.

Then Richard Murphy, the old blacksmith's boon companion, who arrived at Half Day just one year after his friend, broke in with: "There's no blacksmith like Jake anywhere. Why, only recently they brought out a blooded horse way from Chicago just to have the old man shoe it. The critter had gone wrong in its feet, but it's been right ever since Jake got through with it." Then the two old cronies sighed and shook their heads over the degeneracy of methods of shoeing horses.

No one in northern Illinois has the trapping instinct so keenly developed as Jacob Mowers, nonogenerian of Half Day. The neighbors say that Jake's traps always attract coons, minks and muskrats when the traps of others seem simply to repel the animals. Otters are exceedingly scarce in Illinois. One day recently a former trapper rode into Half Day and called on Mowers.

"Jake," he said, "I'm beat. There's two otters down near my place. They've been there two years and I've tried to ketch 'em by every means known to the law and by some other means, for that matter, but I can't get 'em to come within gunshot of the traps. You come down to my place and try your hand and if you ketch the beasts you can have 'em."

So Jake started out with his caller and put up at the farmhouse. The next morning he went out and looked the ground over. In the afternoon he said to his host: "How long did you say you had been trying to ketch these critters?"

"Two years."

"Well, I'll get 'em in two days," said the visitor, confidently.

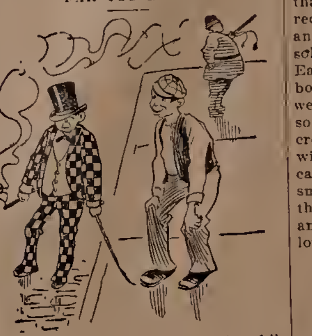
Jake set his traps. The next morning a splendid specimen of an otter was found in one trap and a raccoon in the other. The farmer was astounded.

"I'd have had the other otter if the coon hadn't come along first," said Jake. "The otter was trying to get in after the coon was caught."

The traps were set again and the next morning the second otter was found imprisoned. Jake took the hides home and sold them for nine dollars cash.

It is, however, as a bee hunter that Mr. Mowers has won his chief fame. He tracks the bees to their hives as unerringly as does the honey bird of Africa. All that is known of his method is that he seeks a field, puts a modicum of sweet stuff on a stick, finds a bee, which he allows to fill itself with his proffered bait, and then he tracks the laden bee to its hollow tree hive. Despite his years he did this so successfully last fall that he secured from the woods about Half Day 400 pounds of honey and a number of swarms of bees, which are now domesticated in proper hives.

FAR TOO LOUD.



"Say, Eddie, don't yer know dat children should be seen an' not heard?—N. Y. Journal.

His Experience.

"Woman's work is never done," quoted the sympatheic citizen.

"That's right," answered Mr. Meekton, earnestly. "I have observed it in Henrietta's case. Woman's work is never done. There is always enough of it left over to keep her husband busy from the time he gets through dinner till he's so tired he has to go to bed."—Washington Star.

IN THE YEAR 1675

When men wore clothes like these. Charles II. of England issued a proclamation suppressing coffee houses. He considered them "hot beds of sedition" and dangerous to the public peace.

Times have changed since then.

In these days benevolent persons establish coffee houses, having learned that they promote the public welfare. The reason for this is that they drink coffee at home themselves, and know its virtue.

Perhaps if it had been possible for King Charles to have known such coffee as we have to-day, the kind that is sold by Chase & Sanborn, he would have done different.

No one can fail to be benefited by this the most delicious coffee known to the American public.

Chase & Sanborn's Seal Brand Java and Mocha always gives satisfaction and leaves a feeling of contentment whenever it is used.

It does more. It insures good health because it is pure.

Insist that your grocer shall give you Chase & Sanborn's Coffee. Either the Seal Brand in one and two-pound cans or any of their high grade coffees which you get in parchment-lined colored bags; you will not be sorry.

LOSSES FROM WEEDS.

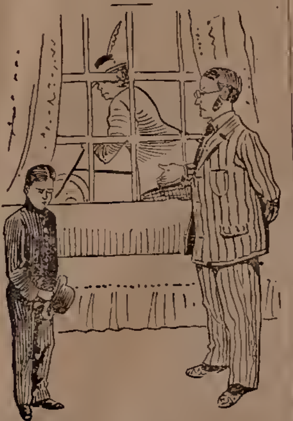
They Always Cause a Shrinkage of the Crop Among Which They Are Allowed to Grow.

It would be difficult for most farmers to calculate how great is the loss from the prevalence of weeds in crops. In a season when dry weather prevails these losses are comparatively small, though even then the weeds take water from the soil which is not all returned when they are uprooted and buried in it. The weed that is buried is surrounded by air spaces, keeping the soil more porous than it otherwise would be, and therefore drying it out faster. The case is still worse as regards the fertility that the weed has taken. It was originally entirely soluble, but the weed has to ferment and be resolved into vegetable mold before it can be put in the same soluble condition. Yet we have known farmers to delay cultivation of hoed crops so as to have more grass and weeds to be plowed under.

It is often said that weeds are a preventive of good farming; that there would be much less cultivation of hoed crops if it were not that the growth of weeds made it necessary. Yet where the cultivator is kept going all through the season so often as to prevent any weed from reaching the surface, the weed killed as quickly as it sprouted has done the soil more good and less harm than it could do at any subsequent stage of its growth. At this early period, about all the plant substance has been directly furnished from the swelling and decomposition of the seed in germination. At this time the carbonic acid gas which the seed gives off when it germinates makes its plant food more soluble than it ever can be after the plant puts forth roots and begins to draw from the soil. Finely powdered malt has been used as a fertilizer. When it has been applied in contact with seed grain of any kind, it has produced remarkable results, though it is too expensive a fertilizer to be used on a very large scale. But the ordinary weed seed is much smaller and has far less fertilizing material in it than has a grain of barley.

It is the peculiarity of most weeds that most of their growth is taken directly from the soil, and that both it and the moisture to make the plant food soluble are needed by growing crops. Each day's growth of a weed among hoed crops lessens the yield. If the weed is left until late, its roots will be so intermingled with those of valuable crops that one cannot be destroyed without uprooting the other. A little care in destroying the weeds while small will save much labor later, besides the inevitable shrinkage of the crop among which the weeds have been allowed to grow.—American Cultivator.

A NOBLE EXAMPLE.



Master—Why did you run away, my boy?

Boy—Because the mistress was so unkind to me!

Master—Tut, tut, that is no excuse. Do I run away?—Golden Penny.

Rotted Sods for Manure.

There are many places in low lands by the roadside where the wash of the road has made the soil very rich. Sods cut from such land and piled in heaps rot down readily, especially if some wood ashes are thrown on them to hasten decomposition. This makes the best possible top dressing for grass lands, and will largely increase the growth where the soil is thin. If phosphate is added this compost becomes a complete manure for any kind of crop. The practice of rotting sod is very common in Lincolnshire, England, where, in olden times the sod was cut very thin, and after being piled and dried out the heap was burned. There was waste of nitrogen in burning the sod, and allowing it to rot down is much the better way to make use of it.—American Cultivator.

LIES vs. FACTS

No man wishes to buy a pig in a bag, and no one places confidence in the advertisements of Scale makers which SOUND improbable. "Something for nothing" can never be had, and when you see Scales advertised so indefinitely as to leave a BIG percentage for the imagination; investigate carefully.

Some people are fair-minded, and to them we refer the Scale question. Actions SPEAK louder than words, and when you find a genuine article made of good material FOR a fair price is it not better that the facts in the case should be looked into by fair-minded men for THEMSELVES before buying any kind of a Scale?

Georgia Man Pays a Railroad for a Ride Stolen on Trucks Many Years Ago.

J. K. Ridgely, Chicago representative of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, tells in the Chicago Journal the latest "conscience story."

A few years ago, he says, a man down in Georgia wrote to him asking what the fare would be to ride on the trucks from New Orelans to Cincinnati. The writer explained that some time before he had in this way beaten his way up from the south, being in straitened circumstances. Since then he had, he said, [illegible] paid the charge. [illegible] riding on the trucks. He thought he owed the road money. He felt like a thief and wished to pay what was right to ease his conscience.

REFRIGERATOR CAR

BEATING HIS WAY

Mr. Ridgely, in a spirit of jest, sent the letter to C. P. Atmore, general passenger agent of the road. Mr. Atmore as a jest wrote the southerner that one cent a mile was the rate for passage on the trucks and that the fare from New Orleans to Cincinnati would be $9.20.

No answer came to this letter and the railroad officials had forgotten the incident until this week, when a man walked into the Louisville & Nashville railroad offices in Chicago and asked for Mr. Ridgely.

"Mr. Ridgely is not in at present," said one of the clerks in the passenger department. "Can we do anything for you?"

"Yes. I want to pay this road $9.20 I owe it." The caller counted out the money, gave his name, asked for a receipt, and told the clerk Mr. Ridgely would understand.

The railroad officials have ordered the money returned, but the conscience-stricken truck rider cannot be found, letters to his former home in Georgia being returned undelivered.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition, beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co. A WORD WITH YOU.

You no doubt already know that iron and steel have advanced more than 60 per cent. within the last few months. Wagons, Plows and Machine Bolts have advanced a very large per centage. The output of the manufacturers, of which I am acting as agent, will cost at least one-half million dollars more in 1900 than the present year. This is a conspicuous reason why farmers should buy machines this year and not put it off until next.

Elsewhere may be seen the petition of the Medfield & Medway street railway company, desiring an entrance into Franklin, from Medway direct, and the selectmen will hold a hearing on Friday evening, Feb. 12. The purpose of the company is to be a portion of a direct line from Boston having Franklin as its terminal.

James Garland's room at R. B. Stewart's was entered this week and nearly everything taken of value, clothing, keepsakes, etc. Ralph Winchester, who had been working for J. J. Stewart, disappeared and was probably the guilty party. Mr. Garland traced him to Providence, but lost track of him there. The pension papers taken can be of no use to the thief.

The agent of the Ætna Insurance company was here last week to pay Mrs. Alfred Whiting $1,000, the sum which her husband carried as accident Insurance. A peculiar incident connected with it, was that he was killed only a short distance from the spot where he agreed with the agent to take the insurance, having at first decided not to insure himself, but later reconsidered the matter. He had only paid the company $2 50.

We have lately put into the office a most convenient appliance, the invention of Manager Levi C. Lincoln of the Woonsocket Electric Machine and Power Co. It is a device for supporting the arm when using the telephone, and is simply perfect in its adaptability to one's needs. It is adjustable to any angle or height, and is a perfect boon for one who has occasion to use a telephone to any extent. Mr. Lincoln is to be congratulated on the useful device which his brain has evolved.

Dr. Talmage says a man should go to bed when he is sleepy and not before. He should get up when he is obliged to and not before. No specified time can be set for any one. Circumstances must govern cases. When a person wakes up for good and can no longer sleep is the natural time to get up. If he wakes up and finds himself irresistibly inclined to turn over and take another nap, he is doing violence to nature if he does not yield to the desire, provided all other things are equal. The early rising habit is an old superstition which should be abandoned.

The funeral of Frederick Eugene Aldrich was held on Wednesday afternoon from his late residence on Summer street, the house being completely filled with mourning friends. The Episcopal service was read by Rev. Mr. Miner, the music being furnished by the Misses Whiting and Messrs Hosford and Hartshorne. Rev. Dr. Hodge made the address, referring to the deceased in fitting eulogistic terms. The bearers were Messrs. Jenks, Hancock, Emerson, McKenzie, Bachelor and Woodward. The remains were interred in the Union street cemetery.

There is talk of another increase in the price of coal. The reason for this is the unparalled demand for that commodity for manufacturing purposes. It is comparatively scarce everywhere, so much so that a blizzard, or a cold wave strong enough to freeze the northern harbors, as New London and Providence, would be a serious problem to confront, unless more coal should be on hand. Soft coal was never before so hard to procure, and hard coal, which is expensive, is being burned under many Franklin boilers. A jump of twenty-five cents a ton is threatened.

The entertainment given by the Y. P. C. U. of the Universalist church was much enjoyed by all those who were present. The following program was given: Piano solo, Miss Vera Tourtelotte; song, Ray Wyckoff; violin solo, David Fleighleman of Walpole; reading, Rev.D. H. Hodge; vocal duet, Misses Gertrude and Hattie Bly; Farce "A Matrimonial Hunt," in which the parts were taken by C. F. Frazee and Miss May Morey. After the entertainment there was a guessing contest on the portraits of noted men and women, and the prize winners in this contest were Miss May Morey, Mrs. Lucy Archibald, Miss Linoa Ferrer and George Sneath.

Miss Razee provided for her dancing class and friends last evening, a most enjoyable masquerade, fully eighty couples being present to participate, and the balcony was filled by spectators, to whom the scene was especially attractive. Some of the costumes showed a good deal of originality, the various popular characters being well portrayed. The idenity of many was a secret until the unmasking, so complete was the disguise. Excellent music of five pieces was provided, and Caterer Fairfield was liberally patronized. W. L. Morse made a most efficient prompter. Altogether Miss Razee is to be complimented for the well directed, well ordered and entirely pleasing affair which she arranged.

The revivial Interest at the Baptist church is increasing. The meetings have been well attended this week, and more arose for prayers last night than any time previous, There will be three meetings next week. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings with solo or duet singing. Rev. A. H. Davis, Rev. A. B. Lorimer of Woonsocket, and Rev. G. H. Horton of Blackstone, will preach. The church was filled last Sunday evening at the baptismal service, and the audience was deeply impressed by the holy ordinance. Rev. F. B. Sleeper's discourse was on "The Four Sides of Christ's Atonement," the divine, the ethical and the progressive. Next Sunday forenoon the pastor will preach on "The Tested and Conquering Christ."

Street Railway Matters.

Four new cars for the M., A. & W. street railway company were shipped Tuesday from the works in Laconia, N. H. Two of them have reached Worcester. These cars are of the vestibule style. They were ordered last October, but owing to the rush of orders for cars it has been impossible for the manufacturers to get them here before. The cars are expected to arrive in Woonsocket in a few days.

The company purchased last Friday in Boston a Bostonian patent ice planer, fifty-one inches in width, for planing off the ice at Hoag's pond. This machine will plane ice from a quarter of an inch to three inches in thickness at a time and will make the skating much better than it otherwise would be. The runners of skates cut the ice more or less and leave it in a poor condition, especially if the ice is soft. This machine will eliminate all these bad features.

Work on the Medway & Medfield street railway, which hopes later to get into Franklin, is progressing every day when the laborers can be out. Poles are being set and grading being done between Medfield and Millis. With the opening of spring the company expects that nothing need be done between the two places except a little leveling, and cars can begin regular trips between Medfield and Millis. The Medway end will be pushed hard, and if possible grading will be done this winter in the way of filling low places. The reason that the work of the Medway & Medfield street railway company is being pushed so is that the contractor has a thirty-mile road to build near New Bedford, and therefore wishes to get the Medway & Medfield road completed as soon as possible.

Popular Players.

Franklin people should not miss the opportunity of hearing the Piacere club, Woonsocket's favorite musical organization, on their first visit here, at Odd Fellows' hall, Friday evening, February 2. The club of fifteen banjo, mandolin and guitar players, assisted by Miss Myrtie Whiting, soprano; Miss Mary E. Richard, reader; Mr. Lester B. Brown, banjo, and Mr. Oscar A. Gilbert, mandolin, are to give a select concert and dance. That the Piacere club are clever entertainers and skilled musicians is proven by the fact that invariably they play a return engagement, and pulpit, press and public unanimously declare them to be one of the best clubs before the public.

Popular music from "rag time" and light opera, glee selections that go with a snap and vim, and dance music that demands encores, is the Piacere club's forte.

Mr. Clifton E. Emerson will act as floor manager, and he and his aids, Chas. B. Hussey Wallace C. Milliken, are doing their best to make the affair a complete success.

Special Revival Service.

This evening, (Friday) at the Methodist church, there will be a special evangelistic service, taking the place of the regular prayer meeting service. The pastor, S. A. Cook, will preach a short sermon. Subject, "Christ or Belial." This will be a Pentecostal season, following up the work of last four weeks. Come and be blessed, Jesus waits to save. "How long halt ye between two opinions?"

Alden Club Meeting.

The Alden club again had the pleasure on Monday evening of hearing a lecture by Mrs. May Alden Ward, whose presence here always calls forth an enthusiastic audience.

In the continued absence of Mrs. Ray Mrs. Wiggin presided. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. A letter was read asking members of the Alden club to buy tickets for some theatricals to be given February 19, at the Hollis Street theatre, by students from the Hampton Institute, Virginia. A circular from the Massachusetts Forestry association was also read, which stated the new law requiring the election of a tree warden in each town of the state, declaring the importance of the office in the preservation of the trees of the place, and urging all to use their influence to have the right man selected for the position An invitation was received from the Attleboro club for two of the Alden club to attend its meeting on the following day.

Mrs. Ward then spoke on some of the "Moral Aspects of George Eliot's Works." She spoke of her life, character and personality, showing by illustration that it is often necessary to know something of an author's personality to truly understand his work. Oftentimes a man's work impresses largely according to whether or no his life is lived in accord with the ideals therein expressed.

George Eliot was born in 1819 Her work is much of it autobiographical—her father was a carpenter after the type of Adam Bede, proud of doing his work well; stern, religious and upright; her mother in same ways like the kindly quick tongued Mrs. Poyser, and herself often like Maggie Tulliver in "Mill on the Floss," in her early boyish life, and in her love and devotion to the brother there called Tom.

She was a mature child, and an earnest student—proficient in French, German, Italian, and the dead languages. She became a translator and a reviewer for the Westminster Review, and became acquainted with prominent men like Herbert Spencer, who became one of her best and most helpful friends.

It was not until she was thirty-seven, after her acquaintance with Mr. Lewes, and by his urgent request, that she began to write novels, the scenes of many of them in Warwickshire, her old home, and in all can a deep moral lesson be found, though never directly given, except in Romola The gifts of humor and pathos were hers to a marked degree, placing her in the first rank of great writers.

She did not disdain the most commonplace subject, but showed ordinary life full of pathos, sorrow, love, passion and tragedy.

There is no morbid despair in her works, though she shows crime in all its blackness, and the far-reaching, never-ending restitution for wrong-doing. She also shows the power of true repentence on the development of character.

In Adam Bede the cruelty of selfishness is shown, and retribution as the inevitable result of wickedness; in Silas Marner the redeeming power of love is shown.

In Romola, a wonderful story of life in the fifteenth century. She shows the deterioration of character from continual yieldings to selfishness until life itself is lost; the tragedy of selfishness in Middlemarch is the tragedy of lost ideals.

In Daniel Deronda the question is asked, "Is life worth living?" and the answer comes, after showing through Gwendolin the worthlessness of a selfish life, and through Deronda the grandness of an unselfish one, "Only by loving service to one's fellowmen, with duty the guide of life."

Mrs. Ward made the characters vivid before us, and brought the different stories quickly to the front from the far corners of many memories. It is always a delight to listen to her R.

An Interview with Lilian Whiting.

Before she recently sailed for Europe, I called on Miss Whiting at her home at the Brunswick in Boston, and in her charming apartment found myself at once at ease. I had always heard that the personality of the author was most agreeable, but when I saw her "shining face," so bright, so sweet, so full of human kindness, I did not wonder that she could write such works as "The World Beautiful" and make a series of three volumes of it "go!" She was dressed in a soft pearl-colored silk, with pink belt and pink somewhere else, veiled with lace, and so worn that she seemed spirituelle to the last degree. Her gold hair tossed lightly about her face formed a sort of nimbus, her delicate little hands seemed only strong enough to wield a pen.

That she can wield it to effect she has proved for more than a decade, and there is one thing that can be said of her great talent—it grows with years—it expands, it vigorously broadens and adds new qualities every time she sends forth a book. Those who were interested in her volume, "After Her Death," will remember what an exquisite tribute she paid to her dear friend, Kate Field, that brilliant, strong, active, energetic woman, to whom the literary world owed so much and from whom emanated a constant series of ideas that solidified into accomplishment, until the world looked on in amazement and cried, "What will Kate do next?"

The tenor of that book was surprising, inasmuch as it was the story of how Miss Field returned to her friend in the spirit and proved her immortality and communication with this world almost beyond cavil; and now she adds a graver and more substantial book, which will be the one and only biography of a great American woman. She calls it "Kate Field: a Record." Herein is the ardent, careful, painstaking, discriminating work of the true biographer—including all that is essential and excluding all that is unnecessary.

From the time when Miss Field was a handsome, wilful, gay, precocious child until she gives up her eager, passionate, almost manly soul on board ship in Hawaii the story is told with a conscientious, scrupulous honesty, ever permeated with legitimate admiration, which renders the book too fascinating to skip a line or leave until finished. Interspersed as it is with letters from a hundred of those literary figures that adorned American and European literature at the time when the Brownings were doing their best work, full of anecdotes told in Miss Field's own clever, crisp way about such people as Walter Savage Landor, Ristori, Fecter, George Eliot and the Trollopes, intimate bits about all our literary men and women of note of that date, with whom Miss Field was as a petted child; transcripts from the famous letters she wrote from Florence, her charming lecture on Dickens—one of the most popular lectures ever given from the American stage—her profound study of Mormonism and her eloquent exposition of it, which has led to such legislation as Mr. Roberts is feeling today; the publication of "Kate Field's Washington," a sheet that was a power for five years; and the final great work of her life, which has led to the annexation of Hawaii—all this is embodied in the volume, which turns out to be not only a record of the life of Miss Field, but a running commentary of the current events and interesting incidents of thirty or forty years of history.

That Miss Whiting has adequately performed her task goes without saying, but one cannot say how she has done it. To know that one must read it. But one may try to characterize it by saying that her own individuality so sweetly dominates the individuality she describes that one hardly knows which to most admire. The very spirit of exquisite poetry, the airy delicacy of her most refined perception mingles with the rich erudition and the solid culture which turns every sentence to grace.

The "Study of Elizabeth Barret Browning" is written with the same creditable care; brings out many new phases of the life of that wonderful woman poet. Among the pleasant sayings ascribed to her is the encouraging, "My love of fiction began with my breath and will end with it and goes on increasing. On my tombstone may be written, 'Ci git the greatest novel-reader in the world,' and nobody will forbid the inscription. And I approve of Gray's notion of paradise, when he suggests the reading of romances ever new. Invalid or not, I should have a romance in a drawer if not under a pillow. There is the love of literature and the love of fiction. I love fiction."

What an encouragement from a woman who could write "Aurora Leigh" to those who steal the time to read a new novel. Well, this little book is full of like agreeable matter. If Miss Whiting has gone abroad to find matter for another book—and I am in hopes it will be about Rosa Bonheur—she will find an audience waiting for her, educated into anxiety by these present works. Both these books are beautifully gotten up by Little, Brown & Co. of Boston, especially the "Record." It is illustrated with fine portraits of Miss Field, printed by the famous University Press and bound in a rich style worthy of the contents. C. L. D.

Apparently a Neccessity.

Mrs. Lizzie Treen Hosmer, in speaking of music supervision says; "I have been thinking of this thing for some years. Music is taught in the public schools of more than eighty per cent. of the cities and towns of this state, and no other form of special education is represented by nearly so high a percentage. And there is no supervision over it in any way. The state does not take any official notice of it in any way. Now, there is a lot of money spent by the cities and towns of this state for the teaching of music in their public schools, and these should be granted supervision and intelligent help. In some places the teachers are not so competent to teach as they should be. The teaching of drawing is looked after, and music certainly should be. I have a little system of my own of transposition, which I have taught with some success. Some of the papers of the pupils in my Franklin schools were thought good enough by the committee there to be signed by men here in Boston who had been doing this work all their lives. These signatures were procured, and the men signed them gladly, I took them to the state board of education, and Secretary Hill told me I could leave them with the supervisor of drawing, who would, perhaps, look them over. So I thought they would be of more interest at the library in Franklin, and I took them back there. This was four years ago, and this set me thinking."

The board of education, with one exception, is with the movement, and she looks to see favorable legislation procured.

Worth Thinking About.

The Milford Journal says: "We understand there will be an article in the warrant at Milford's annual town meeting providing for the watering of principal streets during the summer months at the expense of the town and abutters.

This is emphatically a move in the right direction, and we hope the article will receive favorable consideration. It is only what is being done by very many other towns of size and importance in the state. Not only will it prove a great public convenience, but it is an established and undeniable fact that watering of streets is a matter of public economy, since it keeps the highways compact and saves the money of the taxpayers being blown away in the form of dust. A street will remain in good condition much longer when watered than when unwatered, to say nothing of the increased satisfaction guaranteed the public.

In every sense, this proposed new departure in Milford should receive the approval of the town which it deserves."

FRIDAY, JAN. 26, 1900.

The Finder Has No Rights.

A man dug up in a Missouri field which he did not own some mutilated United States notes and national bank notes. The finder, who was poor and thought his fortune made, sent the valuable scraps to Washington for redemption. Enough of them could be identified to warrant the payment of $1,0[illegible] under ordinary circumstances. But the comptroller of the treasury refused to pay a cent on account of the mutilated legal tender notes. He refuses, says the Chicago Tribune, because admittedly these notes, though payable to the bearer, are not the property of the person presenting them. If the person who buried the money were to turn up and prove title, he could recover his property. If the treasury had redeemed the notes he would have an equitable claim against the government. The man who buried the money is not likely to turn up, and the question is whether his loss shall enure to the benefit of the finder or of the United States, which will make a thousand dollars by declining to redeem the notes. The finder has no legal or moral claim, so the United States ought to be the beneficiary. The controller of the currency must decide whether the fragments of national bank notes shall be redeemed. There is no reason why they should be if United States notes are not. The only difference is that in one case certain banks are interested and in the other the United States.

The St. Louis World's Fair.

One point to be noted about the world's fair to be held in St. Louis in 1903 is the encouragement and promise of support extended by other communities. Wherever the subject has been considered elsewhere, and the instances are not few, assurances have been given of cordial cooperation. An immense sum will be appropriated by other states for special buildings and exhibits. All states in the Louisiana purchase are equally interested in the exposition, and will have an equal opportunity to display to the world their resources and productions. So will other states and countries. St. Louis, as the largest city in the vast stretch of territory acquired west of the Mississippi has taken the executive leadership and accepted the responsibility of making the fair a success of the highest order. Before the end of September the $5,000,000 fund to be raised in this city should be complete. It is almost made up now. It is a certainty. And the names upon the list will be a perpetual roll of honor in the history of St. Louis.

When you see a young man sitting in a parlor with the ugliest two-year-old boy that ever frightened himself in the mirror, clambering over his knees, jerking his necktie out of place, rumpling his shirt front, pulling his hair, kicking his shins, feeling in all his pockets for coppers, bombarding him from time to time with various bits of light furniture, calling him names at the top of his lungs and yelling incessantly for him to come out in the yard and play, while the unresisting victim smiles all the time like the cover of a comic almanac, you may safely say, remarks the Cincinnati Enquirer, although there isn't the sign of a girl apparent in the radius of 1[illegible] miles, that the howling boy has a sister who is in a room not 20 feet away, and that the young man doesn't come there just for the fun of playing with her brother.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

What does it do?

It causes the oil glands in the skin to become more active, making the hair soft and glossy, precisely as nature intended.

It cleanses the scalp from dandruff and thus removes one of the great causes of baldness.

It makes a better circulation in the scalp and stops the hair from coming out.

It Prevents and It Cures Baldness

Ayer's Hair Vigor will surely make hair grow on bald heads, provided only there is any life remaining in the hair bulbs.

It restores color to gray or white hair. It does not do this in a moment, as will a hair dye; but in a short time the gray color of age gradually disappears and the darker color of youth takes its place.

Would you like a copy of our book on the Hair and Scalp? It is free.

If you do not obtain all the benefits you expected from the use of the Vigor write the Doctor about it.

AMONG THE POETS.

Finally Identified.

Men saw the pageantry go by.
They sought the real hero there.
The big bass drummer caught their eye,
Who stepped with such a martial air.
They raised their shouts in welcoming glee,
But found, alas, it wasn't he.

"He's further forward!" then they cried.
The grand drum major there they found,
With great fur hat and haughty stride
And baton weighing many a pound.
They cheered him straight in accents free,
But, alas, found it wasn't he.

And when the mighty train had passed,
They looked about in blank dismay,
And murmured, as their hearts beat fast:
"Perhaps he isn't here to-day!
Though many a figure proud we see,
We always find it isn't he!"

And then the wise policeman spake:
"Did you not note the gentle mien
Of one whose modest manners make
The touch of contrast in the scene:
The man who didn't seem to be Filled with importance? That was he."

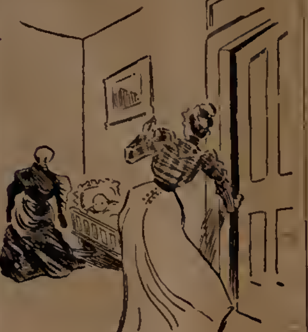
FOOLING THE BABY.

How a Chicago Mother Abused the Confidence and Faith of Her Crying Infant.

In Park Ridge there is one clever woman who does not let her social engagements suffer even if she is the mother of a babe not yet a year old. A few evenings ago, says the Chicago News, she hit upon a plan for imposing upon her precious bundle of innocence, who refused to sleep more than four minutes when he would awaken, and if the mother was not at the head of his cradle would set up a lusty cry and keep it up until the mother's soothing presence was once more near him. On this particular evening there was a card party that required her presence, and for some unknown reason the youngster in the cradle persistently refused to go to sleep until the time of going to the party had arrived.



MOTHER FOOLS THE BABY.

The mother was almost distracted. She couldn't go to the party with the sound of the baby's wailing voice in her ears, so she sat near the cradle and, humming softly to the infant, soon had him asleep. She knew that when he awoke and did not see her at his side he would again set up a howl. It was at this juncture that she hit upon the plan of stuffing one of her other suits of clothes and placing it on the chair by the side of the cradle. The whole affair was topped off with a towel wadded up and tucked into the neck to represent a head. The result was not calculated to fool anyone but a sleepy baby and in that it was indeed successful.

The mother went to the party all right and returning home found the baby awake, laughing, and trying vainly to get up a conversation with the "dummy."

Surprising Surgical Case.

Kansas can add to the surgical records another instance of a person who has recovered after being shot through the brain. Three months ago Miss Mattie Stone, of Crawford county, fired a bullet into her head with suicidal intent. Last week the surgeons lifted her skull and removed the bullet, which had passed through one lobe of the brain. She will recover.

Asthma, bronchitis, hoarseness and all diseases of the throat, chest and lungs are surely cured by it. Call on Albert C. Mason & Co., druggist, and get a trial bottle free. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed, or price refunded.

The Loveliness of the Antique.

Her husband had to eat his lunch where things were very cheap,
And all the earthly joys he had came to him in his sleep;
Poor Willie had no dimes to spend, as did the other boys
For candies or for cookies or for chewing gum or toys.

He went without a set of books that pleased his heart and eye,
For they had little money and the price was rather high;
No pictures worth the framing hung upon their parlor walls,
But antique rugs, worn out and frayed, were scattered through the halls.

Her husband's overcoat was old, his hat was out of style,
And always with his threadbare suit he wore a bitter smile;
She bought old plates and coffee pots that folks once threw away
And ancient beds and bureaus, and was happy night and day.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

The Story of Life.

Only the same old story, told in a different strain;
Sometimes a smile of gladness, and then a stab of pain;
Sometimes a flash of sunlight, again the drifting rain.

Sometimes it seems to borrow from the crimson rose its hue;
Sometimes black with thunder, then changed to a brilliant blue;
Sometimes false as Satan, sometimes as heaven true.

Only the same old story, but, oh, how the changes ring!
Prophet and priest and peasant, soldier and scholar and king;
Sometimes the warmest hand clasp leaves in the palm a sting.

Sometimes in the hush of even, sometimes in the midday strife,
Sometimes with dovelike calmness, sometimes with passion rife;
We dream it, write it, live it, this weird, wild story of life.
—Boston Transcript.

BRAVE WAR HEROINE

Mrs. Boysen, of Sacramento, Cal., Both Nurse and Soldier.

She Seizes a Dead Trooper's Rifle and Engages in a Fierce Brush with the Filipinos Until Victory Is Won.

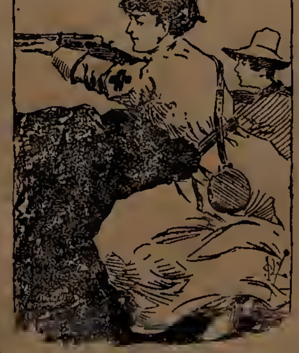
What terrors there are in war are not too great for a mother to share with her son. Here, for instance, is the story of one—Mrs. May Stevens Boysen, of Sacramento, Cal. Many a woman tied down to the drudgery of a dishpan and broom will read it and understand. New York has had the honor of seeing Mrs. Boysen in the play "Miss Manhattan." Mrs. Boysen in that production assumed the part of the nursemaid. She was the one and only bright spot in a waste of dreariness.

Chance took Mrs. Boysen on the stage. Years ago one of the strongest and most striking characters on the Pacific slope was Andrew Jackson Stevens, master mechanic of the Union Pacific road. He was the inventor of the famous ten-wheel mogul, the type of heavy-powered engines that drag the freight of all the world across the backbone of the continent.

May Stevens was his daughter. A taste for private theatricals led eventually to a place upon the stage. Here she married A. D. Billings, a character actor of years gone by, and some time after he died she became Mrs. Boysen.

One child—a boy—was the result of the first marriage. His name is William Boysen, for on the marriage of his mother a second time he took his stepfather's name. Young Boysen is heir of both his father and grandfather, and at the beginning of the war was manager of the York Manufacturing company of York, Pa.

The call for troops found Boysen willing and waiting. He resigned his position, obtained a commission as assistant surgeon with the Pennsylvania troops, and in August was at work in the trenches before Manila. The word of her son's devotion to the flag came to Mrs. Boysen. Without counting upon the cost, she flew post haste to San Francisco. The next steamer bore her westward to Manila to her son. She was at his side day by day, assuming the drudgery of camp life.



FIGHTING IN THE TRENCHES.

It was Mrs. Boysen's intention to obtain a place in the government office in Manila. She obtained a place as nurse in the reserve hospital corps.

Then came the outbreak of the insurgents. Opportunity had come. As the Filipinos fell back under the advance of the Americans, Mrs. Boysen followed elbow to elbow with our troops.

From trench to trench went the heroic woman. Then when the rush of the American soldiers went splashing hot-footed across the paddy fields, in their train went Mrs. Boysen, ministering to the wounded, working under fire, and all unconscious of the bullets singing and purring about her head.

Once the Filipinos, goaded to desperation by the galling fire of our men, made a rush to recapture the trenches. Then for a few minutes there was need for every hand to do its work. Crouched in the trench Mrs. Boysen watched the turn of affairs, cheering the men along the line, and wandering here and there with hands full of cartridges. Then one of our men fell back from the earthen embankment, his rifle clattering down beside him. In an instant the woman was at his side. But a glance showed there was no need of her attention—the poor fellow was dead. Seizing the rifle, Mrs. Boysen crawled up to the front, and there in a moment was cracking away at the head of the rush.

Along the line of the trenches the men caught the color of her skirt and the red cross on her sleeve. They saw the rifle peering out from the earthworks and heard it bark.

"Hoo-ray," they yelled. "Hoo-ray for you!" Mrs. Boysen smiled and kept on shuttling the bolt of her krag. The Filipino rush died away; the rebels sullenly retreated to their trenches within the town, and Mrs. Boysen went back to her work.

But Gen. Wheaton had seen and marked her bravery. It was a sight he had never seen before. Lifting his hat, he saluted her, and Mrs. Boysen, with flaming cheeks, went back to the charity of caring for the injured.

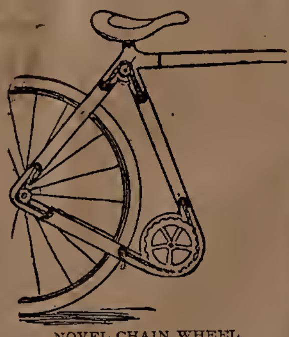
UNIQUE CHAIN WHEEL.

A Radical Departure from the Accepted Types, Which Some Cyclists Think Will Answer.

The most novel form of a chain driven bicycle yet devised has been recently patented at Washington. It is certainly the most original of the thousands of schemes put forth to dispense with the use of the uncovered chain. Only actual use will determine the practicability of the idea. Theoretically it possesses many points of advantage. While a radical departure from accepted types, there are those who believe its worth will be demonstrated when perfected. Its inventor claims that it is a chain bicycle with all of the virtues of the chainless. As the chain runs inside the lower rear stays, up through the rear fork and down the seat tube, it is free from dust and grit, and the consequent smoothness more than offsets the extra friction at the turning points. With the propelling gear invisible the graceful appearance of a bicycle is certainly increased, and this the man responsible for the latest form of bicycle construction believes an important point in favor of his invention.



NOVEL CHAIN WHEEL.

CONSULTING CYCLIST.

That Is the Title Assumed by a New Sort of Medical Specialist Practicing in London.

There is a new kind of medical specialist in London, and it is presumed that we will soon have him in this country. He calls himself a "consulting cyclist," and announces that he will devote himself to "giving medical and practical advice as to all that concerns the use of the machine; whether to ride or not, what sort of a machine to ride, at what pace to ride, how the saddle is to be adjusted, where the handles are to be set, how the machine should be geared, and the like, all being things which differ for each individual. Many a doctor recommends the use of a cycle who is himself no cyclist, just as he may recommend hydropathic treatment, although he may know but little about the various combinations of bath treatment which will be found of greatest use at the particular spa resorted to. In stating the broad fact that cycling will do good he is acting within the range of his own knowledge and experience, but when he is asked about speed and gears and lengths of runs, unless he is a cyclist as well as a medical man, he is apt to find himself at sea." There is considerable sense in this man's business, and it would certainly conduce to the pleasure and comfort of a rider to start out with such a fund of knowledge as this "consulting cyclist" can give.—Golden Days.

The Only Alternative.

"I'm sorry, madam, but we can't exchange those goods."

"But my husband does not like them."

"Why don't you exchange your husband?"—Town Topics.

The Youngest Son.

(A Reflection by One of His Brothers.)

Now, when it comes to gettin' what other folks can't get,
An' when it comes to doin' what other folks ain't let,
An' takin' turns the longest, by rubbin' of your eyes,
An' scoopin' all the pennies an' all the saucer pies,
An' seein' some one bigger get licked for what you've did—
A feller can't help wishin' he was the littlest kid!

But when you think of taggin', an' findin' folks has run,
An' bein' told it's bedtime, no matter what's the fun,
An' takin' mumps an' measles, an' wearin' girl's clothes,
An' never goin' nowhere excep' when mother goes,
An' learnin' all the lessons of what us boys is rid—
Then's when a chap's as willin' he ain't the littlest kid!
—Catherine Young Glen, in St. Nicholas.

The Bachelor's Complaint.

Returning home at close of day,
Who gently chides my long delay,
And by my side delights to stay?
Nobody!

Who sets for me the easy chair,
Spreads out the papers with such care
And lays my slippers ready there?
Nobody.

When plunged in deep and dire distress,
When anxious cares my heart oppress,
Who whispers hopes of happiness?
Nobody!

When sickness comes and sorrow twain,
And grief distracts my fevered brain,
Who sympathizes with my pain?
Nobody!

But I'm resolved, so help me fate,
To change at once my single state,
At Hymen's altar I will mate
Somebody!
—Thomasville (Ga.) Enterprise.

Brave Men Fall

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles as well as women, and all feel the results in loss of appetite, poisons in the blood, backache, nervousness, headache and tired, listless, run down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that. Listen to J. W. Gardner, Idaville, Ind. He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. It did more to give me new strength and good appetite than anything I could take. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life." Only 50 cents at A. C. Mason & Co.'s drug store. Every bottle guaranteed.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called Grain-O? It is delicious and nourishing and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about one-fourth as much. All grocers sell it; 15c. and 25c.

Danger Signals!

Do you take cold with every change in the weather? Does your throat feel raw? And do sharp pains dart through your chest?

Don't you know these are danger signals which point to pneumonia, bronchitis, or consumption itself?

If you are ailing and have lost flesh lately, they are certainly danger signals. The question for you to decide is, "Have I the vitality to throw off these diseases?"

Don't wait to try SCOTT'S EMULSION "as a last resort." There is no remedy equal to it for fortifying the system. Prevention is easy.

Scott's Emulsion

prevents consumption and hosts of other diseases which attack the weak and those with poor blood.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is the one standard remedy for inflamed throats and lungs, for colds, bronchitis and consumption. It is a food medicine of remarkable power. A food, because it nourishes the body; and a medicine, because it corrects diseased conditions.

A SILENCED COUGH.

Many cough remedies relieve the symptoms and not the disease. They contain opium or other narcotics that drug the cough into silence, but that is not curing. The right way to cure a cough is to cure it to stay cured. The right remedy must go to the real source of the trouble and remove it.

Dana's Syrup Tolu, Tar and Wild Cherry

is such a remedy. It stimulates the secretions, soothes and heals the irritated surfaces and loosens the cough; nature does the rest. 25c.

There appears to be not a little interest in the proposed electric road from Medway to Franklin direct, and the company promises to begin building in the early spring provided the franchise be granted. Over a portion of the way the road will be upon private land, as there are a couple of hills which it is desired to avoid by going in a somewhat roundabout way.

Be careful, old man, you old veterans cannot stand the rackets you did forty years ago.

The work of the Lord is progressing at the Methodist church with great satisfaction and marked success. For two Sundays several new members have been received at each service, and still there are others who are candidates for membership. The fruits of earnest revival effort are in various ways abundantly manifest, much to the joy and delight of the pastor and his faithful flock. The pastor has begun a probation class, which meets each week for the instruction and help of those recently converted.

From statements made by several of the base ball men interested in the formation of a trolley league, to comprise the towns of Franklin, Milford, Woonsocket, North Attleboro, Attleboro and possibly one or two other places, there seems to be little doubt of the carrying out of the scheme, although the promoters say it is yet too early to talk for publication as to details. From other sources, however, it is learned that the Milford, Attleboro and Woonsocket Street Railway company looks with favor upon the project, and if the league is formed the company may have a financial interest in it.

Six young women weavers have arrived from Worcester and began work in the new linen toweling mill at Unionville last week. Four new bands living in Unionville, besides a number from here, were added to the force of help during the past week and the company is still hiring weavers. The machinery which arrived from Worcester is being set up and the work is being hurried as fast as possible. Until the new tenements can be erected at Unionville in the spring most of the mill help will live in Franklin, and a special car, to be chartered by the linen company, will convey the hands to and from Unionville daily.

A very encouraging letter has just been received from Rev. Mr. Longren at Montrose, Col., stating that his health has so materially improved that he now calls himself a well man, the climate agreeing both with him and his wife. He has been able to do a good deal in the way of improving the church, with a new chapel, new infants' department, new heating apparatus and other necessary affairs, together with a healthy and encouraging growth in membership, over twenty having been received into the church. It seems almost providential that the Lord should have raised up for him a work out there, thus profitably employing his time and permitting an improvement in health as well. He sends warm greetings to his many friends here.

The Advantage of Combination.

The American Woolen Co., of which Hon. Joseph G. Ray is vice-president, is having a most prosperous career. A leading official in the company says:

"We are making, net, $100,000 a week, or $5,000,000 a year. The mills run out about 700,000 yards of cloth a week, which means a year's good to the value of $50,000,000 or $60,000,000. There is actually a larger demand for woolen goods than can possibly be supplied. Our present prosperity after years of financial distress—you know we have just increased the wages of our employees, about 25,000 in all—has started everybody to buying cloths. Up to this time many have been wearing their garments for two seasons. Then the Dingley tariff has shut out the last bit of foreign competition.

"We opened last week here in New York the sale of heavy goods to be delivered next fall and winter and $10,000,000 worth of cloth was sold on the first day. Early Tuesday afternoon we had closed out the product of the next six months up to Aug. 1 of six of our twenty-seven mills. We cannot get enough salesmen to show our goods. Buyers from all over the country are here representing big clothiers, some of whom will purchase from $500,000 to $5,000,000 worth of cloth."

Liable to Err.

People who never gave an editor a word of commendation or appreciation in their lives will go out of their way to tell him of a lapse from exactness in some one of several hundred items of news gathered and printed in his paper and take an unholy joy in doing it. Nine times out of ten, too, these critics are of the sort that would resent as cruel and unkind any intimation that they ever wandered one iota from the straight line of perfection in morals, in manners or in tales told about their neighbors.—Brockton Enterprise.

At the Danger Point.

The union temperance meeting was held on Sunday evening in the Congregational church. Rev. Mr. Cook read the scripture lesson and Rev Dr. Hodge offered prayer. The church quartet rendered three selections in a very pleasing manner. The address of the evening was given by Rev. Mr. Sneath. He said: The seemingly impossible frequently occurs. This is evidenced in our daily life. That which we thought was impossible a decade ago is a matter of daily occurrence today. The cause of righteousness against rum is moving forward to a final triumph. The reign of Bacchus will eventually yield to the reign of sobriety. All great movements are of slow growth. The temperance reform is one of these. But there are ever encouraging evidences of the forward movement. Mr. Sneath then reviewed the progress of 1899 in the temperance reform. He said that forty-two railroad companies now required men to refrain from the use of intoxicants; employees in the U. S. Pension bureau who were given to drink were quietly given "leave to withdraw;" John D. Long had abolished the sale of liquors upon the vessels of our navy; the house of representatives had abandoned the canteen system from the army; a department of the national government was about to begin an investigation of the effects of intoxicants; the Knights of Columbus, United American Mechanics, the Masonic and other fraternities had voted to exclude saloon keepers from membership; life insurance companies and business corporations have been giving special consideration to the subject of moderate drinking. He also quoted a number of other pertinent and forceful facts.

Three truths impress themselves in the face of these evidences of progress: First, that the temperance reform is no longer a movement which can be spurned or derided. Experts in the economic, sociological, moral and spiritual realms are seriously considering the problem and seeking for wise measures by which the reform may be accomplished. Second, as one faces this movement he is more and more convinced that the great end of life is service and self-sacrifice for the welfare of humanity. He that would be great among you let him be your servant, and he is the greatest who renders the most service. Third, the great need of the hour is fidelity. Faithful loyalty to the principles of right will lead to final success. This fidelity must be shown at the caucus and at the polls. Last year the majority for no license in this town was less than ten per cent. of the registration. Three hundred and six registered voters remained away from the polls. Sixty-six voters cast their ballots for town officers, but failed to vote upon the license question. It is the declaration of experts that when a town's majority is less than ten per cent. of the registration it has reached the danger point. Franklin needs a new inspiration to fidelity, so that we shall get beyond this point of uncertainty. We can do it. There are a sufficient number of order-loving citizens to accomplish it. Let the agitation begin now and Franklin will once more sound forth the glad bugle note of no license at its coming election.

Annual Convention of The Spinsters' Matrimonial Club.

Through the efforts of St. John's Guild the Annual Convention of The Spinsters' Matrimonial Club will be held in Franklin this year at Morse's Opera house. The date of the convention will very likely be Wednesday evening, Feb. 21. The members feel that this convention is likely to be the most exciting in the club's history and that measures of grave importance may be adopted. The members feel that their matrimonial prospects have not improved during the past year and that heroic measures must be taken without delay. There is such great interest and even excitement manifested among Franklin people at the prospect of having the convention with us that an effort is making to induce the club to admit all comers to the hall. The club will very likely accede to this evident desire, and we confidentially inform the readers of the SENTINEL that rare sights are in store for them.

After Your Money.

There is always someone in town after the people's money. Just now we are being solicited to join an association which will admit of our purchasing goods from local and other merchants at ten per cent. discount. It looks nice, doesn't it? Then the merchants pay something for the privilege of selling at a discount That's nice. In the end the solicitor gets the money, and the public soon tires of the thing. But the smooth tongued stranger has departed and so has the dollar of the public and the five dollars of the merchant. That lesson lasts till another solicitor comes around. Better keep your money and trade with merchants who treat you as they treat everyone else.

Dr. E. M. Faxon, Boston, specialist in diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, will meet patients at hotel Briggs Thursdays from 9 to 12:30 o'clock.

How the Bank Was Moved.

Shortly before his death the late Moses Farnum related some of the history, new to me, of the early days of the N. Y. & N. E. R. R; also the founding of the Franklin National bank. The N. Y. & N. E. in its early days was known as the "Norfolk Co. R R" and terminated at Dedham. Its construction was conceived by Welcome Farnum, a wealthy manufacturer of Blackstone, R I. There by hangs many an interesting tale, but I will devote the time to recording something of the history of the Franklin National bank as related by Mr. Farnum.

It seems that a bank, called the Worcester County bank, was located in Blackstone, that Moses Farnum was its cashier, as well as one of the principal share-holders, having some twenty-five or thirty shares in his possession. The bank, being located so near others of the same stamp, was doing a comparatively small, though lucrative business. The Ray brothers having recently located in Franklin, Mass., and being share-holders in the Worcester Co. bank, became desirous of removing the same to the growing town of Franklin. Mr. Farnum was approached in the matter and found to be ready to sell his shares at a fair market rate, and ready to further the scheme by himself coming to Franklin as cashier of the contemplated bank. The influence of the Ray brothers became instrumental through Senator George F. Hoar, of having necessary congressional legislation enacted, to provide for the removal of the bank to Franklin, "whenever a legal majority or three-fourths of its directors should so vote." This was news to many of the de facto directors in Blackstone and vicinity, causing an early meeting to be held, at which, after a stormy session, the dissatisfied shares were secured, at a certain rate, together with a vote to remove the institution to Franklin. The desirability and value of such transactions were based upon congressional action allowing only a certain number of banks to each state. Massachusetts, having the full quota, no new bank could be started in any place without first securing the charter of an already existing bank. Thus, the value of a bank charter was very much enhanced.

Hon. Joseph G. Ray seized upon the somewhat "sleepy condition" of the old Worcester County Bank, to remove and give new life to its fortunes in the booming town of Franklin. All the preliminaries having been attended to, votes secured, shares duly paid for, Mr. Ray one day appeared in Blackstone with a beach wagon and reined up to the door of the bank. Here he found Mr. Farnum attending to his duties as cashier, and the bank business following its usual channel.

"See here, Ray! what are you down here with that beach wagon for?" asked Moses. "I have come to move the bank." "Well, that is a pretty thing to move a bank in."

The books, papers, bonds, notes, money and other belongings, were duly packed into the aforesaid beach wagon, and the pair wended their lonesome way through the woods and swamps to the town of Franklin, where they arrived late in the day. The beach wagon, with its precious boxes, was driven into Mr. Ray's stable, where it remained all night, much to the discomfort of the honorable gentleman's sleep. Previous to all this, Mr. Ray had secured two rooms in the house now owned by C. J. McKenzie,—then occupied by a Mr. Hawes, for the embryo bank. Having, with the help of his brother, James P. Ray, purchased a steel safe, much too large for the rooms, they had it placed on the piazza and "sheathed up," a door having been cut through the house wall into the new so-called "vault." The morning after the arrival of the bank, Mr. Ray arose early, went to Metcalf's lumber yard, had a pair of wooden horses made of suitable height; this with suitable planks, constituted the first counter of the bank. It being first covered with black cloth, our adventurers slowly wheeled down the wagon, and tenderly lovingly, carried the infant bank into its new quarters. The well known "Ray's Block" was soon completed, and the infant having become a lusty stripling was moved into its present location.

This was the year 1871 or 1872. Mr. Farnum continued as cashier, and trusted financial adviser from that time until he lost the use of his right hand in the fearful "Quincy Disaster" on the Old Colony Railroad in 1891 or 1892, a period of nearly twenty years. Thus, to the wise foresight, push and energy and enterprise of the Ray brothers, is due the founding of the Franklin National Bank.

Farmers' Club.

The Franklin Farmers' club met last Monday evening with A. R. Willard, Garfield street. Mrs. Willard was called upon to open the discussion. Mrs. J. L. Fisher of City Mills read the paper of the evening on "Woman's Work of To-day." She said: As we look over our own broad land we see woman's activity in every good work. In the church she is ever active. In the prayer meeting, the Sabbath school and the social gatherings of the church you will find her a willing worker. The time has been when woman's work did not reach outside her household; for her voice to be heard in a public meeting was to lower herself in the opinion of good society. We are thankful that has become a thing of the past and today she assumes her place beside that of man as his equal. She is ready to work with heart and hand for the temperance cause.

The W. C. T. U. of the United States number many thousand of noble women and their numbers are increasing year by year. We will follow her to foreign lands, leaving home and friends to endure all hardships for the sake of giving light to the heathen. The power of her influence is not confined to rank or circumstances. What would the hospitals do throughout our land were it not for woman? She is untiring in relieving the wants of the sufferers, and in many cases her warm heart and sympathy would do a sufferer more good than medicine. In the home you will find her as she cares for her family an earnest worker, never thinking of self while she can do for others. Whom do we expect to look after the aged parents, who have given us homes and taught us the first lessons of labor and love, now in their loneliness and affliction, but woman? To whom does the husband, as he labors each day, look for encouragement and counsel but to the wife? Whom do the children, in their daily pleasures and disappointments, from infancy to manhood and womanhood, come to for strength, assistance and approval but to the mother? Her work is not done. As time goes on her influence will be felt more and more. I am reminded of the old adage:

> "A man's work is from sun to sun;
> A woman's work is never done."

Remarks were made by Rev. Mr. Sneath and Rev. Mr. Sleeper, both agreeing with the thought that woman's work in society was broadening and deepening as never before, and that her influence was greater today than ever. Mr. Willard sang a solo and Mrs. Sleeper gave a reading. The social part of the evening and the refreshments were best of all.

The Controversy in 1800.

One hundred years ago there was a dispute about the close of the eighteenth century, as there is now a dispute about the close of the nineteenth. The following very apt verses were written on New Year's in 1801 and read as follows:

Precisely 12 o'clock last night
The eighteenth century took its flight.
Full many a calculating head
Has racked its brain, its ink has shed,
To prove by metaphysics fine
A hundred means but 99;
While at their wisdom others wondered,
But took one more to make a hundred.
Strange at the 18th century's close
While light in beams effulgent glows,
When bright illumination's ray
Has chased the darkness far away,
Heads filled with mathematic lore
Dispute if two and two make four.
Go on ye scientific sages,
Collect your light a few more ages,
Perhaps as swells the vast amount
A century hence you'll learn to count.

WHEN a Massachusetts lawyer intimates that Daniel Webster would hardly be listened to in a court of law in this day he rather overrates his own ability to hold the public interest. It is quite likely that Daniel hasn't lost all of his prestige yet.

LET'S see. Butler said that the only order to be given was "advance." That depends on which way his army is facing.

ILLINOIS passed a law preventing freaks from exhibiting themselves, but it has just now been declared unconstitutional. From some of the antics of Governor Tanner, ex Governor Altgeldt and Senator Mason evidently the law was inoperative while it was on the statute books.

THE continued delay in the Molineaux trial, because of the sickness of a juror, will doubtless result in the selection of thirteen jurors, so as to provide for an emergency like this. A retrial of this case would weary all concerned.

BROOKLYN is in the throes of a revival and some of the Unitarians feel that their denomination is being singled out rather than a general desire for conversions. This is unfortunate; the crusade ought to be against vice, and crime, and evil doing. Good may come out of it yet.

Having a Great Run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Manager Martin, of the Pierson drug store, informs us that he is having a great run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He sells five bottles of that medicine to one of any other kind, and it gives great satisfaction. In these days of la grippe there is nothing like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to stop the cough, heal up the sore throat and lungs and give relief within a very short time. The sales are growing, and all who try it are pleased with its prompt action.—South Chicago Daily Calumet. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

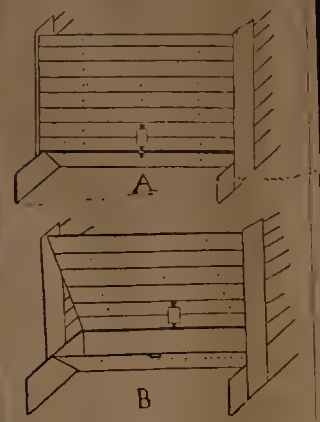
CONVENIENT TROUGH.

An Idea from Denmark Which Could Be Utilized to Advantage by American Farmers.

Getting swill into a pig trough is generally somewhat difficult, as the hogs can hardly ever be kept out until it is filled. For over 20 years Danish farmers have used a device that renders filling the trough an easy matter. The front of the pen is arranged in the shape of a swinging-door suspended from the top, and placed in either of the two positions represented in the accompanying figures, A and B. After the door has been opened (toward the back), (Fig. B), the trough is filled, whereupon the door swings back in its fixed position (Fig. A). A single bolt is all that is necessary to keep the door in either of the two positions.—Iowa Homestead.



TROUGH FOR HOGS

THE PRICE OF BEEF.

It Is Bound to Remain High Until Farmers Stop Selling Their Calves for Veal.

There has been a great deal said about high prices of beef. I will give you my observations about it. I agree with most of them that it is supply and demand that cause high prices. Some four or five years ago prices were too low for Illinois and eastern state farmers to compete with western range cattle, so they sold what they had at low prices, and in place of raising from two to ten calves they let them suck till four to six weeks old and sold them in Chicago for veal. That was the best way for them to do at the time.

Now it is different. The western range cattle are not in such great numbers as four or five years ago. If a feeder here wants to feed cattle he goes to Chicago and ships them in to feed, because he can't pick up his feeders here in the country as before. If prices stay where they are now, next spring will see Illinois farmers raising more calves and better bred ones. In about three years they will be ready for market. Just think, if every farmer on 80 or 160 acres throughout Illinois and the eastern states would raise two steers a year, what a supply that would make! Meanwhile prices will be high till that is done, in my opinion.—S. Dill, in Drovers' Journal.

The state department has received a report from Consul Heenan at Odessa, Russia, stating that the failure of the crops in many of the provinces of European Russia is a much more serious affair than is generally admitted. Energetic steps have just been taken to meet the situation. The famine districts are divided up and government aid is being given according to the extent of the failure in the several districts. Employment also is being given to a large number of peasants on special lines of work, such as road making. One of the most difficult questions to be solved is how working stock and other animals are to be saved, the hay crop being a complete failure.

Robbed!

You wouldn't pay for a dozen oranges and accept half a dozen. Yet you pay for a pound of coffee and accept half a pound!

Suppose you look at it in this way:—You buy coffee for its flavor and aroma. Roasted coffee parts very quickly with both when exposed to the air. It is possible for a pound of coffee to lose one-half its strength. It is then of no more value than half a pound of fresh coffee.

When you buy exposed coffee from a bin it has lost more or less of its virtue. You don't get it all! It is just as if you had bought pears and some one had bitten a piece from each pear.

Now, to show you how much you have been losing, take home to-day a one or two-pound air-tight can of

Seal Brand
COFFEE

and try it. It was hermetically sealed as it came from the roaster. You never tasted such coffee! One cup will be worth a world of argument. Just try it! Do it to-day! Every grocer sells it.

What Is Life.

A worthless stone sinks in the sea,
So sinks a gem of sparkling light;
A moment's ripple there will be,
Then all is lost from sight.

One mendicant and millionaire,
The sober man and senseless sot,
The mother and her child at prayer,
Here yesterday, are not.

The world moves on just as of old;
Men work and war, and children play
Kings covet fame, and misers gold,
And women weep and pray.

But God knows where is hid the gem,
Where all His precious jewels sleep;
And on "That Day" will gather them
From tomb and grave and deep.
—W. T. Sleeper, in Chicago Advance.

The Universal Chase.

The world is a field where thistle down flies,
And the people are children who run
To catch the frail globes as they fall, as they rise,
And many are striving for one

And, after the chase over stubble and stone,
The weary child catches a ball—
When he holds in his hand the frail fluff as his own—
O, what was the use, after all?

HINTS FOR SHEPHERDS.

The mistake must not be made in having the ram and ewe over-fat, but in good thrifty condition.

The sheep is the greatest scavenger of the farm. A small flock is of great value on any farm for this purpose alone.

Money is not at as great a risk in a sheep as in other farm animals, for, should he die, we can "take it out of his hide."

The flock will gather quantities of nutritious food on the stubble and cornfields in the fall after the crops have been harvested.

Roots must enter largely in the ration for fattening sheep. They save grain and produce a superior quality of mutton.—Farm Journal.

Care of Horses' Hoofs.

Horses are confined to stables more in winter than in summer, and as a consequence their feet are more apt to become diseased, especially when kept upon dry board floors. The front feet are always more affected than the hind, becoming hard and brittle. To prevent this, to have a little pure cod liver oil applied once in two or three days by means of a rag or soft brush is a great aid. Rub over the outside surface of the hoof and also the frog and sole. Apply it at night, and it will have plenty of time to penetrate into the horny substance and dry before using next morning. It is all important that superfluous growth be trimmed off occasionally.—Prairie Farmer.

Why the Hogs Succumb.

Prof. John A. Craig, of the Iowa experiment station, explains why the hog [illegible] when over- [illegible] ver- [illegible] ith perspiration. [illegible] of this at once begins to reduce his temperature. Nature has made no such provision for the relief of the hog when heated by exposure to the sun or by excessive exercise. This is reason enough why it should have an abundant and convenient water supply, shade and a convenient bathing or wallowing place, whether on summer pasturage or confined in a lot, and have plenty of green food that is laxative and cooling.

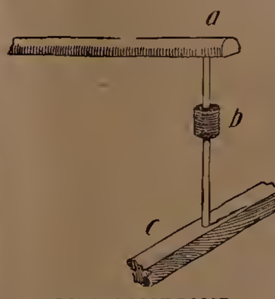
Make a foundation of four-by-four scantling, in the shape of a frame, about as long as the building and wide enough to make the roosts of suitable capacity. For the perches use three-by-four or four-by-four scantlings, ripped through the middle so as to make two pieces four by one and one-half or four by two. The upper corners are rounded off as shown, and the perches are supported on standards of inch pipe 18 inches long, or half-inch iron rods. An old fruit can is attached to each support by being soldered at the bottom of the can, the top being left open. These cups are kept half full of coal oil or crude petroleum.



LOUSE-PROOF ROOST.

The roosts can be lifted off the supports for cleaning and to give access to the floor of the building. They may receive an application of coal oil or be whitewashed themselves occasionally. Instead of using the framework for foundation the pipes or rods may be simply driven into the ground in their proper places. In the cut but one support and one end of a perch are shown. The perch may be any length, and is supported at the end not shown in the same manner as at the one illustrated. --Orange Judd Farmer.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Do not feed too much soft feed.

Keep four ducks to one drake.

Never use imperfect fowls for breeding.

Feed milk and bran for growth, milk and meal to fatten.

Generally, the better the scratcher the better the layer.

When you get ready to fatten fowls, do the work quickly.

Separate the cocks from the hens; they molt better alone.

Game chickens, given a free range, are in danger of being overfed.

Get rid of the hens you do not intend to keep through the winter.

Hens require a variety of food; they get excessively tired of one kind.

The most successful fanciers are those that keep one or two breeds.

Hens should be killed when they are three years old; they lay fewer eggs after that.

Grain is sufficient in lime and mineral matter, but bran is rich in nitrogen and carbon.

Scalding fowls before picking partially cooks the delicate skin, rendering it dry and wrinkled.

While linseed and cottonseed meals are excellent foods, too much of them will cause a loss of feathers.

It rarely pays to spend much time trying to cure a bad case of roup or egg-bound in hens. Use the hatchet.

When your birds have bowel disease, change the food for a few days and at the same time change the grit.—St Louis Republic.

Some Advice to Shippers.

Don't fail carefully to inspect your shipment before closing the box. Put in the memorandum on your own bill head, or an envelope, showing the count and other data. Keep a duplicate yourself, and thereby save much annoyance and frequently a loss. Don't chase off into a new market with untried people just because of a possible temporary advantage. Nine times out of ten you will lose. Keep in touch with a good house in several markets, and use judgment in shipping to any of them. Watch the reports and forecasts, and then allow for weather changes.—A Few Hens.

Use Pure-Bred Roosters.

With a small flock of 15 hens, which should raise during the season a hundred chickens easily, the use of a full-blood cock of some large breed will add 100 pounds to those hundred chickens if allowed to grow to maturity. The extra hundred pounds of flesh will be laid on without any additional cost of feeding, for a scrub chicken eats as much as a full-blooded one. This gain can be made by the purchase of a single good rooster, and should not cost over three dollars at most.—Guy E. Mitchell, in Farm and Fireside.

Lame Fowls Are Useless.

If the hen gets lame and continues so it is generally better to send her to the kettle. It has been the experience of many that a lame fowl stands round so much that she gets fat and stops laying. The queer thing is that she will be found to have no signs of eggs in her. This seems to be due to the fact that the fat has increased to such an extent that the formation of even embryonic eggs is discontinued. Why a fat fowl should stop forming eggs it is difficult to say, but it is a fact.—Farmers' Review.

"Deeds are Fruits,

His Reward.

He went a peaceful way
And tried to do his best,
With never any room
For hate within his breast.

He won no great renown,
He gained no splendid height,
For all his days were spent
In merely doing right.

He never broke a heart,
He caused no tears to flow,
But where he slumbers weeds
And briers only grow.

So let him sleep away
Till summoned by the Lord—
Sweet virtue hasn't ceased
To be its own reward.

Disappointment.

She smiled at me! My foolish heart
Responded with a sudden bound.
I loved her so! It seemed at last
That joy and comfort I had found.
New courage filled me—for till then
My hope had been but faint and weak.
She smiled at me! And I resolved
That I that very night would speak.

She smiled at me! Ah, luckless day!
Its pain I never can forget.
For now I have no hope at all,
Although she is not married yet.
She smiled at me! Fool that I was!
For hours the wine of life I quaffed:
But when, encouraged by her smile,
I told my love, she only laughed.

My summer girl is home again,
To smile once more on me;
She brought a most bewitching tan
Back with her from the sea.

But better than the tan she brought
Is something in her breast:
Last night she looked into my eyes
And modestly confessed

She walked and talked with other men,
Down there beside the sea,
And, from their foolish actions, learned
To know the worth of me.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Make well kidneys—they are not a new medicine—not an experiment—they've been tested and thousands endorse their merit. Here's a case of it:

Mr. J. W. Parker, carpenter in the wood turning department of the Fitchburg Car Shops, Fitchburg, Mass., says: "In the month of February, 1896, I was asked by a gentleman who called on me to publicly give my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. What I gave him for publication has appeared in our Fitchburg papers. I was interviewed a second time over two years afterwards when I told my interviewer the following: Ever since my original statement appeared in the Fitchburg papers, I have been repeatedly asked by people in the shops where I work, on the street and by callers at my house if the said statement were true. I often wished it were in Halifax, and in allowing my name to appear as an endorser of Doan's Kidney Pills during the coming year, I want it thoroughly understood that they proved of great benefit and from my experience I can conscientiously say they are one patent medicine upon which people can depend to do as represented."

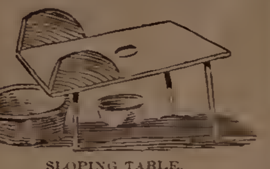
FOR DRESSING FOWLS.

Method That Permits All the Feathers Being Saved Without Any Soiling Whatever.

The tilting table here shown is just big enough to hold a fowl firmly between the side boards, with its head or neck down through the opening, so that no blood will get upon the table or the feathers. The latter can thus be kept clean and sold. Even at a low price, the feathers from large flocks make not a little addition to the profit side of the account. This method permits the feathers being saved without any soiling whatever, consequently the highest price is obtained.—Orange Judd Farmer.



SLOPING TABLE.

Each Breed Has Advantages.

It is doubtful if any one can correctly select the "best breeds" of fowls without having the same claim made just as earnestly for a dozen other breeds. Some breeds may have certain advantages, but it will also have its disadvantages. Each breed may be said to have only one dominant talent. What it gains in one direction it may lose in another. After all, there would not be ten eggs different in a year between the best and the most inferior (if they could be discovered), with all conditions alike. The man who will claim any one breed as the best issues a direct challenge to all other breeders.—American Gardening.

The Gain of a Chick.

The question of how much will a chick gain is an interesting one, says Poultry West. The following is about correct: The eggs weigh two ounces; the newly hatched chick weighs 1¼ ounces; at one week old, two ounces; three weeks old, 6¼ ounces; four weeks old, ten ounces; five weeks old, 14 ounces; six weeks old, 18½ ounces; seven weeks old, 23½ ounces; nine weeks old, 32 ounces; ten weeks old, 36 ounces; 11 weeks old, 41 ounces.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently overcome habitual constipation, well informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system. Buy the genuine, made by the California Fig Syrup Co.

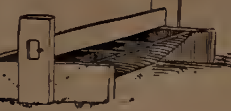
Can't be perfect health without pure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters makes pure blood. Tones and invigorates the whole system.

"A young man came into our store yesterday suffering from a severe attack of cramp colic," writes B F. Hess, miller and general merchant, Dickey's Mountain, Pa. "He had tried various home remedies without relief. As I had used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy I gave him a dose and it soon brought him out all right. I never saw a fellow so rejoiced." Sold by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

EXCELLENT PIG TROUGH.

Fred O. Sibley Describes One That Is Very Convenient, Durable and Easy to Make.

The illustration shows a kind of trough for feeding pigs which is very convenient, durable and easy to make. The end boards are long enough so that the pigs cannot turn the affair over, and owing to the upright board running lengthwise of the trough and dividing it into two parts, they are also prevented from getting into it and fouling their food. Strips four inches wide are nailed to the edges of the trough at requisite distances, separating the trough into proper space for each pig, and thus prevents crowding. In order to avoid fighting among the animals, there should always be more spaces provided than there are pigs to feed.—Fred O. Sibley, in Ohio Farmer.



TROUGH FOR FEEDING PIGS.

Cheap Shelters for Sheep.

One of the advantages in keeping sheep is that they do not need an expensive building as a shelter. A shed open on one side suits them as well as a tight barn, and even better, as they require considerable ventilation. But it should be so arranged that both rain and snow can be kept out of it, for the sheep should not get their fleece wet in cold weather. It takes too long to get it dry again, and the whole body gets chilled, reducing vitality, even if they do not take colds to set them coughing and running at the nose. Nor should water be allowed to run into the shed from outside. A sheep will not lie down in the mud or on wet straw. Keep the inside of the shed dry and well littered with clean straw and the sheep will be healthy and thrive well, even on moderate feed.—American Cultivator.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

A SILENCED COUGH.

Many cough remedies relieve the symptoms and not the disease. They contain opium or other narcotics that drug the cough into silence, but that is not curing. The right way to cure a cough is to cure it to stay cured. The right remedy must go to the real source of the trouble and remove it.

Dana's Syrup Tolu, Tar and Wild Cherry

is such a remedy. It stimulates the secretions, soothes and heals the irritated surfaces and loosens the cough; nature does the rest. 25c.

The Republicans have decided upon Friday evening, Feb. 23, as the time for their caucus, and as the town hall has been secured for that evening for another party it is not unlikely the Republican caucus may be held in Music hall.

E. A. Bryan of Quincy is the new assistant in the Mason drug store, C. E. Dearden having returned to his home in Springfield. Mr. Bryan is keeping house on School street and comes here with the reputation of being a competent pharmacist.

All who desire any special matters to be brought up before the coming town meeting should notify the selectmen as early as possible, as they are already considering the terms of the warrant, which has to be posted at least ten days before election.

When we stated recently that Joseph P. Bassett had four inmates of his home down with the mumps we thought we were correct. We find we were quite within the bounds, however, as there was at one time eleven persons wrestling with the mumps in the house.

The selectmen held a meeting Wednesday evening to attend to closing the accounts for the fiscal year of town business. Bills were approved and accounts generally looked into. The financial condition was found to be satisfactory and as good as was expected.

For the benefit of the patrons of the office Postmaster Conroy has succeeded in securing a Sunday mail closing at 5 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, in all directions. This will be continued as long as the amount of mail matter deposited warrants the additional work.

Charles W. Stewart is laid up with a severe attack of malaria, being attacked after business hours in the bank on Tuesday. He was found lying on the lounge there unconscious. He was taken home and a physician summoned, who pronounced the difficulty malaria. He is now more comfortable but very weak.

A new office is now to be voted for, as a tree warden "must" be elected annually by every Massachusetts town as one of the town officers. This is freshly brought to mind by the Massachusetts forestry association in a circular signed by Allen Chamberlain, secretary. The forestry association procured the enactment of the act.

There is considerable speculation about town as to what action will be taken by "The Spinsters' Matrimonial club" at its convention to be held at the Opera house on Wednesday, Feb. 21. It is said that a number of Franklin's handsomest young ladies are members of this organization. We wonder who they are!

The next regular meeting of the Alden club will be held on the evening of Feb. 12, when Miss Hodge will present a paper on "Rudyard Kipling." Mrs. Chas. Stewart will sing the Recessional, with De Koven's music, and Mrs. E. D. Daniels will read some selections from the poet's works. A very interesting meeting is anticipated.

George C. Daniels, the New England passenger agent for the Southern railroad, the largest in the South, reports an unusual amount of travel southward during the past few months, his road having done an enormous business. Parties desiring to go South or Southeast will find him especially willing and ready to do all in his power to make the trip a pleasant and reasonable one.

Walter Austin and Miss Ida Moreau were married by Rev. Father Lee at St. Mary's rectory at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss May Moreau, and Joseph Deans of City Mills was best man. After the ceremony the wedding party was driven to the home of the bride's parents on Cottage street, where a wedding supper was served, a number of invited guests being present. The couple will reside on Peck street.

The March town meeting will be asked to take action on the disposal of the boiler and engine on Pleasant street belonging to the town. The engine is about ten-horse power, was new a few years ago, and has been used but slightly. It was bought to run a stone crusher, but is not large enough to run as large a crusher as is required for town purposes, so it is thought better by many to sell the engine rather than to let it rust out by time. The small crusher, which was used a short time since with the engine belongs to E. K. Ray and the town has none of its own.

Roll of honor for December and January in the Nason street school:—Louise Johnson, Elizabeth Stewart, Thomas Cody, Frank Howland, Grace Griffin, Doris Corson, Ralph Peden, Joseph Murphy, Frank Perron, Johnnie Coughlin, Jean Stewart, Elsie Peary, Ethel Avery, Chester Darling, Francis Morell, Elma Baro, Clara Dalton, Leo Thibodeau, Flora Clark, James Joyce, Eddie Hutchinson, Edith Tyler, Blauch Leclair, Gracie Winters, Maurice Marks, Ralph Tracy, Olive Coleman, Julia Coleman, Evelyn Westland, Alice Smith, Gladys Smith, Clarence Bristow.

At the funeral of the late Mrs. Charles Morse on Tuesday afternoon the bearers were Profs. Peirce and Burrington and Messrs. Wiggin, Jenks, McKenzie and Chilson. The music was furnished by Messrs. Dwyer and Sherman, Mrs. Jenks and Miss Flossie Whiting. The remains were interred in the cemetery at South Attleboro. Before the death of Mr. Morse $1,500 was loaned to the Universalist church, the interest at five per cent. to be paid to the widow, and the sum to belong to the church at her death. Mr. Morse also left quite a little property to Dean academy.

The American (Ray) Woolen company's mill here goes on record as being the first of the twenty seven mills operated by the company throughout the country in disposing of its portion of the $10,000,000 worth of cloth which was placed on sale in New York on Monday, Jan. 22, by the American Woolen company. In a little less than four hours after the sale began, negotiations were completed and the product of the next six months in the Ray mill were sold. The goods are to be delivered next fall. This speaks well for the class of goods manufactured at the Ray mill, and is at the same time a high compliment to the management.

Good sized audiences have greeted the World's Fair Glass Show and Venetian Vaudeville company at Music hall every evening so far this week, the members giving a very good entertainment, with a change of programme each night, in addition to the glass blowing exhibition. On Tuesday evening Miss Sadie Raymond was awarded the prize for being the handsomest lady in the hall, Wednesday evening John Reynolds took the prize for the best gentleman dancer and last evening the judges declared Mrs. Mary Higgins to be the best and most graceful lady dancer. The show will close tomorrow night, when an elegant prize awaits the handsomest baby, this to be decided by ballot.

The revival meetings at the Baptist church this week have been well attended and deeply interesting, and there has been some conversions. Tuesday evening Rev. Mr. Codding preached and Miss Lillian Coleman sang. Wednesday evening the sermon was by Rev. Mr. Fisher, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart sang duets. Thursday evening Rev. Mr. Guernwood was the preacher and there was a solo by Miss Darling. The church is in an excellent spiritual condition and the good work promises to go on. There is no sensationalism or excitement, but the unconverted are calmly considering the matter of salvation and giving themselves to Christ. The plan for revival meetings adopted by the pastor, Rev. F. B. Sleeper, seems better than to employ an evangelist who would come with arbitrary and exciting methods, contrary to the good judgment of the church. B.

Complimentary Mention.

The Milford Journal says: "Dr. J. C. Gallison of Franklin is now fast regaining his health, and many of his friends in the 11th district think him in every way of congressional size to take the place of Hon. C. F. Sprague. There is no doubt of Dr. Gallison's capacity and worthiness for a congressman, his ability and merit as a man and as a Republican being unquestioned. His two years' record in the Massachusetts house of representatives was a useful and honorable one."

The many friends in town of the genial and accomplished doctor second this nomination of Brother Cook, and only regret that the health of the medical gentleman for the present precludes any thought of further political preferment. While, personally, congressional honors are furthest from his thoughts, yet it is naturally a source of pleasure and gratification to him to feel that his friends here and elsewhere are not unmindful of the excellent service he rendered his district and the state when in the legislature. His eminence as a physician, his courtesy as a gentleman, his readiness in polemics, his skill with pen and pencil, in verse or caricature, together with a marked literary ability, in a measure testify to the versatility of "Gallison of Franklin."

The Medway Street Railway Project.

If anything, there is more interest in and agitation over the proposed railroad to Medway than there was to Woonsocket, and many arguments are advanced upon both sides by the respective adherents. Those who favor the direct road assert that had it been left originally to the citizens of Franklin whether an electric road should be built to Woonsocket or Medway the latter place would have been selected, the merchants especially favoring that town on account of the prospect of new business in the Franklin stores.

Again, they assert that the direct route would be the cheaper one, the more expeditious and having no connections the most satisfactory. As to going around by City Mills and Norfolk they urge that would be as bad as going through Unionville and Caryville.

Upon the other hand, the objections are urged that the company desiring the franchise is simply putting in the road to head off others and eventually sell out to a syndicate. Further, as the Ray interests are so largely identified with Franklin, and so large a sum of money has already been laid out for their road, it would be hardly fair to allow a competing road to come in direct, since the only reason the North Bellingham and Caryville branch was built was to secure this very Medway business. So long as the Ray interests control the railway lines entering here, so long will the public interest be conserved and looked after, since many of the gentlemen are so closely allied with the financial prosperity of the town.

It is quite unlikely that the present board of selectmen, whose term of office expires so shortly, will make a definite decision upon the matter, unless the sentiment of the meeting should be decidedly adverse to the project. It is possible that it may be necessary to call a town meeting to get a full and free expression of the voters of the town instructing the selectmen as to their wishes in the matter. The hearing is to be held in the selectmen's room on Monday evening, Feb. 12, and it is expected there will be a large number present.

In this connection it is noticed that there has been presented a measure in the lower branch of the Massachusetts legislature relative to franchises in public streets that is of interest. It provides: "Any person, firm or corporation having a franchise in the streets of any town, shall pay therefor to the town, annually, such sum as may be determined by the selectmen of the town.

Everywhere the Trolley.

Another electric line is proposed near us, running into Wrentham. It is the Continental Construction Co. of Boston and it has procured franchises for a street railway in Westwood, beginning at the Dedham line, thence through Norway, Sharon, Foxboro and North Attleboro to Wrentham; is seeking franchises in Wrentham and Cumberland, R. I., and expects to run a street car line from Boston connections in West wood to the eastern boundary of Woonsocket on the Diamond Hill road. Not having any expectation of getting a franchise in that city, and understanding that the Woonsocket Street Railway company's franchise is an exclusive one, they expect to run automobile cars over the highways to the center of the city.

The proposed line from Westwood to Woonsocket will be about thirty miles long, making the distance about forty miles from Woonsocket to Boston. Supt. Metcalf thinks his company has no idea of "splitting a nickel" by giving four cent fares. He admits that his company has never tried the automobile idea, but is satisfied it will work.

Come Tonight.

The Piacere club, which is to give an entertainment in Odd Fellows' hall this evening, is admirably managed, and its concerts have never been surpassed here in point of artistic merit and popular acceptability. The club makes a specialty of light opera melodies, standard overtures and classical selections of a popular nature. The organization is at once a banjo, mandolin and guitar club, a glee club and an orchestra. Many will attend from Woonsocket and a dance will follow the concert.

Special Revival Services.

This evening at the Methodist church there will be a special evangelistic service. The pastor, Rev. S. A. Cook, will preach a short sermon and other features also of the service will be decidedly helpful and interesting. A special invitation is extended not only to Christians but especially to those who are not conscious of a personal experience of the saving power of Christ.

COMMUNICATIONS.

[The editor assumes no responsibility for matter under this caption. This column is entirely at the disposal of the public, avoiding, as far as possible, trivial and controversial matter.]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SENTINEL: Dear Sir:—There has appeared in your paper of recent issues several articles which show how little the minds of some people comprehend the plan and purpose of God in regard to the human family; his methods, not only in the present age, but in the ages past, of dealing with man in respect to the two questions of sin and man's responsibility. As we have read these articles and heard similar statements from the lips of those holding like views, we are forcibly reminded of the words recorded in Rom. 10: 2, 3.

It must never be forgotten that man was not created a sinner, but he was created a perfectly free moral agent and by his own conscious and voluntary choice sin entered into the world. And right here it might be well to note the downward steps in the fall of man: (1) Listening to slander against God. (2) Doubting God's word and His love. (3) Looking at what God had forbidden. (4) Lusting for what God had prohibited. (5) Disobeying God's command. And these have been the stepping stones in the downward course of man ever since. We have the history of God's repeated testing of the natural man, and repeatedly is recorded the failure of man in his responsibility to God. his failure to follow God's leading and directing, and his failure to heed the warnings of God against sin, and consequently bringing repeatedly judgment and disaster upon himself by his own deliberate and persistent violation of God's laws.

After all these failures of man in the ages past we still see God in His matchless love and tender mercy providing a new and living way, a way so plain and simple that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein—salvation through our Lord, Jesus Christ; for by the law "All are under sin, all are gone out of the way, none seeketh after God, all the world are guilty before Him." Thus the need of a personal Saviour. It is the sacrificial death of Jesus Christ which brings in a new order of things, a dispensation of pure grace which means God giving righteousness, instead of requiring righteousness as under the law, and man's responsibility in this day is to accept God's sacrifice for sin which is found in Jesus Christ, Jno. 1: 12, "But as many as received Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God."

But, mark you, man is still a free moral agent and can accept or reject this sacrifice for sin, but he need not remain in ignorance as to the result of his choice, whether it be acceptance or rejection, for the result of each is clearly stated in the following scripture passages, which are only a few of the many: Jno. 3: 36, 1 Jno. 5: 10, 12, Rom. 6: 23, Matt. 25: 32, 34, 41, and note that the everlasting fire (eternal R. V.) mentioned in the last named verse is in no sense intended as a place of punishment for man but was prepared for the devil and his angels, and, judging from personal observation and experience in regard to the character of his satanic majesty, the place prepared for him is a perfectly suitable place, and if suitable for him, why not suited to those who deliberately persist in following him and doing his work, and who prefer his company to that of the Redeemer from sin, Jesus Christ and His saints?

We are not to limit God's grace in any sense, nor, on the other hand, must we presume upon it beyond what His word has declared. If there be a probationary state for the sinner after death His word is so obscure in regard to it that we must conclude that it was not the purpose of God that man should neglect his salvation till after death; on the contrary He plainly says, "Now is the accepted time, behold, now is the day of salvation." Individually we have nowhere a promise of time to repent of sin but the present. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him."

If there is a probationary state for sinners after death, what interpretation is to be given Christ's words, where he says to persons of this class, "I go my way, and ye shall seek me and shall die in your sins; whither I go ye cannot come." "Between us and you there is a great gulf fixed, so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us that would come from thence." "I tell you nay; but except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." We fail absolutely to find anywhere Bible authority for a future state of probation for the unbeliever and the impenitent. Again, on the contrary, "But the fearful and unbelievingshall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." The death which is the final outcome of a life of sin and unbelief is defined in the Bible as a portion in the place of torment where will be cast in the beast and the false prophet, and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever.

This conception of the future state of those who reject the redemption offered to them in Christ is indeed an awful and appalling one, but is, however, a scriptural conception and a reasonable one when we come to see sin in all its appalling nature, and especially the greatest of all sin, that of treading under foot the mercy of God toward sinners and rejecting Jesus Christ whom His love has provided as a Saviour.

As has been truly said, shallow views of sin and of God's holiness, and of the glory of Jesus Christ and His claims upon us lie at the bottom of weak theories of the doom of the impenitent. When we see sin in all its hideousness and enormity, the holiness of God in all its perfection, and the glory of Jesus Christ in all its infinity, nothing but a doctrine that those who persist in the choice of sin, who love darkness rather than light and who persist in the rejection of the Son of God shall endure everlasting anguish, will satisfy the demands of our own moral intuitions.

Nothing but the fact that we dread suffering more than we loathe sin and more than we love the glory of Jesus Christ makes us repudiate the thought that beings who eternally choose sin should eternally suffer, or that men who despise God's mercy and spurn His Son should be given over to endless anguish. And so, entirely contrary to the statement of our unbelieving friend, the orthodox Christian in this life does all in his power to bring the unbeliever into a reconciliatory state with God through acceptance of Christ, and at the gate of death consigns his loved ones who have received power to become sons of God by faith in Jesus Christ to the all-loving and tender Father, into whose family such a loved one has been adopted, "heir of God, joint heirs with Jesus Christ." We consign him to the inheritance incorruptible and undefiled reserved in heaven for him.

And, on the other hand, the dear one who deliberately and persistently rejects God's offers of mercy we consign at the gate of death to a merciful, just and all-wise judge, one who shall not judge after the sight of his eyes nor reprove after the hearing of his ears, but with righteousness shall he judge, for we declare unto you that the Lord is righteous in all His ways and holy in all His works.

Legislators and Morals.

In a recent article in Scribner's magazine Robert Grant gives utterance to some good thoughts upon the relations of our lawmakers to their constituents and the influence of good men in congress. He says: "Most of us try to cling to the fine theory that the legislators of the country represent the best morals and brains of the community, and that the men elected to public office in the councils of the land have been put forward as being peculiarly fitted to interpret and provide for our needs, by force of their predominant individual virtues and abilities. Most of us appreciate in our secret souls that this theory is not lived up to, and is available only for Fourth of July or other rhetorical purposes. Yet we dislike to dismiss the ideal as unattainable, even though we know that actual practice is remote from it; and, patriots still, we go on asserting that this is our method of choice, vaguely hoping, like the well-intentioned but careless voter, that some day we shall get a decent government, municipal, state, national—that is, decent from the standpoint of our democratic ideal. And there is another theory, part and parcel of the other, which we try to cling to at the same time, that our public representatives, though the obviously ornamental and fine specimens of their several constituencies, are after all only everyday Americans with whom a host of citizens could change places without disparagement to either. In other words, our theory of government is government by the average, and that the average is remarkably high. This comfortable view induces many like yourself to wrap themselves round with the American flag and smile at destiny, sure that everything will result well with us sooner or later, and impatient of criticism or doubts. As a people we delight in patting ourselves on the back and dismissing our worries as mere flea-bites. The hard cider of our patriotism gets readily into the brain and causes us to deny fiercely or serenely, according to our dispositions, that anything serious is the matter."

It is found that a large majority of the criminal class who read are deeply interested in the dime novel class of literature. They have not sufficient moral sense, says the Tacoma Ledger, to discriminate between a hero and a bravo and emulation of these false gods oftentimes is the cause of the reader's downfall. It may be that most of these, if they were influenced in the right instead of the wrong direction, would become honest workingmen, instead of vagabonds and finally criminals. After the age of 12 years, with the opportunities for obtaining interesting books, if he persists in a preference of Old Sleuth stories and the adventures of Jesse James or Billie the Kid, it is high time that his preferences be interfered with and an attempt made to turn them in another direction by banishing the bad matter and supplying its place with wholesome mental pabulum.

A Minnesota man captured a king fisher when it was young, made a pet of it, and trained the bird to capture fish and lay them at its master's feet. In summer the bird is taken to the river, where fish are known to abound, and set at liberty. It poises high in the air, and, suddenly dropping, grasps its victim and promptly delivers the fish to its master.

Kansas is getting ready to swell over Funston, who will sail soon from the Philippines for home. And judging from the reported size of the corn crop in Kansas, that state should be able to swell without going far away for material.

A Bangor judge built a fine boat in the cellar of his house, and then had to remove the side of the house in order to get the boat out. He says he got so much interested in boats that he forgot about the size of cellar doors.

HEAVY CORN FEEDING.

Turnips, Pumpkins and Damp Mill Feed Should Be Given in Connection with It.

There is no economy in stinting the ration given to growing and fattening pigs. The aim should always be to induce as heavy feeding as possible. Always much care should be given to secure perfect digestion, as heavy feeding sometimes causes trouble with the digestive organs. After green corn commences there is always a desire to hurry the pigs to market, and corn is fed to the utmost limit.

It must be remembered that the modern, quickly-developed pig is a soft creature as compared with his ancestors of 60 years ago, that the four to six months' old pig will not corn and digest it like the yearling or 18-months-old hogs of the past. Something must be done to keep up the appetite of this young thing.

A range over a grass sward will give exercise, if it is clover sod that they run over they will get much to keep their systems in tone.

Heavy feeding by some may be thought to consist in having corn always by them. This is not correct, as they will consume more if fed at stated intervals and only fed enough to keep their appetites sharp. When once started to fatten the feeding should be heavy to the finish, as a limited feeding is always attended with loss.

It will be found an advantage to give variety in feeding. While corn is the main ration, a good grass ration is a help—or an occasional feed of pumpkins. Turnips they learn to eat in time as other succulent foods fail them. Mangels they take to at once, and while they may not add much weight they help the appetite. A ration of mill feed is always acceptable if fed damp and in proper quantity.

We do not regard these things as a cut-off on the amount of corn fed, but rather as an aid to heavy corn feeding, and also an aid in prolonging the time corn may be fed without the hogs stalling on it and getting entirely off feed.—John M. Jamison, in American Cultivator.

HORSES IN GERMANY.

Hamburg Paper Deplores the Fact That American Animals Are in Growing Demand.

Exports of horses to Germany continue to attract attention both at home and abroad. Regarding American horses in German, the Hamburger Nachrichten, in a recent article, says: "Importations from American have caused the horse-raisers of Holstein to suffer much of late. A stock company has just been formed in Berlin for the express purpose of importing horses from the United States. The Americans have succeeded in breeding a horse which compares very favorably in every way with the Holstein animal, especially in those points so highly prized in a work horse, namely, broad hips and large build generally. The best markets for Holstein horses have always been the provinces of Saxony, Thuringia and Brunswick. The demand is created by the large sugar factories. This market has been decreasing of late, owing to American horses being purchased in Berlin. A few days ago this Berlin company shipped a drove of 80 through Hamburg en route for Milan, Italy, where they are to be used on the tramways. Almost every week a long freight train filled with American horses leave the Berliner Bahnhof for various parts of Germany. In spite of expensive freight and a tariff of seven dollars per head, the Americans have built up a very respectable competition in the German market."

Potash for Sugar Beets.

In several foreign experiments with the culture of sugar beets noted by the department of agriculture it was found that whereas nitrogenous fertilizers increased the yield of beets per acre, they also decreased the sugar content and purity of the juice, but that the application of potash and phosphoric acid fertilizers improved the quality of the beets. The greatest increase in sugar was due to potash fertilizing. Beets grown from large seeds gave better yields and were richer in sugar than those grown from small seeds. It was concluded that 14 inches was a good depth for plowing.

Any crumbs from the table are valuable for young chicks. Change of diet is requisite. Do not let the chicks get chilled, as they are of no earthly use after that. LIES vs. FACTS

No man wishes to buy a pig in a bag, and no one places confidence in the advertisements of Scale makers which SOUND improbable. "Something for nothing" is never looked, and when you see Scales advertised so indefinitely as to leave a BIG percentage for the imagination; investigate carefully.

Some people are fair-minded, and to them we refer the Scale question. Actions SPEAK louder than words, and if you find a genuine article made of good material for a fair price is it not better that the facts be looked into by fair-minded men for THEMSELVES before buying any kind of a Scale?

Werner's Dictionary of Synonyms & Antonyms, Mythology and Familiar Phrases.

A book that should be in the vest pocket of every person, because it tells you the right word to use. No Two Words in the English Language Have Exactly the Same Significance. To express the precise meaning that one intends to convey a dictionary of Synonyms is needed to avoid repetition. The strongest figure of speech is antithesis. In this dictionary the appended Antonyms will, therefore, be found extremely valuable. Contains many other features such as Mythology, Familiar Allusions and Foreign Phrases, Prof. Loisette's Memory System, "The Art of Never Forgetting," etc., etc. This wonderful little book bound in a neat cloth binding and sent postpaid for $0.25. The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

No Matter How Small the Premises It Will Pay the Owner to Keep Hogs or Sheep.

No farm so small but there are some wastes on it if the produce is sold direct from the farm. It is impossible to raise and sell grain and hay without losing some portion of it which might have been saved if live stock were kept.

The man with a large farm may be able to go on raising and selling grain and let the wastes go, but the small farmer cannot allow these losses.

For the small farmer horses or cattle are out of the question as they require too large an area for pasturage, but with hogs or sheep the case is different. They can be kept with profit in comparatively cramped quarters. Either of these kinds of stock may be used to make meat of grass and grain. Feed may be sold in the shape of mutton, wool or pork to better advantage than in its original condition. The small farmer should be an intensive farmer and intensive farming is impossible without the help of live stock or the purchasing of large quantities of fertilizers which is not good farming.

The man who owns a small farm and keeps a small herd of hogs or a small flock of sheep is likely to become an enthusiast and if this is the case the stock kept will get much larger prices than common stock and the profits will be increased.

As a matter of fact the small farmer with a few animals is in a position to take the very best care of his animals whether they are to be used for market or are pure-breds which are to be sold for breeders and in either case the returns will be larger than they could be where larger flocks with less care are kept.—Farmers' Voice.

New Oats Not Good Feed.

There is great temptation on farms where old oats are scarce to give new oats in their stead, some farmers cutting the green oats in the field and chopping off the heads in lieu of threshing out the grain. But such feed is sure to give a working horse the scours, unless dry feed is given with it. A small amount of dry wheat flour dusted over the oats will partially offset their laxative effect. But whatever precautions are taken it is better to feed old oats until the new crop has dried out than to attempt to feed oats of the present year's growth. If the oat heads are chopped off and placed in an evaporator they will be dry enough in three days to feed safely.—American Cultivator.

STACK FOUNDATION.

How to Take Care of the Bean and Pea Crops Without the Least Danger of Loss.

There are a number of crops that are stacked up in the field to dry before housing in barn or granary. Among these are beans and peas. The small, high stacks that are ordinarily made are in danger of being blown over by the wind, and are in greater danger of absorbing moisture from the earth. A combined foundation of support is shown in the accompanying cut. A long stake is driven into the ground near the growing crop and cross boards nailed to either side near the ground. These support slats, as shown in the cut. Beans and peas piled up about the central stake are proof against any wind, while no moisture can injure the bottom. If the top is neatly "thatched" with some of the crop, or if a bit of cloth be thrown over the top and tied in place, as suggested in the second cut, the crop will be quite safe from harm, whatever be the weather. There are many worn out farms that ought to raise just such crops as beans and peas—plants that get stores of nitrogen from the air, as clover does, leaving the land, in reality, richer in this valuable element than before they grew, besides making a valuable addition to the farm produce. The writer once saw an exceedingly heavy crop of beans harvested from a wornout, rocky hillside, on which sorrel would hardly grow, and that, too, with no great assistance in the way of fertilizer or cultivation. The plants got a start on the manure placed on the hill, scanty as it was, and then drew on the stores of nitrogen in the air. Beans appear to do particularly well on light, stony land, where many crops would be a perfect failure.—N. Y. Tribune.

SEED CORN SELECTION.

How to Avoid a Mistake That Has Ruined Many a Crop on Very Good Land.

Many farmers owning both bottom and upland cornfields make the mistake of using the same seed on both kinds of soils. Corn which is adapted to the soil and moisture conditions of the valleys will not do so well on the upland as will some variety that has by several years of cultivation and selection become adapted to the conditions there. It is for the same reason that the large Colorado potatoes that have been grown for years under irrigation will do so poorly when used for seed in Kansas without the accustomed supply of water. It is generally the case on the farm that the corn from all the fields, both upland and bottom, is cribbed together, and when the time for seed selection comes the largest ears are picked out irrespective of the kind of soil that grew them. As the bottom land produces the larger ears it is more than likely that the bulk of the seed will be from the lower and more moist portions of the farm. This is the proper seed for the lowland, but it is not so well adapted to the dryer and poorer upland as is seed that has been raised there. It is advisable to select the seed either before or at husking time, when not only the quality of the ground but the character of the individual stalk and ear can be taken into consideration. As has been suggested before, a small box attached to the side of the wagon-bed into which the desirable ears can be thrown is the most practical device that can be recommended. By a little judicious selection for a series of years, a strain can be established on the upland portion of any farm which will be well adapted to that and other soils similar in location and composition. An eight-inch ear from the upland will ordinarily prove better for planting on the upland than will a 12-inch ear from a draw in the lower portions of the farm.—J. M. Westgate, in Prairie Farmer.

A Life and Death Fight.

Mr. W. A Hines of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even if it cost me $5 00 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and say it never fails to cure throat, chest and lung troubles" Regular size 50c and $1 00. A Ranchman's Disgust.

I never take the paper now, jest quit it in disgust,
An' so swelled up with righteous rage I honest thought I'd bust!
I writ the editor to stop a sendin' it, or I
Would grab a hefty club an' call to know the reason why!
Fur nearly twenty years I've took the Jayville Sarpent's Tooth,
An' helt it next the Bible fur a tellin' Gospel truth,
But now I'll never let my eyes rest on the thing agin,
Fur givin' it encouragement'd be a mortal sin!

I sot with eyes a-buggin' out a-readin' of a band
O' men in tropic jungles facin' death on every hand,
Whar sarpents was a-hissin' round an' lions laid in wait
To leave their bones a-gleamin' in a ghastly naked state!
An' how they fought with cannibals that hankered fur their meat,
Regardin' it a luxury almighty hard to beat,
Then had the thrillin' story end with information that
They was a-huntin' roots for Dr. Skinny's Anti-Fat.

I read one orful story of a gay an' gallant knight
That battled with a dragon in a rough-an'-tumble fight;
The picter o' the monster with its bakers' dozen heads,
Enough to skeer the sleepers of the graveyards from their beds.
I felt like yellin' "Glory!" when the gallant feller stood
One foot upon the monster an' his spear all splashed with blood.
An' then I larnt the dragon was the fever an' the chills:
The knight, ol' Dr. Knockem's Pink Complected Quinine Pills.

Once I sot my wife to cryin' till I thought her heart would break,
An' got my own eyes leakin', an' my lips begun to shake,
Readin' 'bout a lovely maiden tellin' all her folks good-by,
An' sayin' she must leave 'em for a mansion in the sky.
Then a angel neighbor woman come a-runnin' in an' told
Of a heavenly decoction that was wuth its weight in gold,
An' the gal was soon as chipper as a jaybird on the wing,
An' was singin' grateful praises of Duflicker's Liver King.

But the one that capped the climax was a sermon that I read
From a famous eastern preacher, at the close of which he said
He was goin' to quit discoursin' of the glories up on high,
Fur there now was no occasion fur his followers to die.
If they'd foller the directions of O'Whacker's Anti-Death
They would never quit a-livin' from a scarcity of breath:
Then I tore the sheet in fragments an' I stomped it on the floor,
An' my wife hain't yit recovered from the awful way I swore!
—Denver (Col.) Evening Post.

The Old Man an' Me.

Jenny went an' married. Billy's moved away:
Dick has been in Texas fer many a weary day:
An' nothin' of the old times about the place we see,
They's only two—like shadders—the old man an' me.

He keeps the chimney corner an' smokes his pipe an' sighs:
And frequent I can see him brush the teardrops from his eyes:
An' I say some word o' comfort, though I'm lonesome as can be,
Fer they's little in the worl' now fer the old man an' me.

Can't keep the children with us—they've got to drift away;
We've reaped a worl' o' roses—we've had our happy day,
An' now we're only shadders, an' soon we'll cease to see
The light that makes the shadders o' the old man an' me!
—F. L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

A Sonnet.

So soft your words were when you went away,
So smooth your brow the while you said good-by,
So deep the tranquil candor of your eye,
So calm the peace that like a halo lay
Around your head. Had you no wish to stay
A little longer with us? or a sigh,
The while the death-mist and grave drew nigh,
To mourn the fleetness of your shortened day?
Had earth no joys wherewith to tempt you, sweet?
Was life so heavy with its weight of woe
That, in the turmoil of the market-street,
You should be weary ere the sun was low?
Was Earth so sad it could not stay your feet?
Or Heaven so fair that you were fain to go?
—Chambers' Journal.

If They Had Wings.

HE.

If you and I were angels, dear,
White-robed and winged, above,
Though endless space between us lay
I'd come to claim your love:
For love would tell me where you were
And guide me to your side,
And I would haste unto you there
And claim my angel bride.

SHE.

Nay, nay, if we were angels, and
Had wings with which to fly,
Your love would never pilot you
To me, across the sky
For if the angels there retain
The traits that folks have here,
You'd never, never fly to me—
You'd be too tired, dear!
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

Fiddlers Three.

Up in a spreading maple tree,
Merrily playing, sat fiddlers three.
Each had a bow, and each a string,
And, oh! they made that maple ring!
With one note this way, one note that,
And each note just a trifle flat—
Playing over the happy tune
They learned in honor of the moon,
And never one mistake they made
In all that moonlight serenade.
For three notes on a single string
Makes fiddling quite a pleasant thing,
And jolly fiddlers never tire
Who play for love and not for hire,
Up in a leafy maple hid,
The good old tune of katydid!

George F. Singleton returned last week from a trip to Virginia and North Carolina, combining business and gunning. The remains of Robert A. Peckins, who died of consumption at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Peckins, at Newtonville, last Wednesday, were brought here for interment in Union street cemetery. A large number of mourning friends were present at the interment and many floral offerings were laid upon the grave.

Editor Cook, of the Milford Journal, is mentioned as a possible successor to Congressman Sprague. Nothing would please us better than to see him one of the Massachusetts congressional delegation. He would suffer nothing in comparison with his colleagues, his district would be well taken care of, and he would have the courage of his convictions. That's the kind of men we need there, as a recognition of merit, and not solely because a man has a "pull" or a "pile."

Every one who attended the concert at Dean academy last year given by the Tufts college glee, mandolin and guitar club remembers that it was a most satisfactory affair, and we are pleased to say that the Dean Athletic association has been able to secure this excellent organization again this year, the concert to take place next week Friday evening, Feb. 16. Tickets will go on sale at Mason's drug store and should be secured as early as possible in order to get good seats.

The announcement that Mr. Buker, who has lectured to such very great acceptance at the Chautauquas and among the Y. M. C. A's, on Egypt, would give an illustrated lecture here was welcome news to those who have heard Mr. Buker. The only difficulty, which accounts for the delay, has been that of agreeing upon a suitable date. It is now expected that the lecture will be given Feb. 21. The place of the lecture will be announced later. Mr. Buker prefers to give it in some one of the churches.

Febuary started in with nearly zero weather. January, 1900, was considerably warmer than January, 1899, according to the official weather figures. There were several cold spurts, but they did not last long enough to get into the race with the long drawn out cold of last year. The average maximum temperature of January, 1900, was 39.86, and last year it was 35.1. The average minimum temperature during the January that has just passed was 35.7, and in 1899 it was 18.1. The mean temperature in January of this year was 32 83, and in the same month of last year it was 26.6.

An out-of-town firm wrote recently to one of our property owners desiring to secure an empty store here for a week for a "bargain sale." The gentleman promptly refused to be a party to this throat-cutting of our home merchants, who remain here and pay taxes, and he made his position very distinctly known to the above firm. He is to be commended for his action, which should merit the appreciation of every merchant in town, of whatever business. "Home protection" costs something, but, unfortunately, few are willing to pay the price for it, as was our public-spirited friend.

The method of distributing handbills in town for Woonsocket parties, as illustrated Thursday, is not, probably, satisfactory to those who pay the expense, and certainly not to the people who occupy residences. One citizen's yard received four large four page circulars, the same advertisement on each, and which had to be gathered in for the furnace. A yard opposite received a handful, so many that the distributor relented and went on to the lawn and picked a part of them up, but he balanced the account by leaving one or two at both the front and side doors of the residence.

The glass show and vaudeville entertainment which has been held nightly in Music hall during the past week in aid of the A. O. H. library fund closed Saturday evening, the affair being most successful and Division 8 realizing a neat sum for its library fund. The balloting for the handsomest baby resulted in favor of little Harold Colgan, who had 927 votes, baby Hazel Foster being a close second with 877 votes. An elegant piece of glassware, representing two ships and a lighthouse at sea, and enclosed in a glass globe, was the prize awarded to the little winner. Charles Feeley was the winner of a handsome lemonade set. At the matinee in the afternoon Miss Edna Jewett was awarded the prize in the word contest, having obtained 500 words out of the letters forming the word "crystal."

A petition is being circulated about town for the names of merchants and others desiring the direct electric road to Medway and it is being generally signed. It is supposed this will be presented at the hearing which is to come off before the selectmen at the town hall on Monday evening, Feb. 12. The prospects now are that there will be a large attendance at the meeting, as the interest is unusually keen. Just what course either side is to pursue has not as yet been given out, but it is safe to say that strong arguments will be presented upon both sides. It is doubtful, however, if the present board of selectmen take any action on the matter, considering it the better policy to leave it to their successors, since the latter will have all of the delicate questions to decide in case a franchise is granted.

Fresh cut flowers at Slade's.

"There is a natural and a spiritual body," were the words of St. Paul chosen by Rev. D. M. Hodge as the foundation of his remarks on "Personal Identity Beyond the Grave." The natural body which we have is adapted to the needs of this world, and it would be no more surprising that in other surroundings a spiritual body should be provided adapted to that condition. The chemist can tell the constituents of the grain of wheat or the apple seed, but he cannot produce an artificial one that will bear fruit. There is something lacking, something he cannot see; it is the life principle, the personal identity that makes me myself and not somebody else after death of the body. Through all th ages Nature is making character, building up personality, trying to make a man. She will not blot out the work or go back. A special and very fine feature of the service was an organ and violin duet by the organist, Arthur Martin, and Miss Alice Grover of Mansfield.

The mothers' section of the Alden club was most hospitably entertained at the residence of Mrs. T. L. Martin last Friday afternoon, the address of the occasion being delivered by Rev. Dr. Sneath. His remarks were helpful in the extreme, the many practical thoughts being appreciatively received. He mentioned at some length the four inspirations which a mother ought ever to keep before her during the sacrifices and temporary discouragements of her great life work. Then attention was called to the tendency to make material and social aims predominate in the average parent's mind, rather than the simpler, higher ideals toward a perfect physical and spiritual development. For these wise ends most of the complex worldly distractions might well be sacrificed in the child's best interests. The talk teemed with suggestions as to school, church-going habits, oversight of books, mail and friends, evening engagements, etc. The next meeting will be held Feb. 16 at Mrs. Carl Johnson's, the subject being "The Law of Compensation."

In the Clutches of the Trust.

It will be of especial interest here to learn that G. H. Hood has been sued by the Rubber trust for $1,000,000. The defendant is charged with having in 1895 become interested in the Hood Rubber Co. to the extent of $300,000, and by his direction building up that corporation's business until it is now more than $2,000,000 per annum, all of which, it is alleged, violates his agreement with the United States Rubber company, which was that the defendant agreed not to again engage in the same business in any one or more of the states of the United States save Nevada, Idaho and Montana, having sold out to the trust his shares in the Boston Rubber Co.

The court is asked to enjoin Hood from the further manufacture or sale of rubber goods, either directly or indirectly, in all the states except the three mentioned above.

To Secure Prompt Delivery of Mail.

Much confusion and quite often delay in the delivery of mail is occasioned by the neglect of writers to address their letters with the street and number, and this especially when there are several persons of the same name residing in a community. Every postoffice is subject to this annoyance, and a little care upon the part of the writers would at once result in a better service. There are many persons of the same name, and many corporations and business firms with the same or similar titles. This is very confusing to carriers and clerks, who are at a loss to know for which person or firm such mail is intended. With the name of the street and the number of the house identification is complete, and all doubts removed as to where the mail should be sent.

The omission of the street address is a source of endless embarrassment and the principal cause of delay in the delivery of mail matter, at the same time furnishing grounds for complaint concerning its non-delivery. Mail intended for delivery through the general delivery should be so addressed, and mail through the box department should be addressed to the box number, as that forms an important part of the address. Address your mail matter to street and number and request correspondents to do the same.

Will You Take the Responsibility?

The contest for and against license is going to be waged more fiercely this year than ever before. The issue will be squarely met by the honest and conscientious voter, and it ought to be as fairly met by the fair-minded voter. The voters who "dodged" the question last year may be personally responsible for the result if they repeat the act. The man who dares not face an issue and vote one way or the other has no standing among reputable men.

The advocates of license insist that, since it is so easy for those who desire to drink either to go to Woonsocket or to have liquor brought from that place, it would be better for that money to be spent in Franklin, on the ground that much money is spent there besides what goes for liquor, and home merchants ought to have it.

Again, they assert that the town would be better off financially if it had a number of thousands of dollars from license fees to be used in the various departments of the town. They insist, further, that as liquor will be sold in any event, that some revenue ought to be received by the town therefor.

Those are the main points for which they contend, not one of which will bear the light of honest investigation. The claim that liquor money goes to Woonsocket may be true, but if the liquor were procurable here much that now goes into the till of the merchant here would go into the cash drawer of the rum seller, for he does business only on a cash basis. Credit is to be had everywhere but in a rum-hole. The grocer, the butcher, the clothier, the shoe dealer will let you run up a bill, but the rum-seller never. Thus the reputable dealer would be the loser.

The claim that the town needs the money is false. It is not a "poor" town; it has no large debt hanging over it; it has all necessary money for repairs and improvements. And if it needed more the officials have never hesitated to ask for it. Capital has never complained. Occasionally a man who doesn't pay any taxes finds fault, but capital does not. That is to say: When money is needed for a necessity it is forthcoming, and it does not have to be raised at the price of crime, law breaking, poverty and shame. The honest tax payer who prefers to discharge his obligation to the town through the medium of the rum-hole is hard to find, however abundantly he may be said to exist.

The assertion that liquor will be sold anyway is true, largely because the illicit liquor seller is sustained, encouraged and, if need be, shielded by the men who make the assertion. Liquor selling in Franklin can be kept to a very small amount if honest people but say the word. Many are indifferent, but how many would willingly have the deciding vote left with them, to say whether all of the misery which must necessarily result from the open sale of liquor here, might be placed at their door? Few, indeed, would take the responsibility, yet every license vote carries that responsibility.

The claim that no more liquor is drank with the open saloon than without has long since exploded. Continual temptation means gradual yielding and ultimate loss of ability to withstand. Every town that has had license will testify that the amount of liquor that is drank is largely in excess in license years, as shown by arrests, breaches of the peace and costs of the town's poor.

In a word: The open saloon robs the honest dealer; it increases the work of the poor department, the courts, the officers, the law-abiding citizens; it makes the streets less safe at night; it holds out continual temptation to the youth whose principles are not as yet firmly established, and from whose ranks the drunkards must be recruited.

Are you prepared to say that this state of affairs shall exist and by your sanction and at your behest? A vote for license has no other meaning and can have no other result. Think it over before you cast your ballot.

Card of Appreciation.

The relatives of the lamented Mrs. Charles Hanson Morse, whose death occurred last week at her home in this town, where she had resided for many years, appreciate deeply the tender sympathy and devoted attention of her kind neighbors, church associates and friends of the community during her lonely widowhood and illness. They are also very grateful for the beautiful floral tributes, and to all who participated in the eloquent and touching services at the house and church, thus testifying to their recognition of her faithful, Christian life.

Found Dying.

John Murphy, of Bush factory, was found in a dying condition in front of W. Daly's, City Mills, this afternoon, having fallen from his wagon. He lived about an hour after he was discovered, his death evidently resulting from heart disease.

He was viewed by Medical Examiner Gallison and turned over to his family.

A Musical Treat.

The entertainment provided by the Piacere club of Woonsocket in Odd Fellows' hall on Friday evening was a most meritorious one and exceedingly enjoyable.

The company came up on the electrics and nearly fifty of their friends accompanied them to become better acquainted with Franklin people and enjoy the social dance which the club provided after the entertainment. Owing to the late arrival of the pianist the concert was somewhat delayed, but all of the numbers were rendered and received appreciative applause.

The banjo solo by Mr. Brown, the mandolin solo by Mr. Gilbert and the mandolin duet by Messrs. Treitell and Mathewson were excellent, and proved that the club contained a number of very accomplished soloists.

Miss Rickard read with excellent expression, her selections being exceedingly good and her rendering left nothing to be desired. Miss Whiting appeared to unusual advantage and her singing was one of the features of a delightful evening.

Owing, possibly to the fact that the organization was not extensively known here the attendance was not as large as the affair deserved, though it is safe to say that should the organization appear here again it would be greeted by a large audience. Manager Treitel has gotten together a body of trained musicians, and their music is of a more pleasing nature than much that is rendered here by more pretentious organizations. "Come again" was the verdict of all that were present on Friday evening.

After the concert the dance was generally indulged in till a little after midnight, and everyone appeared to thoroughly enjoy the occasion.

The following is the program: "Thoroughbred," Piacere club; "With Early Morn," Miss Myrtie Whit[illegible] "Mill Dam," Club; reading, Miss [illegible] banjo solo, Lester B. Brown March. from "Tannhauser," Oscar B. Gilbert; "America-Up to-Date," (glee) Club; "On the Wild Rose Tree," Miss Whiting; mandolin duet, Messrs. Treitel and Mathewson; "Impecunious Davis," Club; reading, Miss Rickard; "Juno March," Piacere club.

American Character.

It is quit easy for the scientists to trace the development of the human body and the effects of food and climate and temperaturus upon the human animal. The affluent medical literature of the day is full of instances in which the animal-man has been under rigid and productive investigation, every part of him and every fiber of him yielding information for a better appreciation of his physical self. And thus, says a writer in Leslie's Weekly, there are numerous prophecies, as to the future form and semblance of this interesting creature, and we are satisfied to know that while bald heads are increasing and dentists multiply, and other specialists abound more numerously each year, the prospect is that man is not going to be civilized into a breathing mummy for many centuries to come. But it is different with the finer part of the animal. Even the specialists cannot keep a finger on the pulse of character. It is hard to take character's temperature, for the standards vary worse than cheap thermometers. We see as far as to-day, and to-morrow has it's mysteries, while yesterday is forgotten. In all literature there is not an absolutely truthful presentation of a human life. We cannot put the character in the cage as we can the animal and feed it on conditions and emotions to find their tendencies and effects. Nor, to group ourselves together and call the result a nation, can we find exactly the points from which to proceed in order to get a verdict. New York and Chicago are wide open on Sunday, and very respectable people sit in restaurants eating and drinking as if it were entirly proper, while within 100 miles of either city are communities where a Sunday drink is regarded as a crime. Boston and New Orleans would find each other considerably embarrassed if they were to exchange customs and standards for a few weeks. San Francisco and Philadelphia would each raise a great ado if they were to trade Sundays. And so it goes over this great land. It might be discouraging if it were not for the fact that it takes all this to make a nation of seventy or eighty millions of people, and they are apt to be right in the main if the thing that holds them together is sound. After years of trial there seems to be no doubt of that, and it is generally agreed that the American character is about as strong as any on the earth.

This story of the latest confidence scheme for fleecing the unsophisticated farmer is going the rounds of the country press: A man who represents himself as a traveling preacher calls and asks to remain over night. Before the hour for retiring a young man and woman come along and ask if there is not a minister in the house who can perform a marriage ceremony. Of course there is. The young couple join hands and the farmer and his wife are asked to sign the marriage certificat as witnesses. The certificate afterward turns up as a promissory note.

The following is the full opinion of the court in a Pennsylvania case: "An affidavit of defense having been filed, but no affidavit of defense having been handed to the court with the other papers, and none being found in the office of the prothonotary, where it ought to be found when called for, we shall take it for granted that an affidavit which was strong enough to walk away and take care of itself is sufficiently strong to face a jury, and, therefore, discharge the rule."

A New York man lately found a large sum of money in the road, and knowing to whom it belonged drove his horse so hard to restore it that the animal died. On restoring the money the finder received the munificent sum of five dollars for his trouble. The horse was worth $125.

EARLY AND LATE CORN.

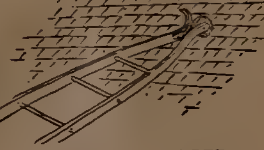
Farmers Should Plant Both Kinds and Turn the Live Stock Into the Fields.

Farmers should plant corn both early and late, some kind of flint corn that will ripen early, planting from one to ten acres according to the amount of stock kept, in a place convenient to the yard so the cattle and hogs can be turned in on it. Then there should be another piece to turn into when this is eaten down. This may seem like a slovenly way of doing, but it should be remembered the husking of the corn is the most expensive part of growing the crop. It costs from three to five cents per bushel to husk and put it in the crib and then it has to be shoveled out again. Of course a part of the corn will have to be husked to be fed later on in a good yard, for here is where a great part of the profit comes in. Some may think it costs too much to build fences to keep stock in the corn fields, but a good fence will last at least 15 years. The stock can be turned in the field just as soon as the corn begins to glaze. Stock fed in this way will gain faster than when fed dry corn, but care should be taken not to leave them in the field too long at first. They should not be turned into a field of green corn in a poor condition or the result might be damaging and the profits from feeding in this way lost. When the corn is in proper condition to cut a part of the crop should be cut, either with a machine or by hand, and shocked nicely in the field to be fed later without husking; this saves labor also, and makes a nice lot of feed to be fed out in the winter. There is also a good profit in feeding sheep in the same way, that is turn them in the corn field in the fall and cut up corn and feed them through the winter. I wintered 100 sheep in that way last winter and I never had sheep do so well before. In order to get the most profit out of corn it is necessary to save as much labor as possible. There are many ways of feeding corn at a profit this time of year. Pastures are getting short for the dairy cow and if a little corn that was planted for that purpose is cut and fed to the cows every night it will help out the pasture and also the milk pail. There is no doubt but what there is more profit in feeding the corn on the farm if the farmer owns his farm and manages it the right way, but a renter on a farm for one year had better sell his grain and other products. —George Tyler, in Prairie Farmer.

FARM FIRE LADDER.

One That Can Quickly Be Put In Place Whenever Necessity May Demand Its Use.

The constant danger that farm buildings may take fire and have no adequate attention, owing to the lack of fire apparatus and of men, makes it important that all possible precautions be taken that incipient fires may promptly be put out. A ladder for the roof is of the greatest importance. The cut shows one that can quickly be put in place. It is in the form of a fruit ladder at the top, and has a small wheel at the end, as shown. It can thus be shoved up over the roof without catching on the shingles. A hook is placed in the position shown, so that the ladder, when shoved up to the ridge, can be turned over, when the hook will hold it firmly in place. Make the ladder long enough for any roof you have, and have another that will reach any roof edge —N. Y. Tribune.



FARM FIRE LADDER.

He Expected It.

"I see that the price of diamonds is going up," said the young man who likes to give information.

"Of course," answered Mr. Blykins, in a tone of mingled grief and defiance. "It was to be expected. It's one combination after another these days. You didn't suppose those coal barons were going to leave any carbon around loose where people might buy it and use it as a substitute, did you?"—Washington Star.

A Moral in the Story.

The cook was leaving to get married. The mistress paid her her wages and gave her a little present for herself. The tin box was on the cab, and Bridget was on the point of stepping in, when Fido waddled out as if to bid farewell.

"Good-by, old Fido," said Bridget; "here's a bob for you. I am sure you have earned it, seeing I have not washed a plate since I have been here." —Answers.

The Bard.

Unto a lady's eyebrow once he warbled
strains so sweet,
Or to her coral lips or pearly teeth or dainty feet.
But now, when he would chant for an appreciative throng,
The girl who does a cake-walk is the burden of his song.
—Washington Star.

Loss from Poor Milkers.

A good milker should have a strong grip in his hands. He will have it if he milks cows many years. The grip does not necessarily require very strong muscles, but it is the constant exercise twice a day which gives the muscles of the hands and fingers a development that nothing else will do. But if a hired man has not already such a development of muscles as will make him a fast milker, do not employ him with the milking of cows as one of his duties. While he is learning to milk a steady and fast stream he is drying the cow off, as after a time she will learn to hold up her milk. If only a little milk is left after each milking, the cow will very soon go dry. That will cost the farmer more than the wages of a good milker who will keep the cow to her standard until near the time to drop another calf.—American Cultivator.

Immense Ear of Corn.

What is believed to be the biggest corn ever grown, in this part of the country at least, is on exhibition in a grain office at Atkinson, Kan. One ear is 16½ inches long, and another measures exactly ten inches in circumference. Another ear is 14½ inches long. The corn was grown on the farm of George Liebig, of Wetmore, Kan. Many samples of corn from northern Kansas are coming in, and last year's big ears still on display are mere dwarfs by comparison to the new crop. The late corn is maturing, and reports of enormous yields are coming from all sections of northern Kansas, where the big corn-producing counties of the state are located.

An over-fat hen will not lay at all or her egg will be worthless for hatching.

All's His Who Nothing Hath.

The heart that hath no private joy,
No dear and only bliss,
Shall find the whole world tribute bring,
That he no joy may miss.

For he who clingeth not to one,
Whose heart wide open lies,
Finds every morn a fresh delight,
Each night a glad surprise.

For every breeze that curls the wave,
And every shining star,
And every tree that seeks the air,
His constant lovers are.

The soul that knows no proper bliss,
No joy to call his own—
He standeth not companionless,
His heart is ne'er alone.

For all is his, who nothing hath;
And God doth richly pour
His warmth of life and glory where
He finds an open door.

An Evening Lullaby.

Sleep, my babe, thine eyes are weary,
Shut them close, my bonnie dearie,
While thy mother sings!
Are the birds asleep, I wonder,
With their little heads tucked under
Pretty folded wings?

Sleep! the angels round thee hover;
Their bright wings thy head shall cover
While thou art asleep.
All the night long, close beside thee,
That no evil may betide thee,
They their watch will keep.

Bye-O-baby, warm and rosy,
In thy little cot so cozy;
Sleep till morning light!
Sleep, O sleep, thine eyes are weary,
Shut them close, my bonnie dearie.
Baby-bye, good-night.

SANDOW'S CHEST DEVELOPMENT

Is, as all the world knows, simply wonderful.

It shows what results may be obtained by patient endeavor and long continued effort.

The same results are obtained in the development of a business.

For years Chase & Sanborn, by long-continued effort, have made themselves known as one of the leading tea importers of the country.

Their tea chest development is quite as wonderful in its way as Sandow is in his.

This is because they have never given to the public in their tea anything but the finest selected leaves.

Especially do they commend their Kohinoor, which is an English Breakfast Tea, their Orloff, a Formosa Oolong with a delicate lilac flavor, and their Orange Pekoe, an ideal tea with a rich wine-like body.

On account of the quality of these teas they are healthful and invigorating. The fact that they are packed in pound and half-pound air-tight leaded packages is a protection against deterioration from exposure and prevents the escape of the delicate tea flavor by contact with the air.

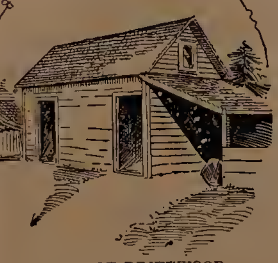
BARN OF DRIFTWOOD.

Built by a Long Island Farmer at a Total Cash Expense of Just Twelve Dollars.

Some of our western friends, who located on the treeless prairies and built a house and barn of sods, are sometimes fond of telling their descendants of the low cost of their first dwelling. It is true that sod makes a cheap building material, and, in many cases, gives a comfortable house. But at the other end of the country there are even cheaper building materials than sods. The little barn shown in the cut is found in Suffolk county, L. I. Mr. Stephen Austin, the owner, lives on the Great South bay, and his occupation frequently takes him along the shores. Last winter, while making these trips, he began a collection of barrels and other timber which had floated to the shore as driftwood. As this timber gathered, the idea of building a barn occurred to him, and the result is shown in the picture. A barn of this size, 20 by 12 feet, would have cost, at the regular price for new material, about $175; but Mr. Austin gives the actual cost in cash as follows:



A BARN OF DRIFTWOOD.

Paint	$4 00
Nails	1 90
Shingle laths	2 10
Floor and doors	4 00
Total cash cost	$12 00

The barn is built entirely of driftwood. The barrel staves were cut in two and nailed on just as shingles are used. In all, Mr. Austin used 720 barrels in covering the barn. It serves his purpose for stabling a horse and his fodder, implements, etc., as well as a more expensive barn. Many of our western readers, who never saw the ocean or listened to the roar of its breakers, will be interested to know how this driftwood has been utilized for building purposes. The waves throw ashore each year vast quantities of wood, sometimes taken from the wrecks of vessels, and sometimes washed or thrown overboard from passing ships. If anyone can tell of a cheaper barn than this, with the timber or other material thrown up into one's dooryard, we shall be pleased to report it.—Rural New Yorker.

FEEDING FARM HORSES.

A Canadian Farmer Tells of a System Which Has Produced Very Satisfactory Results.

I have always believed that we farmers feed too much hay to our horses. Certainly we feed fully twice as much as our friends in the city, and only about half as much grain as horse-owners in the city feed. Since June 1, I have been feeding my horses by a novel method, which I find eminently satisfactory. At the end of May, this year, I found myself without hay for my horses, and a large amount of work to do. I could procure hay from some of my neighbors, but of very poor quality. This kind of hay I did not want.

Up to this time the grass pasture was very poor, but along toward June it began to be fair. I therefore decided to get along without hay, and depend entirely on pasture and grain. On the evening of June 1, I turned my work horses to pasture. In the morning I took them up and gave them a feed of oats and bran, about five quarts per horse. That is all they got for breakfast, in addition to what grass they had eaten. At noon they were fed no hay, only a feed of oats and bran — six quarts per animal, and nothing else. At four o'clock, as is usual with us, we took them up for tea, watered them and fed another feed of oats. At sundown, when we knock off work, the horses were turned out to pasture. This has been and is still the "bill of fare" for my horses—grass during the night, and grain (about a half-bushel of oats, in three feeds) during the day. As a result, my horses are doing splendidly and gaining all the time.

I am greatly pleased with this method of feeding horses—hay or pasture at night, and grain during the day.—J. A. Macdonald, in County Gentleman.

The Right Kind of Beef.

In regard to the kinds of beef which the killer and eater demand a writer in the Southern Planter says: "Give special attention to well-developed loins, backs and hips, for it is upon these of a fat steer the buyer puts the value of the steer when he stands in the market as beef. It is not simply the fatness of a steer that puts the highest price upon him in the market, but it is the steer that is fat at the right places on his carcass that makes him top the market. I once sold a car load of Shorthorn grades in the Philadelphia market which topped the market that day of 10,000 beeves, and the buyer took as much pains in examining those cattle as many people would do in buying a horse."

The Very Neat Man.

He brushed his coat six times a day,
His hat was always nice,
And ever ere the day was done
He changed his collar twice.

He never let his trousers bag,
No wrinkles marred his vest;
In all the town there was no one
More scrupulously dressed.

He spent three hours every day
Before the mirror, where
He carefully attended to
The parting of his hair.

He always kept himself as neat
As wax is through and through—
But that was all he ever did
Or had the time to do.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

Immutabilis.

For death must come and change; and though the loss
Seems to the lonely soul the heaviest cross,
More bitter is the fate that day by day
Sees with sick heart the slow and sure decay
Of love and faith; and all our years we spend
In sorrow that those deathless things can end,
Far kinder then were death; for so could we
Be left with an unchanging memory;
And after years this comfort would restore:
That which death takes is ours forever-more.
—Alice Learned Bunner, in Century.

Contentment.

"Sufficient to the day is the evil thereof,"
How often we hear it said!
But how many people take it to heart,
And carry it out in their head?

If this was well practised, instead of well preached,
Worries, troubles and tempers would die;
But we must forever be looking ahead,
And forecasting things with a sigh.

Do try and remember this practical word,
Don't say you have too much to bear,
Though misfortunes never come singly,
you know,
Sufficient to the day is its care.
—K. Hollingsworth, in St. Paul's.

A Walk Through the Woods.

A walk through the woods in September
Is bliss I can never define:
The red leaves that glow like an ember
Make gorgeous the tree and the vine.
With earth and the sky for my teacher
I worship with sun and with clod,
Forgetting the priest and the preacher,
For now I am walking with God.

The hills are as hymns of high pleasure,
The valleys as rosaried rhyme,
And, set to the loftiest measure,
The forest an anthem sublime.
No more on man's teaching dependent,
From cant and from creed I am free;
And Beauty and Truth are transcendent,
For God is now walking with me.
-Nixon Waterman, in Elliott's Magazine.

The Baby That Is Gone.

The little skirts are laid away,
The little frock he wore
Is neatly folded up to-day—
He'll never need it more

The little kilts are neatly pressed,
They, too, are of the past,
And left us but to be caressed
And given up at last!

And yet why sit here sighing o'er
The baby that is gone,
For was our boy as fine before
He got his trousers on?
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

THE CHARM OF LIFE

Is Lost When the Burden is Too Heavy

Life is hardly worth the living with the never-ceasing aches and pains of a bad back. If you would remove the burden of backache, reach the cause—the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills will cure sick kidneys, and the cure is lasting. Here is proof of it.

Mr. Israel A. Morse, of 10 Tyng street, Newburyport, a member of the Board of Aldermen for two years, and Common Council for three years, says: "My experience with and opinions of Doan's Kidney Pills which I expressed through our newspapers in 1896, after taking a course of the treatment, have not altered. I value that preparation more highly today than I did when I first published my statement, and that is over three years ago. To my personal experience I can add that of many others in this city who one and all coincide with me in saying that Doan's Kidney Pills act as represented."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers; price 50 cents a box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute.

GREEN CUT BONE.

An Economical and Excellent Food for Laying Hens, Both Winter and Summer.

Green bone is rich in phosphate of lime, and this fact alone should prove its value as food for laying hens, both winter and summer. Fowls understand its value to themselves, as is shown by the manner in which they will leave any food to get the green bone, says the American Farmer. Further, it is one of the cheapest foods, for usually the bones of various sizes and shapes, with more or less meat attached to them, can be bought for a few cents, and the modern bone-cutter crushes and cuts them fine in a few moments. Frequently there is sufficient meat on these bones to furnish all that is needed in that line, and thus another saving is effected, for the meat bought alone would cost much more than the meaty bones. Still again, green bone, especially when meat is attached thereto, fed within reason, reduces the need of feeding the usual quantity of grain, thus saving more money.

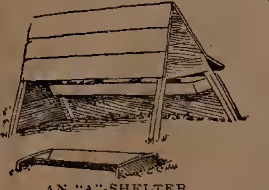
The main thing to avoid in feeding cut bone is to see that the bones are green—that is, fresh and free from taint. In some localities where butchers have considerable demand for fresh bones, they make two grades of them, one from meat freshly cut up and the other from older meat, and frequently tainted with the entrails of fowls and other refuse thrown into the box. Don't buy this stuff at any price, nor take it as a gift. Feed only fresh bone, and it will pay every time.

CHEAP COLONY HOUSE.

Roosting Place Protected from Wind and Rain Is All Fowls Need in the Early Fall.

Fowls do well colonized out in small flocks in summer and early fall. They need little more shelter than a roosting place that is protected from storms and showers.

The cut shows an A-shelter boarded with matched lumber to the ground on one side and end with nests and roosts inside. Put the tight side and end toward the direction of storms. Fowls can thus be colonized in many flocks on pasture and other rough land, obviating the necessity of building many yards, and of furnishing all the feed. Fowls on free range will get half their living themselves. The plan reduces the number of permanent chicken houses required, since the flock is usually much larger in summer and fall than in winter after the market chickens and the old hens have been culled out.—Farm and Home.



AN "A"-SHELTER.

How to Ruin Machinery.

What is the meaning of all these mowing machines, reapers, horse-rakes and other farm implements being left out in the weather? Have they just been taken out temporarily for some reason? No, not much. They have been left to stand where last used, and if we mistake not they will stand there in the fields or in the fence corners until wanted again. What kind of a way is this to do and expect to keep the balance on the proper side of the ledger? Wet and sun will spoil the best iron or steel and the best wood. This sort of practice don't happen in isolated cases by any means. Why not take the parlor chairs out on the open porch and leave them there through the fall and winter.—Farmers' Review.

"Oh, yes," said Margaret; "I have seen them many a time, but they always took up grass."—Judge.

What Subsoiling Does.

Moisture may be retained in the soil by subsoiling, plowing, harrowing, cultivating, mulching, rolling and by the addition of humus or decayed vegetable matter. Subsoiling increases the depth of clayey and compact soils and allows more water to enter them instead of running off on the surface. Subsoiling is thus an important means of preventing washing, and it also enables the roots to penetrate deeper, thus increasing the feeding area. Both spring and fall subsoiling are of advantage on a stiff, heavy land.

Weeds Used for Food.

Some of the weeds can be used for food if prejudice against them did not exist. The dandelion is cultivated in France, but is regarded as a pest here. Succory is raised in European gardens. Pigweed is a delicacy to the Chinese, and young pokeweed has long been known in the southern states as edible. The common nettle, milkweed and mallow are used in Europe. Purslaine, one of the most persistent and despised pests in this country, is cultivated in Europe, being regarded as a very valuable plant

THE DIFFERENT BREEDS.

Purpose for Which a Fowl Is Wanted Should Always Be Considered by Poultry Raisers.

There is a large number of breeds and many of them possess the same characteristics. Generally a breed that excels in one particular will fall short in another, so that in determining which breed to select the purpose for which the fowl is wanted should always be considered.

The Langshan chickens lay best in the winter. They lay a good number of eggs, are of good size, mature early and are an excellent table fowl.

The Brahmas come next to these, the light colored variety being considered superior to the dark.

Of the four varieties of Cochins, the partridge is considered the best for layers, the buffs the best for table fowls, the whites and blacks following next. One advantage with both the Cochins and Brahmas is that they are easily confined.

The Plymouth Rocks are good layers, good table fowls, good foragers, and, like the Wyandottes, are good general purpose fowls, excelling in no one particular, but hard to beat on the farm.

Leghorns, Minorcas, Spanish, Andalusians and Hamburgs are the best layers, are not setters, but are very poor table fowls.

The Houdans, and, in fact, the whole French class, are fair layers and excellent table fowls.

The games are considered as among the best, if not the best, as table fowls, and are fair layers.

The Polish and Hamburgs are persistent layers, but are very poor table fowls.

The Leghorns cannot be excelled for laying, but they are small and not good table fowls. The brown Leghorns lay the most eggs, the white Leghorns, Minorcas, Spanish and Houdans lay the largest eggs.

The Javas are an excellent table fowl and fatten very readily. When bred for an especial purpose and not carried any further than the first cross, cross breeding may be made profitable. But if carried farther, using a crossbred is breeding back, and it is largely on this account that cross-breeding is objectionable.

To produce a fine table fowl, cross a strong, full-breasted pit game cock with Dorking hens; this produces a table fowl almost equal to a turkey.

A good cross to produce good layers of medium size is that of the brown Leghorn cocks with Partridge Cochin hens, or a white Leghorn cock with a light Brahma hen.

One of the best crosses for market chickens is a Plymouth Rock cock with Brahma or Cochin hens.

To secure good table fowls, and also combine good laying qualities, cross a Houdan cock with Langshan hens. One result of this cross will be dark legs but the flesh will be white.

To produce a brood of good layers, the eggs being of extra large size, cross black Spanish cocks with Langshan hens.

To produce a good market fowl, one that fattens readily, and is easily confined, cross a Brahma cock with partridge Cochin hens.

To produce the best setting hen, one that will remain in the nest, hatch well and prove a good mother, caring well for her chickens, cross a pit game cock with partridge Cochin hens. This cross will also produce good table fowls. In all breeding, care in selecting the best is important if the best results are wanted.—St. Louis Republic.

Petroleum Settles the Dust.

A writer in a St. Paul paper states that he recently drove over a piece of road at Fort Worth, Tex., which was treated last fall with a wetting with crude petroleum. He says that during five months of drought, when all other roads were enveloped in dust, this one was clear of it, and that when heavy rain made mud of the dusty roads this one remained dry and pleasant.

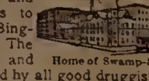
DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

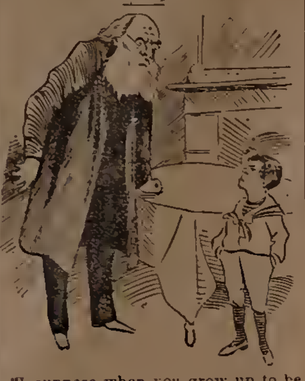
It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.



Home of Swamp-Root.

A QUALIFYING CLAUSE.



"I suppose when you grow up to be a man, Bobbie, you'll want to be an earnest Christian, won't you?"

"Yus, sir—if it won't interfere with my being a pirate!"—Ally Sloper.

Not a Pleasing Sight.

"Could we see ourselves as others see us,"
Some of us, I dare say,
Would turn our back on ourselves, alack!
And look the other way.
—Elliott's Magazine.

Encouraging.

"Do you think," he asked, "that your father has any suspicion of my love for you?"

"No," she replied. "he is completely deceived. I overheard him and mamma talking about it last night. He said you were no more capable of loving than a chunk of putty would be."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Improves with Age.

"Edith, dear," said the fond mamma, "you are nearly ten years old now, and you should not allow gentlemen to kiss you."

"Oh, I don't know, mamma," said Edith; "it seems to me somehow that the older I get the better I like it."—St. Paul Dispatch.

What queer thoughts come to children is illustrated by the little miss of seven years, who the other night startled her mother by remarking: "Mamma, I have been asking the Great Spirit to make me a better girl and He didn't do it, so last night I asked the devil to do it."

An enjoyable whist party was held at Odd Fellows' hall Tuesday evening from 8 till 10 o'clock. Ladies' first prize was taken by Miss Estey, Miss Carrie Daniels winning second honors. On the gentlemen's side Otis Corbin captured the first and George Croissant second prize.

Some time before the sale of the rubber works here it was said that there was an agreement in existence which provided that the factory should be used for the manufacture of such goods as long as it remained for mechanical purposes. Just how much there is in the story is not known.

Tickets for the Tufts College Glee club concert at Dean, next week Friday evening, are already finding ready sale, and good seats should be selected at Mason's at once. Mr. Foster, the reader, has many friends here who will be glad to hear him again, and a number of Dean boys are in the organization.

It is not impossible that the promoters of the Medway-Franklin electric road, provided a franchise be granted, will be asked to permit a clause to be inserted by which the school children shall have special rates to and from school. This is done in other towns where the trolley is used, and it is an actual saving to the towns in the matter of transportation.

The Franklin Library association held its annual meeting on Tuesday, selecting the following officials: President, Joseph G. Ray; vice president, William Rockwood; clerk and treasurer, George W. Wiggin. The directors are Rev. Dr. Hodge, E. H. Sherman, Mrs. George W. Wiggin, Miss Lydia P. Ray, Mrs. Moses Farnum and Miss Frances E. King.

The whist party given by Mrs. Frank Moore of Union street Wednesday was a great success socially. The ladies present were all gowned in dainty summer toilets. There promises to be a large attendance at the next regular meeting of the Alden club next Monday evening, when Miss Hodge will present a paper on "Rudyard Kipling." Mrs. Charles Stewart will sing the Recessional, with De Koven's music, and Mrs. E. D. Daniels will read some selections from the poet's works. A full meeting is desired as there is business to be transacted.

The advent of the new towel industry at Unionville will necessitate the erection of a number of new houses in the spring, which ought to make business good for Franklin artisans. Few people realize what a boon the coming of the Worcester Textile Co. to Franklin will prove to be, as the company has a large amount of capital back of it and the grade of goods turned out entirely meets the demands of the trade.

Tax Collector Sherman's report for the fiscal year 1899 will show $51,320.13 paid into the treasury for the twelve months ending Jan. 31, 1900, which includes $225.95 accrued interest upon the taxes of 1898, leaving no taxes uncollected back of the year 1899 just closed. This shows a very clean collection of the town's account against the tax payers, which has been accomplished in a very quiet way.

The Dean basket ball team played a close and exciting game at Everett on Wednesday evening with the Y. M. C. A. team, and although the academy boys were defeated they played magnificently and kept their wily opponents on the jump from start to finish. The score was: Everett 9, Dean 5. Two games will be played tomorrow evening at the gymnasium, the Dean team meeting the Melrose Y. M. C. A. and Dean second playing with the Milford Y. M. C. A.

It is said that an old survey for an electric road shows that a line from Medway to Franklin via City Mills is only a mile and a half further than the direct route via Lincoln street and it avoids the difficulties to be overcome at Richardson's hill. One of the objects of this proposed line was to open to the public the attractions of Kingsbury's as a picnic resort, the locality possessing great natural attractions. W. M. Comey of City Mills has the survey.

We learn that the claims of Chester M. Whiting against the Spanish government are in good hands, as his leading lawyer is no less a personage than ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed. It is understood that the claims will aggregate more than $100,000, with an excellent chance of being allowed, as Mr. Whiting had taken especial pains to prepare his detail as the matter progressed, secure his testimony from consuls and other parties who were cognizant of the facts, etc.

Rev. Father Lee has been especially busy this winter keeping the various building operations going on at the new gymnasium, which already presents a most imposing appearance. The whole north end of the town will be improved by the presence of so handsome a building there. The introduction of the heating apparatus has been quite a task, as it required a vast array of steam pipes, radiators, etc. A portable saw mill has just been set up inside the building to get out the interior finish.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Whiting and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Whiting of Brooklyn, N. Y., will leave on a Raymond excursion for New Orleans, Florida and Nassau the 22d of February, reaching New Orleans just in time to see the Mardi Gras at its height. From there they will take in the leading resorts in Florida, and then sail for Nassau, making a six weeks' trip of most delightful promise. They were to have been accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Thayer, but the illness of his mother, Mrs. William Thayer, made it seem advisable to relinquish their plans.

Quite naturally there is no person about town more justifiably pleased than is W. C. Sherman. He was invited last Wednesday, with some of the other members of the North Attleboro team, to a little spread at the Garrison club, and before the party broke up he was presented with a handsome gold watch engraved, "Presented to Walter C. Sherman by his North Attleboro base ball friends, Feb. 7, 1900." This testimonial in a measure shows the appreciation in which he is held by the patrons of the game in the jewelry town where he has done so much to place and keep a winning team in the field.

John B. Bonin of Woonsocket, in company with his wife and another lady, was driving toward Franklin on Monday night, and when about two miles this side of town two men approached his carriage. One of them attempted to hold the horse, while the other tried to get into the carriage. Mr. Bonin sometimes carries large sums of money with him and always has a revolver. When he saw that two strangers were looking for trouble he drew the revolver and after covering them jumped from his seat to the ground, and ordered them to move on, which they precipitately did. He heard no more from them.

Conductor S. A. Mathes, now of Readville, still keeps a few pure bred fowls as was his wont while here. He keeps up with the procession of modern life, for he has had a portable hen house made which can be taken apart and moved from place to place with his camp chair and bedstead. He has found that while a minister of the gospel can stay about two years in a town a railroad man has to average a move about once in a year and a half, and the railroader who keeps hens, with a movable hen residence, can put his fancy fowls under his arms, in his wife's hat box and other odd corners and be ready for any emergency.

The supper of the ladies' society of the Universalist church on Wednesday evening was an unqualified success, in quality and in patronage. The wonder was that so much could be given for so little money. The entertainment which followed, provided by the Y. P. C. U., was novel in some of its features and was much enjoyed. George Grant gave a piano solo, which was heartily encored. Miss Jessie Corbin sang a solo and was also recalled. There was a shadow pantomime in which the shadows were not only clear and sharp, but the action was fine and expressive. Miss Hodge read the verses illustrated and Miss Morey and Messrs. Frazer and Wyckoff did the acting. After the pantomime followed magic writing, a musical contest, etc. The proceeds were satisfactory.

Farmers' Club.

Franklin Farmers' club met Monday evening, Jan. 29, with J. M. Parker, North Franklin, at the old J. W. Richardson place. President Morse called upon Mr. Parker to read a paper on the question of the evening, "Potato Culture: Soil, Fertilizer, Care and Marketing." He said in part: "Potatoes are one of the most important of cultivated plants and in universal cultivation in temperate parts of the globe. The herbage has a slightly narcotic smell, although cattle do not refuse to eat a little of it, and the tender tops are used in some countries like spinach. The tubers are, however, the only valuable part of the plant. The potato is a native of tropical America, probably from Chili to Mexico, and is of great importance as food, both for cattle and human beings Some say that land that will raise thirty bushels of wheat will raise 1,000 bushels of potatoes, but the latter are not nearly as nutritious an article of food as wheat.

As to the raising of potatoes there are many ways. Some plant them whole, some cut to one eye, some to two and some cut the seed ends off. In 1898 I planted seven varieties on three acres. I planted one barrel of seeds Early Harvest and only dug two barrels potatoes in the fall. Hebrons did the best and Polaries were next. One row of Sir Walter Raleigh, using one peck of seed, grew six bushels of good, nice smooth potatoes, or at the rate of 240 bushels per acre. This year they did not do as well, and when dug were quite green, they now are about as good as any we have to eat. For fertilizer 1,700 pounds were applied. My way of planting is to plow as deep as I dare, harrow all I have time to, furrow and put in fertilizer with a machine, then run through furrow again to mix well together. After they are up, run the cultivator in the row and the weeder across the row and keep them both going.

As to fertilizers—I don't think 200 or 300 pounds will raise a crop, while others say use from one to two tons per acre. If we use commercial fertilizer the best is the cheapest, and not much less than 1,500 pounds per acre used alone will do. As to markets the best way is to get rid of them right out of the field when you can get a fair price. But one may raise them as they will it is a job from the start till the last one is sold, for after you have them grown, and have gotten rid of all the bugs, you will find as mean a pest in the wire worm and white grub as any we have to deal with."

After the paper the question was discussed by several gentlemen present, all agreeing that the land should be put in good, fine, mellow condition before seed is planted and the after cultivating could most all be done with a horse. Last season Mr. Morse ran his weeder across the rows after going lengthways of them. All agree that they had gotten just as good crops from small seed as from large ones cut, and that Green Mountain was the best market potato today. Adjourned at 9.15, with the social hour and refreshments. D.

High-Grade Orients for 1900.

The Waltham Manufacturing Company will distinguish itself during 1900 by making a line of relatively high priced wheels—they will market nothing under $50, and will even go before the public with a chain-geared Orient listing at $65.

They say their cheapest wheel last year listed at $50, and they sold 50 per cent. more bicycles than during any previous season—not only sold all 1899 models, but had to ship out a number of 1900 models on orders for 1899 machines at the end of the season, they add. They have had twelve salesman on the road for several weeks, and report orders about 75 per cent. larger than they were at this time last year. Another gratifying feature is that a larger per cent. of their orders is for the higher priced models about 50 per cent. being for $50 wheels, about 30 per cent. $65 wheels and about 20 per cent. chainless.

A ladies' Orient at $65 will be a feature of their line. They rightly contend that there has been a great deal more attention paid to the manufacture of men's wheels than to those of women and as a result delicate women have been compelled to ride wheels many pounds heavier than those used by men. Last year the Orient people catalogued a model weighing 22 pounds, and in spite of the high price, the sales on this model was greater than expected, and orders are coming in very much faster, particularly from sections where samples were used last year. During 1900 it will be made one of the main features of the line. It is a distinctive appearance, having the two connecting bars parallel, and a 24 inch front wheel.

While the motor tandem has almost superseded the human driven multi cycle as a pacing machine on the track, there is still a demand for the latter and the Waltham company will meet it by cataloguing their full line at greatly reduced prices, viz.: Triplets, $150; quads, $200; quints' $250; sextets, $300; septets, $350;—a reduction of almost 50 per cent. from prices previously charged. The Waltham line, exclusive of multicycles, will comprise the following: Orient light roadsters (22 1-2 pounds for men and 24 1-2 for ladies), $50; Orient Leader (20 1-2 pounds for men, 22 for ladies), $65; Sager-geared chainless (25 pounds for men, 26 for ladies), $75.

To further the distinctiveness of their line, the Orient people will use a red tire under their own name, although the M. & W. and the Kangaroo will be offered as options. In another respect, also, will the Orient line have an exclusiveness all its own—it will be fitted with English saddles, the well-known Brooks. Their use of Clincher brass-lined tubing is also strongly featured. As is quite generally known, the Orient people are about the only American cycle makers giving practical attention to motor cycles, and while their bicycle agency does not include their automobiles, they are giving preference to Orient agents when they are in position to give satisfactory representation.

When Visiting the Sick.

The following advice is good at all seasons and well worth remembering by the general reader. The presence of a friend or relative in a sick room can be made beneficial or otherwise by the observance or non observance of good common-sense ideas. Here is what a recent a writer has to say on the subject:

"Sick people don't like to be stared at. They are morbidly sensitive. To look surprised at the change sickness has wrought is annoying, and, worse than that, it is disheartening, and makes invalids imagine their case to be worse than it is. Therefore, don't stare at a sick person, and don't stand at the back of the bed to make him turn his eyes round to see you. Always sit by the bedside, for the person feels more at rest than if you stand up tall before him. And don't whisper; don't talk in a low voice; don't follow the doctor or a caller out into the next room. The invalid will be absolutely certain that you are discussing him. Don't wear garments that rustle or are made of rough clothing, to come in contact with hands made tender by sickness, and don't wear creaking boots or thick-soled boots."

St. Valentine's Welcome.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Congregational church will meet in the parlor Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A salad supper will be served at 6.30; tickets usual price. A pleasing entertainment in the evening.

Come, all ye hungry ones that smart
Over the wounds of Cupid's dart,
Eat salad supper and be mine;
This is my day, my valentine.

Tremont Theatre, Boston.

Frank Daniels will bring his comic opera company to the Tremont Theatre next Monday evening, Feb. 12, in "The Ameer." Everywhere the Daniels' company has played this season, they have broken all their previous records for big business. The music of the new opera is described as the prettiest that Hebert has written. The score is full of catchy melodies and there are two marches in the opera so stirring as almost to make it impossible for the listener to stay in his seat. The part which they have devised for Frank Daniels is declared by that inimitable comedian to be the richest in comedy situations of any that he has portrayed. His supporting company contains over sixty people, and the chorus is declared to be the prettiest and best singing chorus on the comic opera stage today. The costumes and scenic effects have received great praise for beauty and appropriateness.

Dr. E. M. Faxon, Boston, specialist in diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, will meet patients at hotel Briggs Thursdays from 9 to 12:30 o'clock.

GOVERNOR TAYLOR is still holding out in Kentucky, though affairs are gradually quieting down, and most likely the dispute will be settled by the courts, as it should have been done originally. Whatever may have been the evil plane of Goebel, the great mistake was that Taylor ever allowed the armed mountaineers to take possession of Frankfort, as their very presence there was a menace to law and order. Better the temporary usurpation of law than cowardly assassination.

WITHOUT question Bryan had a triumphal tour throughout New England and the people turned out to hear. Just how much they were impressed remains to be seen. His powers as a speaker have by no means abated, and his personal endurance is wonderful. It seems hardly possible that any candidate can now arise to eclipse Bryan's chances of representing his party at the next presidential election. Bourke Cochran tells him that to exploit free silver again would be suicidal, but Bryan insists that it must be done, and we hope he will do it. The battle is half won when the enemy assists.

ALL lovers of honest base ball trust that the plans of the new American association will not go astray. With the syndicate ball of the past year, the hoodlumism permitted, the unjust reserve rule for the players, the the rubber backbone of the magnates in standing by the umpires, and the incompetency of many of the latter, all lead honest lovers of the sport to turn to the new association with high hopes. We fail to see where the magnates, one and all, have anything to ask of the newspapers for support, as they get more free advertising for less return than any business concern can possibly get. They are now crying baby and claiming that they "own" the cities in which they have teams placed A little competition won't hurt them. Let's have a new deal and we'll have better ball.

RAPE AS GREEN FOOD.

Every Farmer Who Raises Chickens Should Try a Small Patch Without Delay.

Rape is an excellent green food for chickens and fills a long felt want of poultrymen. It can be sown in early spring or any time later up to the middle of August, and furnish an abundance of food, writes C. R. Roberts in the American Poultry Journal. Last year I sowed a small patch just to see what kind of a plant it was. It grows from 15 to 20 inches in height. The leaves in color and shape resemble the cabbage leaf very much. It can be sown broadcast, or in drills 30 inches apart, and he cultivated. The ground should be prepared the same as for turnips, and the seed covered about the same as turnip seed. It grows very fast, and can be cut and fed to chickens or let them go to it at will and help themselves. When they are to eat in this way I should prefer to have it sown in drills, as they can walk between the rows, and are not so apt to trample and break it down as is the case when sown broadcast; but when it is to be cut and fed it is just as good to sow it broadcast as any. Last year my young chickens commenced to eat my cabbages, but when the rape was up four or five inches high they left the cabbage and commenced on the rape, and any one knows that when chickens leave a cabbage patch to eat something else it must be something they like better than cabbages. I had never had chickens do better and grow faster than they did while they were helping themselves to rape. I think that every one who raises chickens should try a small patch. It will cost but a few cents to give this plant a trial, as five pounds is enough to sow an acre broadcast, and one to two pounds if sown in drills. I have no rape seed to sell.

Few Accidents to Cyclists.

Two of the largest insurance companies of New England furnish statistics which show that in spite of the supposedly greater risks of bicycle riding, in a total of 25,000 accidents 4,919 were due to falls while afoot, 2,418 occurred on street cars, railroads or steamships The horse was responsible for 2,213 while the bicycle caused only 1,727.

LOOK FOR LOOSE SPOKES.

One Feature of the Bicycle That Needs the Most Careful Looking After in the Spring.

In the spring it is often found that there are loose spokes in the wheels and that they are out of true. Examination of them should therefore not be forgotten. To tighten spokes and properly true up a wheel is a neat job and one that is best to leave to a repair man unless the rider is experienced or naturally apt at mechanical work. With tires there is little to do except inflate them and see if they are all right If defective because of having been left flat, have them repaired or get new ones. It is a good idea, however, to turn the wheel slowly and investigate whether the tire is firm on the rim, for if the cement has weakened the tire may "creep" and cut the valve stem off the first time the wheel goes out. Most riders who do not keep their wheels in commission from fall to spring find that the tires do not hold air so well when brought out of the garret. In a majority of cases this is because there is trouble at the valve stem. Often the valve will be found leaky because of the plunger in it being clogged by dust, though often the pump will force the dust away. When it is tightly lodged a drop of water usually does the trick. Oil never should be used. In lubricating the bicycle after overhauling it the pedals should not be forgotten, although they usually are. The head bearings should also be remembered, else the rider will find himself a member of the "squeaky squad," who are in evidence everywhere on the roads in spring. The saddle and saddle post are usually overlooked. If the saddle has springs and is rusty or dirty it may become the seat of a squeak that will pester the rider for days to locate After giving a wheel an overhauling too much care cannot be taken to see that every part is properly replaced and set up right. It is better to make certain by a triple survey than to meet with accident because of an oversight.

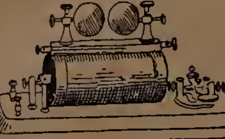
THE NEW TELEGRAPH

Marconi Was Not First to Send Messages Without Wires.

There Have Been Many Investigators in the Same Field—Infant Incubation In Paris—Glass for Pavements.

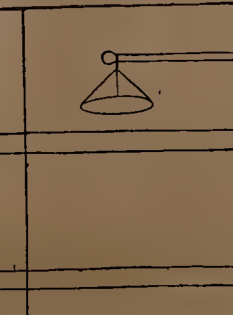
[Special Correspondence.]

WHILE so much interest is being evinced in wireless telegraphy at the present time, and there is so much discussion pro and con as to its practicability, the general public seems to be indifferent as to the exact amount of credit which should be apportioned to the different investigators in this field. When it was stated early in 1897 that William Marconi had invented a method of telegraphing for miles without wires it was generally believed that he had made a new discovery, when he had really been employing well-known principles and improving on apparatus in use over a century ago. But to Marconi belongs the credit of having, by means of minute attention to detail and the use of the long vertical air wire, placed one method of space telegraphy beyond the plane of uncertain laboratory experiments on to one of certainty of action and ease of manipulation comparing favorably with methods of electric communication employing a continuous wire between two places. His apparatus is simple and inexpensive. It is not likely that wireless telegraphy will usurp the place of telegraphy with wires. Each has a field of its own. An expert operator can receive from 50 to 60 words per minute, and four messages may be transmitted each way over one wire at the same time, while with wireless telegraphy, as yet, only 15 to 20 words can be sent per minute, and those only in one direction. Marconi has demonstrated that, up to a certain limit, the distance to which effective signaling extends varies as the square of the height of the vertical wire or rod connected to a receiving or transmitting apparatus.



WIRELESS TRANSMITTER.
(The Instrument Used by American Operators.)

An effective signal, to be carried one mile, requires a rod 20 feet high; four miles, 40 feet; 16 miles, 80 feet, and so on. Each rod has a "certain sphere of influence." No method has, as yet, been found of shielding any particular rod to render it responsive only to signals coming from one station, and not from others within its sphere of influence. But this difficulty will soon be overcome. Marconi's system has already been found valuable for communication between ships in the navy and between lighthouses and ships at sea. In 1746, Winckler, at Leipzig, transmitted signals a few feet without wire connection. Dr. Watson, in July, 1747, sent electricity through the Thames river so that shocks were felt at a receiving station. It is said that in 1748 Benjamin Franklin, by means of an electrical apparatus and without wire connection, transmitted electricity from one bank of the Schuylkill river, which lighted a fire for a picnic party on the opposite bank. After De Luc, in 1749, telegraphed without wires across Lake Geneva, no record appears of any advance on this line until 1838, when Prof. Henry sent signals from one room to another, 18 feet distant. He used a coil of wire with a transmitter in one room and another coil with a receiver in the other room. After Morse had proved, over 50 years ago, that it was possible to send signals over two wires, he had great difficulty in convincing people that he was not deceiving them when he substituted the earth for one of these wires. He believed that the same messages could be sent without the use of any wire connection. On December 16. 1842, he telegraphed a distance of 80 feet, across the Potomac river at Washington, without the aid of wires. During the following year his friends, Rogers and Vail, repeated the experiment across the Susquehanna, at Havre de Grace, a distance of one mile. A patent was granted to Lindsay in England in 1854 covering the same method. In 1877 Prof. Gray, in Chicago, sent messages from one end of the Western Electric company's works to the other, using the means formerly employed by Prof Henry.

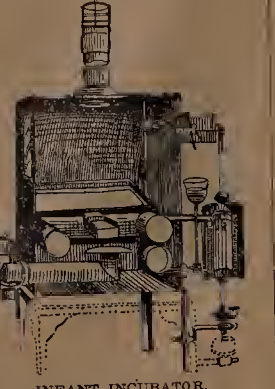


PROF. HENRY'S APPARATUS.
(Used with Considerable Success as Long Ago as 1838.)

Prof. Dolbear, while experimenting discovered that the telephone receiver he was holding had become disconnected from the wire and that he could still hear distinctly. He raised two wires in the air by means of kites and with an induction coil and Morse key and one vertical wire at the transmitting station and his telephone receiver connected with the other wire in the air and with the earth, he was enabled to telegraph for a half mile. He obtained a patent in 1886. The same year a patent for a method of telegraphing to and from moving trains was granted a man named Phelps, and in 1891 a similar patent was issued to Edison. The system was used on the Lehigh Valley and upon the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads, and was only abandoned because there was not enough business to pay to keep operators on the trains. It is yet too early for the uninitiated to more than conjecture as to what possibilities may be opened up by the use of electric currents controlled without wires.

It will not make much difference unless the coming years are to furnish people to enjoy the results of the discoveries of the present time. Depopulating France is using every method known to science to preserve the lives of the little ones who seem to be arriving in smaller numbers each year. Wishing to raise money to popularize knowledge of the incubating system, tickets are sold at a box office of the Oeuvre Maternelle des Couveuses d'Enfants, as at a theater, to the long halls filled with what appear to be refrigerators with plate glass front and sides. Each contains a very small baby.

The establishment advertises in the theatrical columns of the Paris papers and attracts immense crowds who would probably not feel much interest in a collection of ordinary infants. But the sight of the rosy little dolls who arrived in this chilly world too soon, and who but for the invention of the couveuse would have passed out of it to attain maturity without a material body, is irresistible. A newly-born infant should not weigh less than six pounds, but many who have weighed little over two pounds have been saved by means of the incubators, whose object it is to protect their occupants from the changes of temperature which nearly always prove fatal. Behind the glass plates a mattress rests upon springs. Underneath, through a spiral pipe, a continuous current of warm water runs. This water is heated outside in a little boiler by means of a lamp or gas jet. A chimney carries off vitiated air as well as the noise of the occasional screams of the little creatures, who as a rule cry but little. Pure air from the street flows in, warm and filtered, through a pipe. A new baby is first washed with soap in a bath 98 degrees Fahrenheit, while a newly-sterilized couveuse is being heated. The temperature is governed by the needs of the child. Toward the last days of its confinement it is gradually lowered to about 77 degrees Fahrenheit, and each day the stay outside in the feeding-room is prolonged. While the child is taking nourishment the incubator is sterilized by chemical disinfectants in compressed steam. The children are so clean, the air they breathe so pure, that lying in an equal temperature all the conditions are right for ease and growth.



INFANT INCUBATOR.
(Machine to Graduate the Temperature in the Paris Nursery.)

The well-fed nounous, plump, rosy-cheeked and lazy, who pass their peaceful days taking nourishment for two, supply the kind of food that nature intends for growing babies.

It is said that in France they do not raise infants on canned goods and dog-biscuits, and that the profession of wet-nurse is both dignified and lucrative.

The French are a nation of experimenters. Last November, Louis Garchey obtained the privilege of paving a crowded section of one street in Lyons with glass to replace Belgian blocks, and the material has proved so satisfactory that large contracts are to be filled for other European cities. The pavement is laid in blocks, eight inches square, and fitted together so closely that no water can soak between. After six months' hard wear it remains as sound as when put down. Its resistance is greater than that of stone. It is such a poor conductor of cold that ice does not readily form upon it. Dirt does not accumulate upon it as readily as upon stone, and it does not retain microbes. The product is obtained from broken glass heated to 1,250 degrees Fahrenheit, and compressed in matrices by hydraulic force. It devitrifies under the process. It possesses all the physical and chemical qualities of glass, except transparency, but resists crushing, frosts and heavy shocks. From old glass, material is being produced for buildings and interior decoration. The possibilities of glass as a building material will be demonstrated in the luminous palace for the Paris exposition, which will soon be completed.

The Practical Side of It.

They talk about the reapers that are "singin' in the wheat,"
But to tell the truth about it—they're a-howlin' at the heat!
No feller feels like singin' when he has to stir aroun'
In a cotton or a cornfiel' with the sun
a-blazin' down!

They ain't no reapers singin' in the country
roun' about;
They use to try a little, but the music's given out,
Fer when it comes to reapin' you've got to
stir aroun',
An' you never feel like singin' when the sun is blazin' down!

—F. L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

Is Baby Too Thin?

If so, there must be some trouble with its food. Well babies are plump; only the sick are thin. Are you sure the food is all right? Children can't help but grow; they must grow if their food nourishes them. Perhaps a mistake was made in the past and as a result the digestion is weakened. If that is so, don't give the baby a lot of medicine; just use your every-day common sense and help nature a little, and the way to do it is to add half a teaspoonful of to the baby's food three or four times a day. The gain will begin the very first day you give it. It seems to correct the digestion and gets the baby started right again. If the baby is nursing but does not thrive, then the mother should take the emulsion. It will have a good effect both upon the mother and child. Twenty-five years proves this fact.
SCOTT'S EMULSION

SIMPLE ROAD GRADER.

Invented by a Farmer Who Is Too Generous to Secure a Patent on His Idea.

I have been a reader of your valuable paper for two years, and am very fond of it. I have been benefited by many good hints from the Epitomes of Experience, and the many little sketches and drawings which have been made by farmers. Here is an illustration of a road grader, which is my own invention. A and B are two pieces of plank 4x10 and four feet long. D is a brace three feet in length. C C are two old plow shares with the points off, bolted to the timber. A makes a good band side. E is a piece of an old wagon tire. Nail a board over the top, and you will have an excellent grader.—Fred J Claussen, in Agricultural Epitomist

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition; my skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying Electric Bitters, and to my great joy and surprise the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they saved my life and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them; only 50c. per bottle at A. C. To Be Prepared

For war is the surest way for this nation to maintain peace. That is the opinion of the wisest statesmen. It is equally true that to be prepared for spring is the best way to avoid the peculiar dangers of the season. This is a lesson multitudes are learning, and at this time, when the blood is sure to be loaded with impurities and to be weak and sluggish, the millions begin to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, expels all germ diseases, creates a good appetite, gives strength and energy and puts the whole system in a healthy condition, preventing pneumonia, fevers and other dangerous diseases which are liable to attack a weakened system.

Up and down the stage, and dance

Manager Partridge wants to make an important improvement at the opera house by building new dressing rooms at the rear of the store, under the stage, and taking out those at the side of the stage. This would give much better facilities for handling scenery and much less work in handling baggage for the dressing rooms. With such a change many spectacular pieces could be much better presented.

In their own bewitching way

The American Woolen company held its first annual meeting in Jersey City Tuesday, when Hon. Joseph G. Ray retried as one of the directors. During the first eight and a half months of the business year total sales of the company amounted to $26,500,000. It was estimated that the total sales for the year will amount to $36,000,000. The president thought the sales for the coming year would not be less than $40,000,000.

Franklin's MALE-D hearts to slay

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather the Ladies' Auxiliary, No. 12, A. O. H., and their friends fully enjoyed themselves Friday evening at the second anniversary of their organization. The entertainment which was varied was enjoyed by the large number present. Whist was played, after which ice cream and cake was served. Dancing then took place, M. McWilliams, prompter. Vocal solos were pleasingly rendered by Misses Lizzie Pendergast, Florence Cody and Agnes O'Sullivan. The music was by Miss Agnes O'Sullivan.

Come and see the Antique Dames

As may be seen elsewhere, Mr. McCarthy, the dry goods man of Woonsocket, was to have held a sale here this week in the Opera House block, but the matter coming to the attention of Attorney Ruggles, through the Business Men's association, he wrote Mr. McCarthy that the law prohibited such sales. Upon conferring with a prominent Woonsocket lawyer and also with Mr. Ruggles personally, Mr. McCarthy decided that the legal gentlemen were right, and having no desire to evade or test the law he announces his withdrawal elsewhere.

Try to guess their proper names

The financial condition of the town at the close of the fiscal year, Jan. 31, shows the town with a balance of assets over liabilities of over $3000. The assets include unpaid taxes of $11,790, cash in the treasury of $3310, due on sewer $3300 and from the state and towns over $2100. These assets are good for nearly face value. The liabilities consist of notes for borrowed money and unpaid bills of about $17,000. The condition is somewhat more favorable than last year, and the amount of unpaid taxes is about the same. These taxes are wholly on the assessment of 1899, the account for the previous year having been closed.

Give them one last desperate chance

The lecture of Mr. Buker, on "Egypt," to be given in the Universalist church next Monday evening will be not only interesting, but instructive. It will be illustrated by the stereopticon, and will exhibit more than 100 pictures. Mr. Buker visited the Orient for the purpose of obtaining these pictures and the material for his lectures. Those who listen to him will obtain as good an idea of this wonderland as it is possible to obtain without going to Egypt in person. Children of the public schools under fifteen will be admitted for fifteen cents, provided they are obtained in advance. Tickets at the door twenty-five cents. Tickets at Dana's.

To pierce your heart with Cupid's lance

Rev. W. R. Libby of Jamaica Plain preached at the Universalist church Sunday. At the 5 p. m service his text was from Matt. xvi,, 18: "Upon this rock I will build my church." The speaker said the rock of ages was referred to in the text exemplified in Jesus Christ. The church is any organization of individuals bonded together for the uplifting of humanity. The church of the present is divided into factions, although all striving for the same end. The church of the future will recognize more and more that the foundation is love and tolerance. Minor differences will be forgotten and it will be broad enough to hold all. Catholic in spirit, having faith in truth, trust in God and humanity, the product of all good that has been.

Their President, she is immense

Business is opening up nicely for H. S. Dow of Boston, who has opened the White Star laundry in the rear of the Dana block. He does only high grade work, and bundles can be left at Mr. Dana's, if desired.

Dr. E. M. Faxon, Boston, specialist in diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, will meet patients at hotel Briggs Thursdays from 9 to 12:30 o'clock.

And Franklin's schools she represents

Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska.

Being Investigated.

An alarming rumor got abroad that the Catholic church was structurally unsafe and had been condemned by state authorities. The facts are that some of the supporting pillars in the room below have weakened, and Father Lee has decided to have the structure carefully examined before holding further service there. Meanwhile services will be held in the Opera house until arrangements can be made for them in the new gymnasium building.

Be Sure to Hear It.

Tickets are selling well for the Tufts College Glee Club concert at Dean academy on Friday evening, and a rich musical treat is assured. Again, the money secured provides a means of enjoying base ball and other sports for Dean, and who does not enjoy the spring games, which are provided free?

"Shannon of the Sixth."

Manager Partridge has secured this magnificent romantic military drama for next week Tuesday evening, and it will be the finest play of its kind seen here this season. More later.

The Medway Electric Hearing.

Over two hundred citizens gathered in the Town Hall last evening to hear the petitioners on the matter of an electric road between here and Medway, over Lincoln street. The selectmen were all present, Chairman Gallison presiding. Clerk Newell read the call, and the chairman explained that everyone had a right to be heard. The town belonged to its citizens and not to the corporations, and that this was the place for an honest expression of opinion.

Attorney Feeley of Walpole said that the company he represented desired to build at once and in as nearly a straight line between here and Boston as possible. The same company built the road from Medway to Dedham, which spoke for itself. This would be a continuation of that line, making Franklin one terminal and Boston the other, going to Forest Hills without change of cars. The fare would be five cents from any part of a town to any part of another town. In answer to Principal Daniels he assured half fare to school children and teachers. Sixty foot and sixty pound rails would be used, paving where required and also girder rails, that matter with the poles being left with the selectmen This present board would have to take some action upon this petition, as its successor could not take cognizance of this appeal, but a new one would have to be made.

Attorney Ruggles spoke upon the grounds of public necessity and convenience, urging also that it would not clash with any existing interests, as there was at present no connecting link between here and Boston, or between here and Medway. The proposed line ran within seventy-five rods of the school house in Rockville, and two hundred and fifty rods of the Waite mill. It would open up a valuable trade between here and Medway, and was of prime importance to our merchants here. The road would be built upon honor. To Mr. Fisher's suggestion he said that one road could not use another's tracks until it had been running six months, and then only by traffic arrangement or by an appeal to the commissioners. Otherwise this road would stop at Emmons street.

Dr. E. C. Abbott presented a petition signed by nearly every merchant upon Main street, and the residents upon the proposed line, together with many other voters. He also asked permission of the board that an expression be taken by rising of the sentiment in favor of the road. Nearly all seated arose. He expressed surprise at the apparent lack of opposition to the road, and said he had been led to believe that the meeting would develop into a "red-hot time."

W. S. Johnson said that as he traveled about he found a general desire for electric communication, and insisted that the steam road was not supplying the needs of the town.

In response to a call for George W. Bacon, that gentleman said that he desired to learn what opposition there could possibly be to the proposed road. Medway was now shut out from Franklin and it desired connection. A circuitous route through City Mills and Norfolk would be as bad as through Bellingham and Unionville. The direct route was but three and one-half miles. This would also furnish connection with South Framingham. The school children need the accommodation. From Medway to Milford is ten cents, and from Medway to Franklin through Bellingham would probably be fifteen. This company will give in return more than it asks. The present road to Medway was little better than a cart path. He understood that the selectmen of Norfolk would refuse to permit this company to come by way of that town, preferring later to be in a direct line of communication between Franklin and Walpole.

D. W. Corson said that the Medway road should be allowed an entrance because it would bring trade in, while at present not a little trade was going to Woonsocket, he thought to the amount of between $300 and $500 per week. He felt that if the selectmen did not care to grant it that the town should be allowed to vote upon the matter.

James M. Parker of North Franklin urged the admission of the company on the ground that Medway people desired to trade here and that the present method of transporting children by barge was unsatisfactory and cruel. The five cent rate would surely bring trade to Franklin merchants.

Fred S. Gore, for the company, said that the new road did not antagonize existing roads, but came to benefit itself and the town as well. A first-class road would be built, and he invited the selectmen to examine the company's works elsewhere as proof of the honesty of its intentions.

The meeting was then dismissed, the company distributing maps of the proposed route and their lines. The selectmen take the matter under advisement, but give no intimation of their intention as yet. It was the largest attended selectmen's hearing ever held in town, and, while there may be opposition, not an opposing word or suggestion was developed in the meeting.

The War in South Africa.

A large audience assembled on last Sunday evening in the Congregational church to listen to the address of the pastor, Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath, upon the war between the Britain and the Boer. The large number of men present indicated the interest taken in the question. Dr. Sneath expressed his conviction that the attitude of the American people was that of sympathy for the Boers, with no spirit of hostility toward the English. Unquestionably the present war was an unjustifiable one. The English government should have exercised a larger patience and pressed for arbitration of the difficulties which had arisen. As the stronger nation she could have afforded to do so. Three serious barriers to a satisfactory arbitration were evident: First, the gold fields; second, the discontent of the Outlanders; and third, the determination on the part of each nation to control the southern portion of the African continent. Nevertheless, we still believe that the English should have, in the face of the seemingly precipitate action of President Kruger's proclamation, pursued the policy of delay and sought most earnestly for a peaceful settlement. But the war is on and the future looks dark and foreboding. And so I believe the time is at hand for mediation.

The conference at the Hague decided that it would not be an impertinence at any time for any nation to step forward and offer her services as mediator between two contending nations. This ought to be done at once. And for three reasons: First, to save the South African Republic. While the English monarchy is better than any other, it is not the ideal form of government. The republic meets the ideal, and while there are features in the South African republic which are not in accordance with our ideas, it is nevertheless a republic, and I do not want to see one less republic in the world, and especially not upon the dark continent. English victory means a republic changed into a colony. Second, to save many lives from death in conflict. The indications are that serious struggles are near at hand, with fearful destruction of life. This ought to be avoided if possible. Third, for the sake of Her Majesty's realm itself. We know not what a day may bring forth. There are serious movements in Afghanistan, in China; there are the possibilities of insurrection in India and Egypt. English civilization is preferable to Russian. This war ought to be brought to a speedy conclusion as a wise precaution against more serious conditions that may follow at any time.

It must, therefore, be evident that mediation is a timely suggestion. There is force in the idea that an English civilization in the south of Africa is better than the one which now exists. But it is also evident that in time the English-speaking residents would accomplish the ends sought for in a more peaceful way. And our faith is, that whatever the outcome of this struggle, a higher form of Christian civilization will rapidly come to that wonderfully blessed portion of God's earth.

Mr. Sneath made a spiritual application upon the curse of covetousness as it makes itself felt in the individual life as well as in nations.

An Annual Enjoyment.

The Annual Founders' Day exercises of Dean Academy will be held at the Academy on Friday, Feb. 16, 1900. From the early days of the school it has been customary to celebrate the birthday of Dr. Oliver Dean in commemoration both of his early munificence to the school and the gifts of a long line of benefactors since, who have made possible the present condition of the institution. The occasion brings together trustees and friends, the past and present students, and is a most enjoyable day in the school year. The following is the programme for the day.

11.00 a. m.—Semi-annual meeting of trustees in the Academy office.

2.30 p. m.—Annual Founders' day address, Academy chapel, Rev. James F. Albion, Malden, Mass. Subject, "The ultimate aim of education."

4.00 p. m.—Social reunion, Academy parlors.

8.00 p. m.—Concert by the Tufts College Glee, Mandolin, Banjo and Guitar club, for the benefit of the Dean Athletic association.

9.15 p. m.—Informal reception to the Glee club, Dean gymnasium.

A Good Time Promised.

The New England Order of Protection will hold the last of a series of socials Wednesday evening, Feb. 14, in Red Men's hall, at 8.15 o'clock. Music by Prof. John O'Sullivan. All members are requested to be present at lodge meeting promptly at 7.30 o'clock.

Monumental Work.

The undersigned informs the public that he represents one of the largest manufacturers and dealers in marble and granite monumental work of Vermont. He has an extensive line of photo designs to select from and prices to suit the times. A line addressed to L. S. Cheney, at Franklin, will meet with prompt attention.

Go to Ochee's barber shop and get a "winter" hair cut.

The License Question.

There is an aspect of this question which is quite apt to be overlooked. The enforcement of a no-license law is left largely with the selectmen. Any board elected through liquor interests could so nullify the law through non-enforcement that it would be nearly equivalent to license.

Therefore it behooves every voter to consider carefully, from a temperance standpoint, the qualifications of each of the candidates for selectmen. The votes of temperance men should not be cast for any candidate for selectmen who is not known to be an advocate of no license and all that term implies.

Other considerations may arise this year, on account of the interest in the electric road matter, so that the temperance attitude of the candidates may not be as closely scanned as usual. No other interest should blind the honest voter to the possibility of a board who would not enforce the law, and the temperance issue should be paramount. Do not let it be overshadowed by any other issue.

Temperance people do not especially fear that the town will be carried this year for license, but at the same time they should see to it that their efforts in behalf of a clean town be not defeated by a board which does not represent their convictions in so vital a matter.

Voters, scan your candidates carefully, and see if they will stand the test.

A Rare Decision.

Whether the subjoined rendition of justice, reported by the San Francisco Wave, is authentic or not is beyond our ken, but in any event it is unique to a degree: "At Langtry, Tex., Squire Roy Bean, who administers justice and keeps the leading saloon, had to sit in judgment on one Jim Anderson, a red-headed railroad clerk who had killed Ah Ling, a laundryman, for, as he claimed, insulting him. Anderson was arrested and brought before Magistrate Bean, who listened to the evidence, which was given by the accused himself, and then proceeded to turn the pages of his copy of the revised statues: 'This here book, which is a Texas law book,' he announced, 'says thet hommy-side is th' killin' of a human, male ur female. They is many kinds of hommy-side—murder, manslaughter, plain hommy-side, negl'gent hommy-side, justifi'ble hommy-side an' praiseworthy hommy-side. They is three kinds of humans—white men, niggers an' Mexikins. It stan's to reason thet a Chinym'n ain't human. Ef a Chinym'n was human, killin' of him would come under th' head of praiseworthy hommy-side. Th' pris'ner is discharged, on conditions that he pays f'r havin' th' Chink buried.' Since this decision the laundry work of Langtry has been done wholly by Mexicans."

A Lover's Lawsuit.

In Chicago they are above all things practical. A student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons there has furnished the latest example of this virtue. He "wants dem presents back," and has gone to law to recover $90 spent in gifts while trying to discover whether Miss Eva Selleck, of Knoxville, Ill., was his destined affinity. After much deliberation he at last decided that there were plenty of fish in the sea and more than one girl in the world for him. Then, says the New York Times, Miss Selleck married a Chicago physician and was happy—for awhile. That is to say, she was happy until she received word of that $90 suit hereinbefore mentioned. The student of medicine says he spent the money for perfume, wine, cab fares, condensed milk and a bath brush. The point at issue is, of course, whether he simply advanced the cash on the understanding that it was to be repaid by wifely affection or whether the condensed milk, etc., was presented merely as a token of his love. Well, bath brushes may pass in Knoxville, Ill., as the girl protests, for tokens of that kind, but to the weary-wise eastern eye they look like indications of a permanent menage.

No nation eats anything like as much meat per capita as the American people. That they are too carnivorous is certain, says the Atlanta Journal. They would be healthier, heartier and happier people if they ate more farinaceous foods, more cheese, more vegetables and less meat. Many persons will find during the present high prices of beef that they can get along without it better than they had supposed, and that it is easy to provide good substitutes for it.

The Denver Times says: A native Colorado girl never gasps and says: "Oh! this is so sudden!" when she receives a proposal of marriage. She just opens her ruby lips to afford egress to a feathery sigh of relief, smiles the pensive smile she has been reserving for the occasion, lays her head where she can hear his heart tick and says to herself: "Won't the other girls be jealous, though, to see that I have got a dead cinch on him!"

Carrollton, Mo., is pervaded by a burglar who is described as wearing a long black mask and smoking a corncob pipe. This, remarks a fussy contemporary, distinguishes him from any burglar who may happen to be wearing a corncob pipe and smoking a long black mask.

See what Happens!

Listen to a child story:

MARY:—"Did you say your prayers last night?"

ALICE:—"Yes."

MARY:—"Well, I didn't, and I'm not going to say 'em to-night! Nor to-morrow night! Nor the next night! I'm going to stop now for five nights and if nothing happens to me, then I'm never going to say 'em any more."

This is the way children reason;—and some grown-up people, too! They are all right because "nothing happens!"

Now you probably drink coffee. How can we make you realize what you are losing in not trying

CHASE & SANBORN'S
"High Grade"
COFFEE.

Nothing happens to you if you don't use it! So it is hard to get you started.

But something happens if you once try a cup! You find the grocer delivers it in an imported, air-tight, parchment-lined bag. You wonder about this. But when you taste the coffee you get a hint. This coffee is only roasted on order; it is then hermetically sealed as it comes from the roaster; it is packed under the Chase & Sanborn Seal warranted trade-mark, and is guaranteed to be highest quality.

Try it just once.

CLEAN MILKING PAYS.

Interesting Experiments Conducted by Prof. D. H. Otis, at the Kansas State Station.

It is a well-known fact that cows not milked clean will tend to dry up in short order. Another important reason for milking clean is to get all of the butter fat, which is contained in a much larger per cent. in the last than in the first milk drawn, as is shown by the following experiment. The college dairy has conducted an experiment showing the importance of clean milking. Five cows were selected and their milk collected in half-pint bottles, each teat contributing its share to every bottle. These samples were tested with the Babcock test, with the following results:

Cow No. 6 varied from .6 of one per cent. to 7.2 per cent.

Cow No. 10 varied from .2 of one per cent. to 6.6 per cent.

Cow No. 14 varied from 1.6 per cent. to 5.8 per cent.

Cow No. 15 varied from 1.5 per cent. to 6.8 per cent.

Cow No. 20 varied from .8 of one per cent. to 7.8 per cent.

The results show a gradual, although not entirely uniform, increase in the per cent. of fat from the beginning to the last of the milking, except with the last two samples drawn from each cow. Here the per cent. of fat would take a sudden leap, amounting often to a third or a half of the total variation. This shows very clearly how important it is to get all the milk. By averaging the results it was found that the last quarter of a pint was worth from three-fourths to 1½ pints of milk first drawn from the udder. Moral: Milk clean and get fat.—D. H. Otis, Kansas Experiment Station.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

Give Them a Bit of Ground and Let Them Cultivate Flowers and Foliage Plants.

No occupation is so healthy, innocent and instructive for children as cultivating a little garden of their own. Give them a bit of ground in the spring—no matter if it be no larger than a bedspread—and give them the seeds of such bright and easily-grown flowers as pinks, petunias, daisies, mignonette and the old-fashioned marigold, four-o'clock, and lady-slipper, now called balsam. Provided with a little spade, and a hoe that has a small rake at the back, and dressed in plain clothes that cannot be easily spoiled and stout shoes, the boys and girls will derive more than enough benefit from the outdoor exercise to repay you for the extra washing it may make. It is a great deal cheaper to hire a washwoman than to pay a doctor. Then the pleasure and the good wholesome knowledge that comes through the cultivation of plants. The delight of watching the growth of the green things from the time the tiny spear pierces the dark mold until the bud and then the blossom—the crowning glory of the plant—is developed at the end of the tender stalk.

The plot for the children's garden should be well prepared—spaded and made soft, then smoothly raked. The child's name, or the initial letters of the name, may be sown in fine grass seed, or the seed of china pinks, or of flax. Make the letters in the smooth, soft soil with a pointed stick or the finger. Sow the seeds in the little furrows thus made, and cover firmly, pressing down the earth firmly but not too compactly. Sprinkle with warm water, and the seeds will quickly vegetate, and the little one sees with wondering delight his name traced in living green letters on his garden plot.—The Half Hour.

THE GARDEN CROPS.

If Properly Harvested, Handled and Stored Any of Them Can Be Kept for a Long Time.

When storing vegetables handle them carefully. Bruises liberate moisture which in time causes decay. If the vegetables have been exposed to the hot sun, allow them to cool before storing. Tubers of all kinds, such as turnips, beets, carrots, vegetable oysters, etc., should be packed in barrels or boxes with some earth mixed through them and a layer on top. Potatoes keep better in small heaps. There is no better place for onions than in a garret or outbuilding, where the temperature is just above the freezing point. Spread clean straw about a foot deep on the floor, and upon this place the onions eight or ten in depth, covering with two feet of straw. If the temperature of the room should fall below the freezing point the straw will keep them from freezing. But two or three light freezings will not injure onions.

Cabbage may be kept in fine condition until January by cutting off the stalks and trimming off the outer leaves, wrapping them in three or four thicknesses of newspaper and placing on a shelf in the cellar. For late winter and spring use it is best to store them outside. Bury a box or barrel in the ground in a dry situation. Trim the heads and wrap them in newspapers, put them in the barrel and spread a layer of leaves or straw on top and cover with boards so it will be waterproof. When the weather becomes colder put on a little dirt and add to it as the cold increases. Squashes and pumpkins may be kept in any dry, airy place until freezing weather, and then put in the cellar. One of the best methods of preserving squashes for winter use is to give them a coat of varnish.—Farm and Home.

BUFFALO TREE HOPPER.

A Pernicious Little Insect That Has Done Much Damage During the Past Few Years.

The buffalo tree hopper has done much injury to young orchards and other trees during the past few years, and the several inquiries sent into this office suggest this article. Ordinarily the insect is not seen, but peculiar scars are found in the bark which give the twigs a battered appearance. (See Fig. 1.) The injury is done by the insect, as shown by Fig. 2. It is a curious-looking affair which causes the injury by laying its eggs in the bark. This insect feeds by sucking the juices of the plant, so no poison is effective; but in sucking the sap they are not seriously injurious. The worst harm they do is in cutting the slits in the bark, in the doing of which they seem to poison the wood so it does not heal readily. They seldom cause any harm to large trees, but young trees may be seriously injured by them. The remedies are the removal of the eggs and by jarring the insects into oiled sheets. The mature insect is about one-third of an inch long, green in color, with brown dots. It is very shy, and quickly jumps away if frightened.—Farm and Fireside.

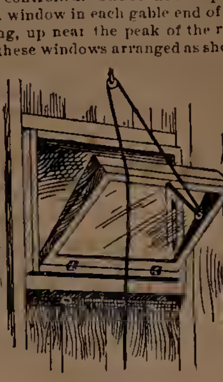
VENTILATING BARNS.

One of the Best Plans Is to Have a Window in Each Gable End of the Building.

Barns should have means of ventilation, but it should be ventilation that can be controlled. One of the best plans is by a window in each gable end of the building, up near the peak of the roof. Have these windows arranged as shown in the cut, and they can be opened and closed at will from the ground floor. The triangular pieces nailed to the sides of the sash hold up the window a little inclined inward, so that it falls open by its own weight when the cord is loosened. The same result could be obtained by the usual sash that closes to a perpendicular position, but has a second cord running from the outer end of the iron rod down to the floor. Pulling on this cord would open the window, while pulling on the pulley cord would close it, when the line could be fastened below.—N. Y. Tribune.



VENTILATING DEVICE.

"The Loss of Gold is Great;

The loss of health is more." Health is lost by neglecting to keep the blood pure, but it is regained by purifying, enriching and vitalizing the blood with the great health restorer, Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands who thought health had been permanently lost have been made perfectly well by taking this great medicine. Your experience may be the same.

THINK IT OVER. There's a reason for those pains in your back and sides, for those dull, dragging aches, that listless, "keep-away-from-me" feeling. The kidneys are to blame. They get sick, can't do their work and the whole system feels the effect, just as a whole town feels the affect of a blockaded sewerage system.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Set matters right quickly and easily. They never fail, even in the most advanced stages of kidney disease.

Mrs. C. V. Pitts, of 21 Broad street, New London, Conn., whose husband conducts a grocery store says:

"Previous to using Doan's Kidney Pills in the winter of 1896 I was greatly inconvenienced by pain and lameness across the small of my back. The treatment cured that particular attack, and I made the facts known to the people of New London through our daily papers. It is over three years since my original statement was given to the public and all I can add to it is that during the time specified I have found that a dose or two of Doan's Kidney Pills prevent recurrences."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers; price 50 cents a box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.

An Editor's Life Saved by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

During the early part of October, 1896, I contracted a bad cold which settled on my lungs and was neglected until I feared that consumption had appeared in an incipient state. I was constantly coughing and trying to expel something which I could not. I became alarmed and after giving the local doctor a trial bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the result was immediate improvement. After I had used three bottles my lungs were restored to their healthy state.—B. S. Edwards, publisher of the Review, Wyant, Ill. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Catching Rats on the Farm.

Set your steel trap in a corn-sack. Roll in the mouth of the sack until a space is left just large enough to contain the trap. The rat sees the ears of corn through the trap, and in reaching for them strikes the pedal with his nose. The trap is thus sprung so as to catch him just behind the ears, and his death is instantaneous. This is more humane than catching him by the leg and causing him to suffer all night. I have caught three successively in that way, and I believe it will prove successful in most cases. By the way, there is no surer way to rid the premises of rats than by using a sack partly filled with corn in the ear. You are sure of one about every night until they are exterminated.—Walter S. Smith, in Farm and Fireside.

The Modern Way

Commends itself to the well-informed, to do pleasantly and effectually what was formerly done in the crudest manner and disagreeably as well. To cleanse the system and break up colds, headaches and fevers without unpleasant after effects use the delightful liquid laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs. Made by California Fig Syrup Co.

Wintering Bees in Cellars.

An experiment is reported from Canada in wintering bees in which the hives were placed six inches from the floor and protected with a piece of old woolen carpet placed under the wooden cover. When placed in the cellar each colony had 30 pounds of honey, which proved more than sufficient for the winter, and all the hives wintered successfully. The temperature of the cellar, shown by a self-registering thermometer, remained steadily between 40 and 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

The Flavor of Eggs.

A vast difference exists in the flavor of eggs. Hens fed on clear, sound grain and kept on a clean grass run, give much finer product than fowls that have access to stable and manure heaps and all kinds of filthy food. Hens feeding on fish and onions flavor their eggs accordingly, just as cows eating onions or cabbage and drinking offensive water impart a bad taste to the milk and butter. The richer the food, the higher the color of the eggs. Wheat and corn give eggs the best color.—Rural World.

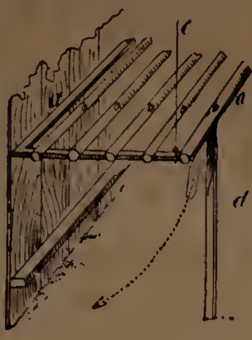
HANDY CHICKEN ROOST.

Arranged So That They Can Be Let Down When the House Is Being Cleaned.

In many poultry houses the manner in which the roosts are placed in position is a source of annoyance when time comes to clean out the house. In order to avoid the difficulty of getting around under the roosts, b, they should be placed crosswise on a frame made of about two by four-inch material, six feet wide and nearly as long as the building in which they are to be placed. Hang the frame, a, at one side to the wall by heavy strap or T-hinges and support the other side by props, d, placed under it or a couple of pieces of stout wire rope, c, hung from the roof. The roosts can then be let down out of the way when the house is being cleaned and they also can be scraped off and washed with lime, either with a brush or spray pump. If both house and roosts are whitewashed frequently the filth will be lessened. A spray pump is excellent to use for this whitewashing process.—American Agriculturist.



SWINGING ROOST.

GAPES IN CHICKENS.

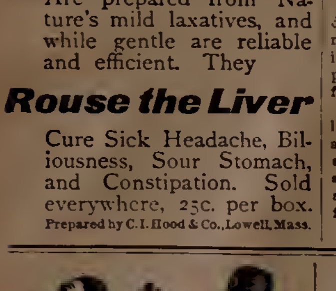
To Effect a Permanent Cure the Premises Must Be Cleared of All Angle-Worms.

As a preventive of gapes it is necessary to rid the premises of the common red or angle-worm, as their bodies are usually infected with the gape germ, says a correspondent in Fancy Fowls. Soon after the infected worm is swallowed by a chick the gape worm develops into a small red colored worm which crawls up in the throat and descends into the lower bronchial tubes, thereby closing the air passage so as to cause the patient to gape for lack of a sufficiency of air, and causing death within a short time if the chick is not relieved.

The best way to get rid of the angle worm is to scatter a quantity of strong lime all over the poultry runs or yards early every spring, and you will never have any more gapes in your flock. I have done this for the past five years and have never had any chicks infected with this malady since I began the use of lime.

Lime is also a good disinfectant and destroys other disease germs and vermin. The lime is also beneficial to laying hens, as they get a portion of it in picking up their foods as it aids in shell formation.

When you notice one of your chicks infected with gapes, if you will make a pill of gum camphor about the size of a small pea and force the patient to swallow it, immediate relief will result, as the gape worm cannot stand the fumes of camphor.



A Case of Grip

Pneumonia, Pleurisy or Bronchitis can be avoided at this season of the year by taking

Hill's Cascara Bromide Quinine

For sudden chills and colds it is well to have a box on hand to prevent a more serious climax to the attack. Will cure a cold in the head in 24 hours. Do not affect the head, produce ringing or cause nervousness like the Sulphate Quinine. They move the bowels gently without griping.

The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.

The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and mention this paper.

Green Bones for the Hens.

A mess of green bones at least twice a week will always prove beneficial, as they provide lime for the shells and serve as a change. Some do not believe in feeding grain at all in the summer season, preferring to allow the hens to work. A pound of green bone cut with a bone cutter, twice or three times a week, given to a dozen hens at night is better than feeding grain, as the hens nearly always come up with full crops when they are on the range. When in confinement in late fall or winter the green bone will continue to be of valuable assistance.—Farm and Fireside

Ducks Have Few Diseases.

The duck is afflicted with but few diseases, the most prominent being vertigo and convulsions. The first comes from overfeeding, and can only be cured or prevented by keeping them on a grass diet exclusively. Convulsions are caused by dampness, poor food, filthy coops and lice. The best remedy is to clean out the coops, make them dry and feed on nourishing food. Ducks should always have dry quarters at night. Lice seldom exist on ducks, and when the quarters are very filthy the vermin will sometimes put in an appearance.—Farm and Fireside.

Every one now has got plenty of water, and the water famine which seemed certain a few months ago all over New England has been averted. We have been most fortunate in this respect in having an open winter, for had it been a severe season of snow and low temperature a water famine would have resulted. But the storms have mostly occurred when the temperature was such as to cause rain, and the wells, rivers and ponds have filled up.

The presentation speech was very ably made by Walter P. Hutchinson, a member of the class. The doctor has just completed his service as house physician to out patients and now becomes the senior house physician.

There is a bill before the legislature asking for an increase in the salary of the judge and clerk of the district court here, the former to $1,500 from $1000, and the latter to $750 from $500. Since it is a well known fact that this court is administered by Judge Doe in a thoroughly business-like manner, and all unnecessary expenses are judiciously cut off, it does not seem unfair that the salary paid here be made equal to that in other courts of this size and business. He has had the satisfaction, also, of having his decisions uniformly sustained in the higher courts, which is naturally a source of gratification to himself and his friends. Prof. Burrington has the bill in charge.

The original of the Catholic church was the old Congregational church, built in 1788. During the time it was owned by that society, in 1840, it was moved 80 feet further north to the present site and modernized. The last Congregational service in it was held Dec 31, 1871, after which it was delivered to the Catholic parish. The first resident Catholic pastor was Rev. J. Griffin, in 1877. Since then extensive improvements have been made to both the church and surrounding grounds. It was the only church edifice in town until 1857. At the extensive repairs in 1840 several people secured relics of the old church in the shape of posts, pillars or other parts, and which even now adorn various residences in the village.

A number of Franklinites attended the Masonic ball in Sanford hall, Medway, Tuesday evening under the auspices of Charles River lodge, A. F. and A. M. It was a decided success and one of the swellest affairs ever held in town. The grand march occurred at 9 o'clock and was led by Hon. and Mrs. Clarke P. Harding, fifty couples participating. The floor was in charge of Hon. C. P. Harding, with the following as aids; A. E. Bullard, H. A. Hixon, G. M. Harding, S. A. Greenwood, Dr. C. F. Hamlin, W. B. Temple. Dancing was enjoyed from 9.30 until 12, when an intermission occurred, during which an elaborate supper was served in the hall above. Then dancing was resumed and kept up until 2 o'clock. The hall had been beautifully decorated during the day by members of the Quinobequin chapter, O. E. S., and the music was furnished by Knowlton & Allen's orchestra of Natick.

Died in Lebanon, N. H., Jan. 29, 1900, at the home of her adopted daughter, Mrs. Dr. Smith, Mrs. Martha Warren Southworth, widow of Rev. T. D Southworth, pastor of the Congregational church here from 1838 to 1850. She was only eighteen when she came to town as a bride, bright and attractive to the conservative people of Franklin. She still holds a warm place in the hearts of old friends. She has been in failing health for two years or more. The letter says "In her weakness she was a tower of strength, the same keen, bright mind to the last. Her life was a wonderful reflection of the Master's. She magnified every joy and kept sorrow far in the background. Her influence permeated our whole community. Hers was a beautiful, tranquil life, growing sweeter till the last." She was laid beside her husband in Bridgewater, N. Y.

The Dean gymnasium was crowded last Saturday evening to enjoy the double bill of fare provided by the presence of basket ball teams from Milford and Melrose, the latter to tackle Dean's heaviest team. The visitors came here with the reputation of not having lost a game and the way they played indicated that. They were adepts and no mistake, and showed not a little fine work in dribbling the ball and scoring. They were not so effective in the latter half in holding Dean down, but went away with a good score in their favor, 18 to 4. The Dean team was composed of Jennings, Bucknam, Marshal, Thompson and Nowell. Dean second was more evenly matched and kept the interest right up. It was composed of Williams, Sweatt, Bicknell, Baker and Towles. They did some excellent floor as well as well as basket work and held the game well in hand from the start They did up their opponents 16 to 5, and everybody got their money's worth and more.

Rev. F. B. Sleeper gave the first sermon, last Sunday evening at the Baptist church, in his series on "The Prodigal Son." His theme was "The Blessings of a Good Home." He dwelt on four important characteristics: The Bible, pure and undefiled religion, Christian patience and love, and proper amusements. Without these home is a place of danger rather than of safety. Many a boy has become a prodigal, and some never to return, because anger and discord have ruled in the home. A high-sounding and rigid orthodoxy is not always productive of peace and happiness. The bitter, stinging word from the lips of Christian father or mother is never forgotten by the boy or girl. Home, so far as possible, should be heaven's paradise on earth, where the gospel of love abounds, and the sunshine of pure amusements is found. They that shape divinely the destiny of the children are ruling the future generation for their highest good. The following discourses given Sunday evenings will be "The Temptations," "The Return to the Father's House," "The Elder Son."

Alden Club Meeting.

A regular meeting of the Alden club was held on Feb. 12, Mrs. Wiggin presiding. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The program of the convention of the State Federation, to be held at Charlestown, was read and notice given that tickets could be obtained at the desk. It was moved and seconded that a delegate be sent to the convention, and Miss King was elected delegate. Mrs. Wiggin spoke of the next meeting, reminding the club that it would be an open meeting, held at Dean academy, and urging each member to assist in the sale of tickets. Club members were asked to present their membership tickets on that occasion.

Miss Hodge then took charge of the meeting and called for current events. Mrs. Batchelor responded with an article on automobiles and Miss Briggs with an account of the danger menacing England at home. Miss Hodge then presented her interesting subject, "Rudyard Kipling," telling something of his ancestry, education and early struggle for recognition by the literary world. His name is a romantic one, being that of the lake where his father and mother first met. The young author after leaving India with a collection of his writings, and failing recognition in San Francisco and New York, finally became famous in London, having been successfully introduced through an interesting interview published in one of the papers.

Miss Hodge spoke of him both as a prose writer and as a poet, mentioning many of his works and laying especial stress upon his keen appreciation and understanding of widely different characters and types, and of his great versatility, shown largely in his poems. "The Man Who Was," his best short story, was well presented by Mrs. Daniels, who read portions of the sketch and gave a clear idea of the remainder.

Miss Crocker sang "On the Road to Mandelay," and Mrs. Stewart sang his famous "Recessional." Mrs. Daniels then read "The Absent Minded Beggar" in a most pleasing manner, after which the usual social half-hour was enjoyed and the meeting was adjourned. R.

Looks Like the New Road.

It is unofficially given out that the board of selectmen are a unit in favor of granting the franchise for the electric road between here and Medway direct, feeling that it would be impossible for them to do otherwise in view of the absolute unanimity on the part of the voters, as expressed at the hearing on Monday evening, together with the fact so large a proportion of the citizens are in favor of the project. It is not unlikely that the board will take some action this evening which will result in their granting a franchise which would be perfectly equitable to the town and to the company as well, taking the town's interests into consideration first. They are at present looking into the legal aspects of the case, and they consider that the law expressly states that a franchise "shall" be granted under such conditions as obtain here. Therefore they feel it their duty to carry out the manifest wishes of the voters in the matter.

Take Your Choice for Selectmen.

MR. EDITOR:—I have given the matter considerable thought, and would like to present the following names for candidates for selectman for the coming year. The interest in the new electric road seems to overshadow everything else, and these men are selected without regard to their politics. I trust the voters will think this matter over, and if any set of names seem appropriate, I understand they may be placed upon the ticket which the town committees prepare by securing the signatures of a sufficient number of persons. They are as follows: The present board, J. C. Gallison, H. W. Hosie, Alfred Clark; O. S. Stetson, O. B. Carter, T. B. Allen, H. E. Ruggles, B. M. Rockwood, H. R. Jenks, George W. Emerson, A. Farrington, Charles E. Whiting, W. M. Fisher, T. L. Martin, F. P. Chapman, C. J. McKenzie, A. B. Palmer, G. H. Grant, F. M. Richardson, G. H. Ellis, H. A. Talbot, R. Sommers, L. W. Daniels, J. J. McCarthy, W. E. Pond.

Farmers' Club.

Franklin Farmers' club met Monday evening, Feb. 12, with J. L. Fisher, City Mills. The next meeting will be with D. C. Coates, Pond street. The president called on Mr. Fisher to open the meeting. Mr. Fisher introduced J. W. Stockwell, the secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, as the speaker of the evening.

Mr. Stockwell read a very fine paper on the tax question and how it has affected the farmer, and he gave some encouraging word that the tax question would be eventually settled right and the farmer would not have to help pay the rich man's tax. The single tax as it is now agitated he thinks practically impossible, as in the carrying out of the single tax all our farm lands would have to be given up or confiscated. His statistics showed that there was from twelve to fifteen hundred millions of personal property in the state of Massachusetts that was not taxed. If this could be reached and pay its tax it would be a great help to the farmers. He predicts that in the near future New England farmers will enter upon a much more prosperous time and that farmers and farm land will again be in the ascendancy.

After the adjournment there were dialogues, readings, refreshments and games. D.

The Best of the Season.

A romantic military drama is what Edward E. Kidder calls "Shannon of the Sixth." The Sepoy rebellion of 1857 furnishes the ground work of the story; and Occultism, that mysterious belief of far-off India, is touched upon in a highly interesting manner. Lieutenant Larry Shannon, of the Sixth Carbineers, is the leading character of the drama. He is falsely accused of stealing a diamond of great value known as "The Light of Heaven," from the Temple of the Moon. Its guardian is an ancient Brahmin priest, named Ram Koorah, and it is taken from the forehead of an idol by a British officer. Its pursuit and recovery form one of the strong motives of the play. Suradda, a Hindoo woman, and Umbollo, the dumb man of Allahabad, are also closely connected with the fate of the jewel; and the scene where the aged priest brings the crime home to the despoiler is dramatic to the highest degree. The comedy element of the play occupies a large portion of the action, and is in the author's brightest vein. A cowardly German is principal fun-maker, and is ably seconded by Mrs. Clingstone Carr, the "regimental widow," and Hally Tate, the sprightly niece of General Kimber, commanding at Delhi. Lieutenant Shannon, the part played by W. H. Power, is taken from the military history of British India; his prototype being known as the Hero of Cashmere Gate. This will be all at the Opera house next Tuesday evening.

Interesting Church Statistics.

According to the New York Independent's annual table of statistics of the churches in the year 1899 the number of ministers in the United States was 153,901, of churches 187,803, and of members 27,710,004. The membership increased during the year about one per cent., the increase in the number of ministers was nearly three per cent., and the number of churches increased by 421.

The Christian churches with a membership exceeding half a million are these:

	Ministers.	Churches.	Membership.
Roman Catholic	11,144	11,594	8,446,301
Methodists	36,424	53,023	5,809,516
Baptists	33,088	49,721	4,443,628
Lutherans	6,685	10,991	1,575,778
Presbyterians	12,073	14,831	1,560,847
Disciples of Christ	6,339	10,298	1,118,396
Episcopalians	4,981	6,623	709,325

Reformed	1,897	2,440	365,075
United Brethren	2,529	4,965	264,980

Of these churches the greatest proportionate gain in membership was made by the Congregationalists and the Disciples of Christ, or 3 per cent. each; the Lutherans, 2 6 per cent.; the Baptists, 2 per cent.; the Episcopalians, 1.5 per cent.; the Presbyterians, 1.2 per cent.; the Roman Catholics, six-tenths of 1 per cent.; and the Methodists, five tenths of 1 per cent. The United Brethren lost 7 per cent., and the Reformed 14 per cent. Of the churches not named in this list the Reformed Catholics increased from a total of 1,000 in 1898 to 1,500 in 1899. The church of the New Jerusalem, or Swedenborgians, increased 11 per cent., adding 860 members and making the total 7,562. The Latter Day Saints, or Mormons, increased slightly to 343,000. The Unitarians made no gain, claiming 75,000 only, and the Universalists fell off 3.7 per cent. Of the minor denominations, the Christian Scientists returned a total of 80,000 members, being a gain of 14 per cent. during the year; the Spiritualists, 45,030 and no gain, and the Theosophists 3,000, and no gain. In the Independent's table are returns from 49 distinct religious denominations, with sub-divisions aggregating 111.

ROOSEVELT will not be vice president, and an exchange says he would "smother in the office." That's why they want to put some other man there.

WE didn't suppose that Smith college kept its pupils confined very closely, but now that the institution is wrestling with the measles many of the girls have "broken out."

NEW YORK'S 400 must have felt flattered to have Mrs. Langtry's "tea" such a success. When such women lead society small wonder is it that society is decayed to the core and at the core.

COMMUTERS on the suburban New York trains are to have "club" cars, so they can play cards, order drinks, etc. It's getting so a person can have anything he wants if he is willing to pay for it. But he ought not to want what he ought not to have.

J. D ARCHBOLD, vice president of the Standard Oil, says that "every healthy, intelligent man can win success if he will school himself to industry and economy." That's what a man will have to do if the Trust puts up the price of kerosene much higher.

ONE of our leading Massachusetts ministers has requested the ladies of his congregation to remove their hats during service. If Christian ladies, who are not supposed to go to church to show off their finery, won't have regard for those who sit behind them, what ladies will?

JUDGE TAFT of Gloucester is on the rack and efforts are being made to have him ousted. If reports are true he ought to be. But why didn't he issue an injunction restraining his opponents from interfering with him. That's the way judges uphold the "dignity" of their office now-a days.

SENATOR HANNA had a candidate for lady commissioner to the Paris exposition and so did Senator Depew, the appointment to be made by the president. Hanna won, of course, and Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago is the fortunate lady. She will make a good official, though she doubtless recognizes the advantage of having "a friend at court."

THE town of Columbus, Kan., has been sued by a lady resident for $15,000, alleging that the town in permitting liquor to be sold in violation of law is responsible for the drunkenness of her husband. She ought to win, but probably will not, as such a precedent would send a note of alarm throughout the country which would scare incompetent and winking officials out of office.

THE Nicaragua canal is now under discussion, with varying opinions as to the expediency of the United States building it and then throwing it open to all nations in peace or war, without fortifying it. Whatever may be the outcome this country will not long remain content to have water communication with California by way of the Horn. The passage of the Oregon settled that.

JOHN I. BLAIR, the New Jersey millionaire, was credited with being worth forty millions. He died and was found to be worth but five. Whatever he may have been rated here, it is a pleasant thought that no man gets into the next world except upon his true rating. We rather think that the Lord will scan Rockefeller's benefactions and highly advertised "charities" rather closely to see if there hasn't been extortion toward widows and orphans practiced in the amassing of wealth.

THE W. C. T. U., representing 300,000 persons, has appealed to President McKinley to right the "canteen" wrong, but he asserts that the decision of Attorney General Griggs is final. When such a righteous law is given such an unrighteous and apparently erroneous interpretation it is time the Prohibitionists elected an attorney general, if no other official. President McKinley says that congress did not speak in sufficiently explicit terms. Can any law be passed that the liquor power, backed by such an attorney general, cannot override.

Flood Gate That Answers Very Nicely for Fencing Across Creeks and Their Branches.

In this part of the country we have a great many creeks and small branches. All the fences have to be hog tight, and the water gaps have to be closed. I have found the flood gate shown in the accompanying illustration answers very nicely for fencing across these creeks. To the posts on either side, which may be growing trees, attach No. 9 wire, as shown in the engraving, and stretch it tight. Secure two crosspieces, aa, and then select boards of the proper length to fit the curvature of the bed. Nail these on and then attach the uprights provided for that purpose. Suspend from the cross-wire, as shown in the illustration. This makes a very desirable flood gate, and one that will not be carried away in time of freshet. The crosspieces should be 2x4 scantling, and the boards used for uprights may be ordinary fencing planks sawed to the proper length. They should be made of pine from the fact that this is much lighter than hard wood.—Orange Judd Farmer.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

NEW PAVING MATERIAL.

Oakland, Cal., Is Trying an Experiment with Asphalt and Redwood Blocks Combined.

Fifteen or twenty years ago a good deal was heard of wood pavements for streets. They were quiet and smooth and fairly well suited to the residence districts of a city, but did not stand the wear and tear of heavy traffic very well. Then, when the blocks became worn and rotten, as they did, they absorbed disease germs and lessened the salubrity of the neighborhood. Of late wood pavements have gone out of fashion almost entirely. Something new in this line is now reported from Oakland, Cal., however, and it may prove so successful as to revolutionize the ideas of civil and sanitary engineers.

In Oakland the wear and tear comes on a layer of asphalt which covers the wood and not directly on the latter. The blocks are six inches square and four inches deep. They are laid on a bed of concrete, after having been soaked in hot asphalt. A mixture of hard asphalt and California liquid asphalt, in equal parts, raised to a temperature of between 350 and 400 degrees Fahrenheit, is employed. The interval during which immersion lasts is from three to five minutes. This treatment renders the blocks waterproof. They are then laid from curbstone to curbstone.

A mixture of asphalt and carbonate of lime is beated and poured upon the wood pavement. This is so soft a liquid that it runs down into all the interstices, and even works its way under the wood, if there are any holes there. Not until the fluid has been poured on three successive times is the surface properly covered and the spaces between the blocks well filled. Sand to the depth of a quarter of an inch is rolled into the asphalt when the last application has been made of the latter. The carpet thus formed has so hard a surface that it withstands ordinary light traffic for two or three years. It can be renewed at an expense of less than half a cent per square foot. Renewal seems to be necessary where redwood is used, but hard wood can remain bare for a longer time without injury.—N. Y. Tribune.

You Can't Dodge Them

Did you ever try to dodge the rain-drops? Did not succeed very well, did you? It's just as useless to try to escape from the germs of consumption. You can't do it. They are about us on every hand and we are constantly taking them into our lungs.

Then why don't we all have this disease? Simply because these germs cannot gain a foothold in a strong throat and lungs. It's when these are weak that the germs master.

TAMING A DEADBEAT.

Justice Who Was Governed More by Equity Than by Law.

How He Forced a Dishonorable Debtor to Liquidate a Grocery Bill Which Had Been Running for a Number of Years.

"Old Squire Rodgers," as every person called him, was, according to the Pittsburgh Press, one of those magistrates who set aside the law when it got in the way of justice. The only law books he had about his office were "Small's Legislative Hand-Book," and the "Hagerstown Almanac." He once broke all precedents by collecting a debt from a dishonest man who put in a plea that the claim was barred by the statute of limitations.

The defendant owed $27 to a grocer, an easy-going man who carried the debt on his books for several years without making any effort to collect it. He died and left his family little but a lot of outlawed accounts. His widow turned the books over to Squire Rodgers and he came across this $27 debt. He knew the man who owed it could pay it if he would, and he issued a summons for him. Knowing that the debt was outlawed the fellow paid no attention to the summons and the squire sent his constable after him with orders to fetch him to the office at all costs. He was brought before the squire and a hearing was opened.

"Did you get these goods?" the squire asked him after proof of the debt had been taken.

"Yes, sir, but—"

"Did you eat them?"

"I suppose I did, but—"

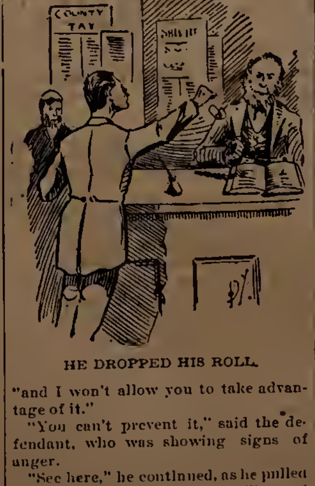
"That will do, sir," said the squire. "Judgment for the plaintiff for the full amount of the claim with interest."

"I won't pay it," declared the fellow.

"But you ate these goods and you've got to pay it," retorted the squire.

"I'll take advantage of the statute of limitations," the defendant asserted.

"The statute of limitations was never intended for such contemptible scoundrels as you, sir," thundered the squire,



HE DROPPED HIS ROLL.

"and I won't allow you to take advantage of it."

"You can't prevent it," said the defendant, who was showing signs of anger.

"See here," he continued, as he pulled out of his pocket a roll of bills and waved it over the squire's desk, "there's more than enough in there to pay the bill, but you won't get a dollar of it."

In his excitement the roll slipped from his fingers and fell upon the desk. The squire grabbed it. He put it in his trousers pocket, ignoring the threats and protests of the other man, and he calmly took a blank from a case back of him and began to fill it out. Then he gave it to his constable and ordered him to serve it without delay. It was an attachment the squire had issued on himself, garnisheeing the money in his possession belonging to the man who was roaring and tearing his hair in front of him. After the attachment was served he went through the formality of paying the money to the "court," which was himself, to be held for final decree. Then he proceeded to consider the matter of distributing the money in the hands of the court. The first claim he passed upon was the widow's. He paid her in full and satisfied the judgment he had given a few minutes before. Then he assessed his own costs and the constable's, including the expenses of the attachment. After these items were paid he handed the balance to the man who owned it.

"I won't accept it," he shouted; "this is downright robbery!"

"You are guilty of contempt of court, sir," said the squire, "and I fine you five dollars."

He stripped a bill off the diminished roll. Then the enraged man lost entire control of himself and began to swear. The squire picked up a pen and kept tally until the outburst of profanity ceased.

"Nine profane oaths," said the squire, counting the score, "at 67½ cents per oath, makes $6.08."

He took two more bills off the roll and changed one of them.

"I'll appeal to court," the worsted man said as he took the small amount of money left in his roll and departed.

Hubby No. 2 Needed Shirts.

A lady in deep mourning some time ago called upon the proprietor of a Sydney waxworks show and asked to be allowed every Sunday morning to place a clean shirt on the figure of her husband (who had been hanged for murder). Her request was granted, and for close on six months she never missed a Sunday. Then the visits ceased, and no more was seen of the eccentric visitor, until one day the waxworks man was standing at his door, when she came along in gay apparel and explained that, as she had married again, hubby No. 2 objected to the little hebdomadal ceremony over No. 1.

COLD STORAGE EGGS.

They Are Good Enough for Ordinary Purposes, But Not Up to Fresh Laid Ones.

Cold storage of eggs opens opportunities for sales that would not otherwise be afforded. Objections may be made to them by some, but they are nevertheless a necessity at the present time, as they relieve the market of the surplus during certain seasons when the supply of eggs and poultry is unlimited. The eggs are kept at a temperature just above the freezing point, the object being not to allow them to become frozen, and at the same time to keep them in a condition which prevents any changes. The main objection to the system is that the eggs are sold as "fresh laid," which is an imposition on the purchaser, and there seems no way to overcome the difficulty. There should be a law compelling those who subject eggs and poultry to the cold storage process to label or mark them in such a manner as to make the fact known, the same as is done with bogus butter. If anyone wishes to purchase cold storage materials the right to do so should not be denied them, but to sell cold storage eggs as "fresh laid" is a fraud and imposition. When poultry is kept by the cold storage process decomposition begins as soon as the low temperature is removed, and the meat becomes flabby. Any person who has compared such poultry with that which is fresh can easily detect the difference, but the great army of buyers are ignorant of the fact that to a certain extent cold storage destroys the quality, and they willingly buy an article that has been preserved by cold storage, believing it to be strictly fresh, although they would not do so if they were informed of the facts by proper labels or marks.—Farm and Fireside.

RANGE FOR TURKEYS.

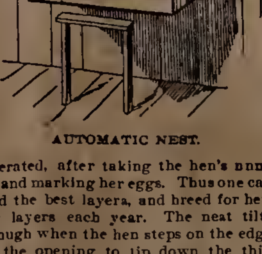
The Birds Should Not Be Confined, Except a Few Weeks Before They Are to Be Sold.

The turkey is a fowl that has been least time domesticated by man. The Indians never tried to tame them, and it is considerably less than 300 years since any attempt was made to domesticate this bird. One result of the wild nature of the turkey is that it will not bear to be confined. Even the domestic hen will not be so good a mother to the turkeys in their later stages as the turkey hen. She will take long jaunts in the fields catching grasshoppers and other insects, and when frost loosens the beechnuts on the trees the turkey hen will take her brood to the woods and live on what was in their wild state the main feed of the turkey during winter. A beechnut diet gives the turkey a better flavor than any other food. Buckwheat, which is an angular grain like the beechnut, is, perhaps, the next best grain for turkeys, but it lacks the oil with which the beechnut abounds. When turkeys are put up to fatten, which is the only time they should be confined, it is worth while to mix a few beechnuts with their feed. This will keep the other food from caking in their crops, and enable the turkey to fatten faster, besides improving the flavor of their flesh. To have good flavored meat the turkeys must be kept from indigestion, which always creates fever. For this reason the fattening of turkeys must usually be completed in ten days to two weeks after they have been confined in a dark place where they can do nothing but eat.—American Cultivator.

AN AUTOMATIC NEST.

It Acts Somewhat Like the Cash Registers to Be Seen in Many City Stores.

The cut shows a nest for confining each hen as she goes on to lay. Several times a day the nests can be examined and those hens which have laid can be liberated, after taking the hen's number and marking her eggs. Thus one can find the best layers, and breed for better layers each year. The nest tilts enough when the hen steps on the edge of the opening to tip down the thin door that will shut her in. The wedge behind slips down and holds the nest firm, so it will not rock back and forth. —Orange Judd Farmer.



AUTOMATIC NEST.

Killing Off Young Roosters.

The great plague of the beginner in poultry, whose object is to produce the greatest number of eggs, is the large proportion of non-layers that are found in every flock that were spring hatched. It is, we think, the rule that later hatches have a still larger proportion of cockerels. But be they few or many, all except the one or two that are to be kept for breeders should be killed and marketed when of broiler size. Their sex can then be determined easily by anyone used to poultry, and in the late summer the broiler will sell for eating for as much money as it would bring when fully grown, besides saving the feed and care required to keep until that time.—American Cultivator.

"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Young America Abroad.

Among the crowd of fashionable folk in Rotten row stood little Lois with her mother, eagerly watching the coming of the royal equipage—for the rumor had gone abroad that her majesty would drive in Hyde Park that day.

"Mother, if the queen sees me will she speak to me?" asked little Lois.

"Oh, no, dear."

"Why, mother? Is the queen so shy?" —Judge.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remidies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1 00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at A. C. Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska.

A Comparison.

"You use a great many words that don't mean anything," said the political talker's manager.

"Did you ever take note of the bell ringing and steam puffing and general racket that occurs when an engine pulls out of the depot?"

"Yes."

"Well, that's how it is with me. It takes a lot of noise to get my train of thought started, but once under way I defy anybody to stop it."—Washington Star.

His Offense.

Convict—Yes; an overissue of the bonds o' matrimony.—Puck.

PIG-PEN POINTERS.

For a hog-pasture nothing equals a clover field.

Pigs need little or no bedding in summer; a dry, shady knoll is far better than a board straw bed.

It is quite a remarkable fact that the bite of a pig is dangerous; although comparatively rare, it takes a much longer time for such injuries to heal, than those of the horse or dog. Keep a safe distance between yourself and a cross hog.

Did you ever notice the little knots of worms in a hog's intestines at slaughtering time? Well, 15 drops of turpentine would rid the hog of the long stringy worms, and two ounces of quassia-chips in a pint of boiling water, injected, when cool, would kill the shorter ones.—Midland Farmer.

The Messrs. Whiting and their wives leave this week for New Orleans, Florida and Nassau.

It is understood that some of Franklin's capitalists are interested in the recent purchase of the Slatersville mill property.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Rathbun are spending a few days at the Adirondacks, where Chester E. Smith is spending the winter for his health.

The bans of marriage between Peter Emsum and Miss Catherine Kearns were published at the 10.45 mass in the Opera house on Sunday.

An interesting article, from the pen of Rev. F. B. Sleeper, entitled "A Theological Explosion," appeared in the Christian Herald last week.

Mrs. G. A. Martin is interested in the "Sportsman show," which opens in Boston this week, and will have charge of some of the exhibits there.

There are 21 ladies registered as qualified to vote for school committee. The registration of voters will close Saturday evening, Feb. 24, at 10 p. m.

Walpole is considering the matter of an electric fire alarm system and has made some investigations at Franklin in regard to the system used here.

The Mothers' meeting will be held at Mrs. C. B. Johnson's on Friday afternoon, the subject being "The Law of Compensation," by Mrs. E. D. Daniels.

The grange will hold its regular meeting in Central Square hall on Thursday evening, when the district deputy will be present and the third and fourth degrees will be worked.

The regular meeting of the Y. P. C. U. will be Friday evening next. The committee in charge have a most pleasing programme in store. Everybody is cordially invited. All will feel repaid for coming.

As an illustration of the appreciation of our public library, over 611 persons patronized it last year, 10,265 books being taken out. This is an increase of 32 persons and 812 books over the record of last year.

Manager Partridge went to Hyde Park last evening to see the production of "Shannon of the Sixth," and pronounces it one of the finest of the kind he ever saw. The Opera house ought to be packed this evening.

Owing to the unsafe condition of the church building, the parishioners of St. Mary's attended mass at the Opera house on Sunday. Two masses were celebrated, at 9 and 10.45 a. m., Rev. Father Lee and Rev. Father Sullivan officiating.

Tomorrow night, at 7.45, the largest audience ever assembled in Morse Opera house will gaze in open mouthed wonder upon the array of beauty, yearning for expression, which will fill the stage. Oh, ye Franklin swains, can ye not be tempted thence?

The supper and entertainment at the Congregational church last Wednesday evening was an unqualified success, the diners appearing in such large numbers as almost to overwhelm the producers. In fact, the supply hardly equalled the demand. A generous sum was netted.

By a change in organization Hon. Joseph G. Ray has been elected president of the American Felt Co., and William H. Sweatt vice president. The former president, vice president and secretary have sold their stock and retired from the company. It was capitalized at $5,000,000.

The friends of Composer B E. Leavitt, who put on "The Frogs" and other plays here, will be pleased to learn that "Bell Rock," the new comic opera, by N. W. and B. E. Leavitt, received its first presentation on Tuesday evening, at the Broadway theatre, Norwich, Conn. The local press speak highly of the work and its production. The cast comprised 125 people.

A short time ago we noted the suit of the Rubber trust against George H. Hood, formerly interested in Franklin, but now of Watertown. This suit promises to have two very important and far-reaching sides to it. We learn also that Mr. Hood has secured A. B. Fletcher, Esq., of New York and Franklin as his counsel, and speaker J. J. Myers of the Massachusetts House of Representatives as his Boston lawyer.

There is unusual interest in the meeting of the Norfolk Christian Endeavor union at Walpole on Thursday, as excellent accommodations are to be had for getting there and returning. Quite a number of the Franklin Endeavorers are planning to go either afternoon or evening. All who have badges are requested to wear them, and those not so provided can secure them of Miss Lovering.

The corporation of the "King's Daughters and Sons for the Norfolk County Home for the Aged have not decided upon a location. Two members of the board of trustees visited Foxboro Feb. 12 to look at a fine old mansion there offered for sale. Nothing has been decided upon. It was thought at one time that the home might be located here and hopes are still entertained that this may be brought about.

It has been noticed that on the nights previous to the sitting of the police court here few tramps apply for lodging at the police station, but the nights before the court holds its session at Walpole the number of lodgers is very much larger. The court alternates between Franklin and Walpole and the fraternity seem to have recognized the fact that it is more trouble and expense to take them to court at Walpole than to invite them upstairs here.

One of the most punctual and seldom absent pupils in one of the schools did not find his name in the SENTINEL the other day, and feels naturally not a little disturbed over it. He is one of the scholars transported in a barge, and was on time the other morning, but the barge was not. Consequently all in the barge were late for school. They were all marked tardy, and they felt as if that stigma ought not to rest upon them. We think so, too.

The Republicans will hold their caucus in Music hall on Friday evening and the Democrats will join with the Citizens in a caucus in the town hall upon the same evening. There was a general impression abroad that the nominees of either party to have support at the polls would be the ones who were known to be friendly to the new electric road, but the action of the present board of selectmen in putting the matter through during their incumbency will make a rigid scrutiny of the ticket less probable.

Dean's basket ball team will play at the "Sportsman's show" in Boston on Saturday, and in the evening will play the Winchester Y. M. C. A. here. A rattling good game is expected. These games at Dean have been well sustained and the team is deserving of the excellent support it is receiving. Prof. Arnold, who looks after the athletic interests, is determined that the school shall take a meritorious stand in that matter in comparison with other institutions of similar character.

The storm which started on Saturday afternoon developed into the fiercest storm of the winter, almost preventing service at the churches on Sunday, though a few faithful ones of each denomination turned out. The snow fell from eight inches to a foot, though not uniformly; drifting quite badly. The snow plow on the electric line began work Sunday evening, no cars being run during the day, and by Monday morning they were running, though not regularly till noon. Telephone, telegraph and electric light wires were interfered with but little.

The Alden club will present to the public an exceptionally fine meeting next Monday evening to be given in Dean academy chapel through the courtesy of Prof. Peirce. The subject of the evening will be "Negro Slave Songs and Plantation Folk Lore," by Jeannette Robinson Murphy, a Southern lady well known in literary clubs and circles. Will not the people of Franklin show their interest in the Alden club as well as in a fine entertainment seldom given in country towns? Members are requested to present their membership tickets at the door.

H. A. Worthley, proprietor of the New Central hotel, and his clerk, Pearson H. Shattuck, were up before Judge Doe in the district court this morning charged with illegal keeping of liquor. A. H. Martin represented the state and H. E. Ruggles the defense. Officer Nickerson, J. H. Tyler, F. P. Martin of Boston and A. J. Gilmore appeared as witnesses. Messrs. Gilmore and Tyler denied that they ever procured any liquor there, but Mr. Martin admitted that he had upon several occasions. Both defendants swore that there had never been any liquor about the place. The case was adjourned till 3 this afternoon and is now on.

The lecture on "Egypt," by Mr. Bunker, in the Universalist church last evening was exceedingly interesting, and the views he showed were remarkably clear and illustrative. The speaker has a very easy stage manner, goes right to the heart of his subject, and compels attention throughout. He showed the various types of character one meets in travel there, gave many historical facts relating to this ancient land, taking his hearers back to an almost incomprehensible time. Their customs, costumes, manners, modes of living, places of worship, etc., were all clearly portrayed, making one feel quite well acquainted with these people who hold direct connection with ante-Biblical times. He showed that some of the discoveries there strangely bear out facts given in the Bible. The interest was maintained throughout and everyone felt amply repaid for coming out. He should have been given a wider hearing.

Which Do You Prefer?

You may urge that liquor is sold in town to a certain extent in spite of no-license, and that "prohibition does not prohibit." Granted, but the town is free from the open saloon, a drunken man is the exception except late at night and then he keeps off the main streets, liquor cannot be bought openly, nor sold except secretly by men who are traitors to law, good order and self esteem. No-license simply means that the town will not legally, and therefore knowingly, permit a liquor nuisance to be placed next to your door, with its hellish influences thrown about your children. You guard them carefully at home, why not upon the street?

In a word, why will you vote to curse yourself and your neighbor with that which has never been other than a curse to everyone who has in any way been connected with the sale or use of intoxicants? Think it over.

A Notable Issue.

There is throughout the entire country a great deal of interest in the proposed issue of the Topeka (Kan.) Capital, which is for six days to be in charge of Rev. Charles Sheldon, author of "What Would Jesus Do?" Commencing with the issue of March 13 he is to have entire charge of the paper, as if the actual owner, and the Christians and unbelievers are making their predictions as to the success of the experiment. The paper is supposed to be run for that period as nearly as possible upon the lines that Mr. Sheldon supposes the Master would have it conducted, as to matter, editorials, advertisements etc. Everything that goes into the paper will be closely scanned with that idea in mind. Such a thing has never before been attempted, though many publishers have worked within certain limits along those lines. A number from here have already subscribed for that special issue, and others can have the paper sent to their address for that period by conferring with Charles L. Stewart, the price being 25 cents for the six issues.

Declines Further Honors.

To the Voters of Franklin:

As the time is at hand for selection of candidates for the annual March meeting, I wish to give notice that I am not a candidate for any town office and must positively refuse further official honors at this time. I wish to thank the citizens of Franklin for their liberal support the past two years.

Your obedient servant,
HORACE W. HOSIE.

Inspiring Words.

Every young man in town should have heard Rev. Mr. Albion's earnest words at the Founders' day exercises at Dean academy on Friday, as they were so filled with useful thought and helpful ideas that they must have carried weight and conviction to everyone who listened. Preceding the address the semi annual meeting of the trustees was held in the academy office.

At 2.30 the exercises proper commenced, with an exceedingly well rendered piano selection by Miss Helen Tappan, followed by prayer by Rev. Dr. Capen of Tufts college. Miss Mabel Goddard then sang the "Slumber Song," with great acceptance. Following the address Miss Voltmann sang three selections with rare taste and expression, making it a treat to listen.

The address by Rev. Mr. Albion was upon "The Ultimate Aim of Education." He first paid a graceful tribute to those whose names were so closely associated with Franklin, Dr. Emmons, Horace Mann and Dr. Dean. The Christian church has ever been found the patron of education. Why is it that we are giving millions to further the cause of education. We lead all nations in the amount per capita which we spend for that cause. France spends $4 on her army and only 70 cents for education; England $3.72 for her army and 62 cents for education; Prussia $2.04 and 50 cents; Italy $1.52 and 36 cents; Austria $1.36 and 62 cents; Russia $2.04 on her army and 3 cents for education, while the United States reverses the expense and spends 38 cents for her army and more than three times as much for education.

Education is the most important of human interests. It commences with the first cry of the infant, and develops through memory, observation, judgment and reflection. Different nations regard education differently. Sparta sought for physical courage, Athens to know beauty and truth, Jerusalem to be learned in the law; others sought for spiritual development. The true idea is to turn latency into potency, possibilities into powers. Our greatest school is outside of all schools. We need to know where to look for knowledge of facts.

Education is not simply a storing of facts. Its purpose is to dispel ignorance, which is the source of crime, poverty, disease and unhappiness. The ignorant man is the tool of the stronger mind. Ignorance makes social reform impossible. The dollar means the power back of it. There are three kinds of power, that over nature, our fellowman and ourselves. Man is a bundle of capacities. Teachers should study the latent forces in their pupils, which, developed, stand for humanity and civilization. The mind is the mightiest power in the world. Knowledge is worthless unless it calls forth the latent powers in man. Men with capacity are needed and can find ready employment. Men who can carry a "Message to Garcia" are in constant demand and too sadly lacking; men who can assume responsibility and can execute.

Observation is the basis of all knowledge. The men who talk are many; the doers are less; the thinkers are still less, while the seers are rarer still. Books are too much used in teaching; the eyes should be taught to observe. The ultimate aim, therefore, of education is character; all else is the servant and handmaid of character. If we could have character without education we should not need the latter. We should have the courage to live out our own destiny; dare to be true, honest, self-reliant, purposeful, noble. God has a message for every human soul to deliver, and each message differs as man differs. One man cannot do another's duty; each has his own and each should seek to follow out and do the right.

At the close of his address J. M. Gallison, on behalf of the graduating class of 1900, presented the school with a fine large picture, handsomely framed. In accepting it Prof. Peirce spoke appreciatively, and alluded to the gift of a large flag, once the property of Dr. Dean and recently presented to the school by his widow. It was made for the original owner by the Amoskeag company during the civil war. The picture and flag were spoken of as being gifts from the oldest and youngest friends of the school.

In the evening the hall was well filled to listen to the concert by the Tufts glee, mandolin and guitar club, whose appearance here before was pleasantly remembered. The concert they gave was, if anything, slightly superior to their former effort, evidenced in one respect by the finish of their work. The club this year included one Franklin young man, Joseph G. Ray, 2d. Mr. Foster was excellent, and the school is indeed fortunate in having among its membership so talented an elocutionist.

At the close the students and their friends, with quite a number of former members of the school, gathered in the gymnasium, where dancing was indulged in, Milliken's orchestra furnishing the music. This was a pleasing finale to the successful exercises of a profitable day.

The Franchise at Once.

The selectmen, at their meeting on Friday evening, granted the location on Main and Lincoln streets asked for by the Medfield and Medway Street Railway company, their action being unanimous. Further, it is learned that the board will at once draw up the terms of the franchise and the company will do the same, thus getting at the mutual desires in the matter. If amicable arrangements are made the franchise will be granted within ten days or two weeks, and the company will at once proceed to carry out its plans for laying the rails. Indeed, they are informally pledged to have the road in operation between here and Medway by Memorial day.

If they succeed in doing this they will doubtless catch a good deal of spring and summer travel, and our merchants are of the belief that they will bring into the town a good deal of business from Medway people.

One of the reasons why the matter of franchise is pushed through so quickly is because the selectmen are convinced that the sentiment of the town is decidedly in favor of granting it, and as the company does not wish any delay in the matter, so that they may get the cars running as soon as possible. They have their material already secured, so they do not anticipate any difficulty there. Among the provisions which will be put into the franchise in all probability will be the transfer of school children and teachers at half price, which will be quite a saving to the town in the matter of transportation.

About twenty five citizens on Saturday attended the hearing in Medway given by the Medway and Medfield Street Railway company to see what objection the citizens had to the granting of a franchise to the Medway and Medfield Street Railway company to extend its road through to the Franklin line, which is the other side of the Franklin bridge, near the Senior & Co. mill. The directors of the company were all present. Mr. Feeley was asked if the stone bridge over the Charles river was safe, and he stated that the civil engineer of the company had said it was perfectly safe for electrics. He said the company would make such repairs as are needed. Then the chairman asked all those present who were opposed to the granting of a franchise to the above company to make it manifest by a raising of hands. No hand went up.

That Merchant

Who is honestly desirous to know whether his business will be improved by license in town needs only to set off against possible profits therefrom the losses which must necessarily come through the bad debts of his purchasers and the loss of the money to him which the rumseller gets. Every store in town will suffer by just so much as goes into the saloon, and the open saloon catches many a dime which the dry goods men, the butcher, the grocer, the clothier, is now getting. It can't be otherwise.

Republican Caucus.

The Republican voters of the town of Franklin are requested to meet in caucus at Music hall on Friday, Feb. 23, 1900, at 7.30 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for town officers.

The town committee will be pleased to receive and consider any nomination for town offices upon written request of ten Republican voters.

The charm of a long journey begins before it begins! There is the first conception of the idea, the suggestion of whether or no, the decision to go somewhere, the question "where?" the eager consultation of maps and railroad guides, the securing the literature of the chosen roads, the attractive booklets of the hotels, filled with illustrations, which can always be had for the asking, the final preparations and the start.

The enjoyment of anticipation and imagination half make the trip a reality in these days of luxurious advertising, for one can see himself at any point by means of the fine pictures, which bring a place vividly to the mind. For us, old

Who Is Your Associate?

If you vote for license what kind of a crowd will you have with you? Will it be largely the manufacturers, the teachers, the pastors, the church members, the professional men, the reputable owners of property, the self-respecting members of society?

You may have some men who think more of a dollar than they do of duty, more of self than soul, more of the lust of gain than the love of man. In addition you may count on every loafer in town, every disreputable person, every drunkard, every moral degenerate. You will have as allies men whom you would not invite into your homes, whom you do not recognize upon the street, and with whom you disavow all association.

"Shannon of the Sixth."

This romantic military drama, which will be presented at the Opera house tonight, is a novelty in many ways. The hero is a young Irish lieutenant serving in India at the time of the Sepoy rebellion in 1857. The strange people of that distant country are contrasted with the English soldiers and their families and the incidents are of the most thrilling nature. The rescue of Dora Kimber by Lieut. Shannon forms the climax of the third act. Dora is tied to the mouth of a cannon by the Sepoys, and just as the gun is discharged Shannon drags her away at the risk of his life.

In the Wake of the Swallows.

travelers, the rapid run from Boston to Washington was still full of interest. This country grows by days and hours! Here, where six months ago was an open field, is a very village of beautiful little houses. Ah! the church spire is finished! Its glistening spire suggests the aspirations of a new group of worshippers. A wharf has been built far out into the river! A new steamer gay with fresh paint is being loaded! Here are seven fine apartment houses receiving their last touches. The magnificent city seen from the ferry is guarded by two more superb stone giants, which, facing all comers, protect the beauty and greatness of New York by their stately and splendid frontage.

There is no such sight on earth as New York from the Jersey side. No wonder foreigners stand in silent amazement as they see before them this wilderness of splendid structures, reaching to high heaven and mutely suggesting the financial, commercial, educational civilization which they are to realize when they touch foot to our hospitable soil.

But to the Northerner, anxious to escape to sun and sweetness, warmth and bloom, the preliminary trip is but the preface to that volume of delights which opens page by page from Washington to the South. Securing by good fortune the best seats in one of those rolling palace trains sent by the Southern railroad to New Orleans daily, with every luxury and convenience within and a varied panorama without, we first felt the real breath of a southern temperature as we drew out from the National city and began that series of historic pictures which make up the run to Charlottesville.

As we glide towards Alexandria we turn for a last look at that splendid white wonder, which points heavenward, its snowy needle nearly 600 feet in air, to forever honor the name of the father of our country.

Arlington, the many-columned and stately home of the Lees, stands fair and white on an eminence by the Potomac, and farther down the road we get a glimpse of the historical residence of Madison. Alexandria, once so filled with the wit, gaiety and fashion of the colonial society, is now but a "deserted village," a dead and alive suburb of the grand city, which has long towered above it, but every foot of ground around and beyond it, from Manassas to the Rappahannock and the Rapidan over to the Shenandoah Valley, guarded on the east by a very beautiful range of hills, inspires some memory of the Civil war or brings to mind some anecdote of those stirring days.

Now at the stations we begin to see hunters with their horses and toggery, and note how much luggage of that description goes off and comes on the train, for the whole country is a field of sport, where the fox, deer, wild turkey and smaller wild fowl attract people from all over the world. Flocks of quail, 200 in a bunch, rise as we rush by and race through cotton and cornfields now shorn of snowy bloom and yellow maize. From the windows as we approach this famous town we catch glimpses of "Monticello," the home of Thomas Jefferson. Seated on the highest elevation facing the western sunset, this beautiful structure, the Mecca of 10,000 American pilgrims, lifts its historical walls and stately columns in the pride of ancient memories.

Charlottesville is thoroughly characteristic and typical of Virginia in its hills and hollows, rambling streets and old-fashioned colonial mansions, surrounded with lawns and gardens bordered by box, and even in February sweet with pansies and violets, crocuses and tulips. The bright red soil, with dusky shadows of brown, the splendid old trees, and over-hanging the village at the west the artistic or quaint old building of the university lend a refined and reposeful grace to the atmosphere, lead to the contemplation of the past and bring to mind those early days when the great Jefferson, who founded this fine institution of learning, wrote as its motto and principle the famous words: "I have sworn upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man."

Albermarle county is rich in historical lore for the American patriot. On the grounds of the university once stood the law office of James Madison; just across the line is his residence. Here George Rogers Clark, with his little band of Virginians, suffered privations and trials to which were due the capture of the British ports in the northwest. One of the weirdest stories ever written by Edgar Allen Poe was conceived among the strange and lonesome heights of Ragged mountain, and here he spent some of those college days where his reserve, his love of mystery and the troubled changes of his singular spirit first began to be shown in his remarkable literary work.

The college grounds are most striking in their peculiarities. There is an old serpentine wall, which is built of solid brick, in and out, in and out for hundreds of feet and leads around the sloping lawns that are crowned by such buildings as Thomas Jefferson's old office, the long colonnaded porticos of the dormitories, the Fairweather gymnasium and the rotunda, suggesting by its beautiful approaches of columns and trees the entrance to a paradise beyond.

Crowning a western summit is the McCormick observatory and guarded by great stone ramparts like a fort stands the beautiful little chapel

Thus in all directions, wherever one may look, are to be seen buildings of such singular architectural and historical beauty or fame as to well entice the traveller to stay, and within are a thousand attractions of portraits, manuscripts, statues, relics, old letters and documents, maps and collections of interesting objects, well worthy the attention.

Nestled among hills whose verdure hardly deserts its enormous trees the year around; filled with the memories, anecdotes and reminiscences of our glorious past, characteristic with a population descended from old colonial dames and gentlemen, and served today by the grinning darkey whose grand, and great and still great grandmothers were the Aunt Chloes of the revolutionary kitchens, no wonder the place has become a favorite resting place in the trail of the swallow, bound south.

Down the Road.

As you went down the road, dear,
  As you went down the road,
How chill the breeze began to blow,
  My heart took up its load;
The skies that had been blue and bright,
How fast they darkened into night!

And will you ne'er turn back, dear?
  And shall we never meet?
Do no glad cries come up the road?
  No swift returning feet?
Half way to meet you I would run,
Though long the way and set the sun.

Alas! the days go on, dear:
  How dulled the daylight seems
Since you went down the road, dear,
  And left me to my dreams.
Left me to bear my weary load
  As I toil after, down the road.
—Danske Dandridge, in N. Y. Independent.

The Harvester.

Sweet Death, that linger'st in the field
  When reapers' songs are heard no more,
And will not let the smallest yield
  Of sweetness miss the season's store!

Dear Death, whose dim, mysterious hand
  Permits no meanest flower
To bloom alone when all the land
  Has rendered up its dower!

True Angel of God's wiser ways,
  True friend of all that strive:
Shall we shrink from thee when the days
  Of ripening suns arrive?

When flowers fall and fruit is borne,
  And trees are touch'd by wester'ng sun,
Shall we remain unplucked, forlorn,
  In fields all waste and dun?

Packing Apples for Export.

Apples for export should be honestly and tightly packed with sound fruit: sample barrels are entirely emptied in the presence of the buyers. They should be packed in clean packages, well coopered, and the head of the barrel should be neatly stenciled with the name of the variety, grade and some shipping mark; the English law also requires the letters "U. S. A." to be on every barrel shipped to that country. Export apples should be shipped as soon as practicable after packing, and if held in storage for a considerable length of time should be entirely repacked. The best varieties for export are the hard and best colored fruit.—C. R. Lawrence.

Fertility from Roadsides.

On a very much traveled road there is a great deal of excrement dropped from the horses used in drawing vehicles and from other animals driven thereon. Most of the soluble parts of this excrement are washed into the ditches on either side of the roadway. They accumulate in all the depressions and make a strata of rich soil, which is well worth the labor of drawing into adjoining fields as a fertilizer. It is best to do this while the field is plowed, and the roadside should also be plowed and cultivated, so that the rich soil can be evenly distributed over the surface.

Now.

I leave with God to-morrow's where and how,
And do concern myself but with the now.
That little word, though half the future's length,
Well used, holds twice its meaning and its strength.

Like one blindfolded, groping out his way,
I will not try to touch beyond to-day
Since all the future is concealed from sight,
I need but strive to make the next step right.

That done, the next! and so on, till I find,
Perchance, some day I am no longer blind,
And, looking up, behold a radiant Friend,
Who says: "Rest now, for you have reached the end!"
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in N. Y. Truth.

The Eternal Love.

In every human love, Love lives,
  God of the Apostles' Word;
Rooted in Paradise, it gives
  Life still to new life stirred.
Though wisdom nor great faith be mine
  The mountain's weight to move,
Still let me hear that song divine,
  The world's deep hymn of love.

Who never in the loved one's eyes
  Has seen life grow divine
Is blinded by care's earthly prize,
  Nor sees Heaven's pure love shine.
For Wisdom's proudest work shall fail,
  Earth's crumble to decay.
Love's triumph far exceedeth all—
  It lives in endless day.
—Mrs. Andrew Beattie, in N. Y. Observer.

When Spring Returns.

When spring returns with song and flowers,
  And fills the world with glee,
Then come to us the happy hours
  Of days that used to be;
Our childhood's grace again we trace
  In field and forest fair,
And bird and flower have magic power—
  Enchanting everywhere!

When spring returns with its new life,
  Beyond the bourne of time,
And we have passed the winter strife,
  And reached the heavenly clime,
Perhaps the grace of earth's old place
  May come with gladness there,
And memory true old scenes renew—
  In beauty fresh and fair!
—William Brunton, in Good Housekeeping.

Meadow Frogs.

Ere yet the earliest warble wakes
  Of coming spring to tell,
From every marsh a chorus breaks—
  A choir invisible—
As tho' the blossoms underground
A breath of utterance had found.

Whence comes the liquid melody?
  The summer clouds can bring
No fresher music from the sky
  Than here the marshes sing.
Methinks the mists about to rise
Are chanting their rain prophecies.
—John B. Tabb, in Atlantic.

AN EXCELLENT PLAN.

Catching, Moving and Shipping Hogs, Sheep and Yearling Cattle Made Easy.

My plan of crating live stock, hogs, calves, sheep and yearlings is to have four pieces three by three inches and three feet long (or more for large stock), as corner pieces. Then four boards, a, six inches wide and six feet or more long are nailed securely as side pieces. Double end boards are two feet ten inches long and nailed securely. At one end of crate, two boards, b b, are slid between the end boards and held in place by a bolt through top and bottom of each. From bottom up, side boards are nailed on three, four and five in apart respectively.

To handle hogs, take three planks one foot wide, place one end in rear of wagon, other on ground, as shown at c. Two men take the crate at each end, follow up and drop over the hog and then walk the hog under the crate, up the plank on the wagon. In this way I have loaded alone hogs that weighed 400 pounds. Keep crate close to ground or the hog will poke her nose under and crawl out. If hogs are wild, feed them and while eating set crate over them. I lead hogs from pen to pasture in this way. — C. A. Phoenix, in Farm and Home.

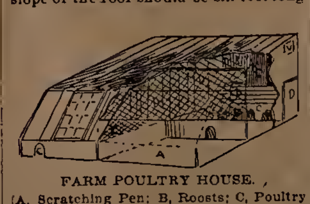
POULTRY & BEES

FARM POULTRY HOUSE.

A Cheap and Convenient Structure, with Scratching Pen, Large Enough for Fifty Hens.

A subscriber at Sidney, O., asks for a plan for a house that will accommodate 50 hens, with a scratching pen attached. He says it must be cheap as well as convenient. I present the plan of a house that I think will be suitable. The scratching pen is under the same roof and is separated by only a wire or lath partition, shown at A. In this pen all feeding should be done. The size of the house is 16x20 feet and nine feet at the highest point of the roof. The front slope of the roof should be six feet long to accommodate a hot-bed sash, and would need three of them. The partitions should divide the house into four equal parts, a scratching pen and a roosting and nest room on each side.



FARM POULTRY HOUSE.
(A, Scratching Pen; B, Roosts; C, Poultry Doors; D, Inside Doors; V, Ventilator.)

Place the water, ground bone and grit in the roosting or nest room and do all of the feeding in the scratching room, and also keep the dust bath in this room right under the glass so that the sun will shine in it and keep it dry and warm. For cheapness and durability I would cover the roof with Neponset roofing and paint it well; board up the sides and ends and batten the cracks.

This style of a house is the most roomy and convenient of any I know of, and almost any farmer can build one. To start one, draw your plans, first, to a scale and see how your lumber will cut to advantage. Hang a cabbage or other vegetables in the roost room so that the fowls can pick it from the roost board and the floor, and fall off once in awhile for exercise. The plans are plain and self-explanatory.—E. E. Page, in Ohio Farmer.

A WORD ABOUT QUEENS.

Every Colony of Bees Should Receive a New One Before the Principal Flow Begins.

The bright apiarist requeens colonies of bees almost every year. While queens may live three or four years, and in some case even five years, yet they outlive their usefulness and are not near so prolific the second year as they are the first and seldom prove profitable the third year of their lives. It is true there are some exceptions, but the above is the general rule. Old queens usually quit laying eggs entirely at the close of the honey season during the fore part of the summer, and even if the honey flow continues well on in summer they will check up on egg production. While good young queens lay more eggs during the honey season than old ones, they continue to lay eggs all summer to some extent and in autumn months brood will be found in their combs, hence such colonies are in the best condition to successfully go through the winter, and always come out stronger in the spring. Old queens are more inclined to swarm, and will deposit eggs in the queen cell cups even when the colony is by no means strong enough. The result is that the colony will cast small swarms if allowed to swarm at all, and if prevented by the usual method of removing the queen cells the old queen seems to pout about it and persists in starting more queen cells and also seems to make a specialty of the queen cell business, neglects laying generally, and the result is a colony that will store but little if any surplus honey. Much larger crops would be the result if each colony of bees were to receive a newly hatched and fertile queen in the early spring and before the principal flow began. This method of management would in great measure prevent swarming and also add to the number of bees in the hive, which is the two prime requisites in the production of large honey crops. No queen over two years old should be retained in a hive and it will be better still to requeen every year, even if the queens have to be purchased at one dollar each, which is the usual price of them, but it is much cheaper for everyone who keeps bees to rear their own queens, which may readily be done even with a few hives of bees. Some queens are far superior to others and at the same time may be of the same race or variety.—A. H. Duff, in Prairie Farmer.

Combs in Cold Weather.

Every winter damages the birds more or less by injuring the combs. When a comb is frosted it turns black and often the points decay and fall off. It is very painful, and results in a loss of eggs, as the birds will not lay until the comb is thoroughly healed. The wattles also freeze, especially when wet, as is the case with birds that drink from an open vessel. The best remedy for frosted combs is to keep the birds free from draughts and anoint the combs with a few drops of glycerin and crude petroleum mixed. To prevent the difficulty, if necessary, cut off the combs and wattles with a sharp knife or shears, dip the head in alum water and put the birds in a dry, warm place. Should the weather be warm rub the cut surface with crude petroleum as a protection against flies.—American Gardening.

KEEP YOUR BLOOD CLEAN

Increasing the Manure Supply.

Never enough manure is made upon the farm to meet all the needs of the soil. Where the farmer lives near a city or town he can often get fresh manure for the hauling or a little more. It is always safe to go on the principle, in getting strange stable manure, that it is full of weed seeds, and to adopt measures to kill them. Compost such manure in flat piles, mixing with it a considerable quantity of unslaked lime. As soon as the pile is made soak it thoroughly and cover it with a blanket of dirt three or four inches thick, slapping it down with a spade. The lime will immediately slake, generating a heat which will kill the seeds, the dirt covering keeping the heat confined.—Guy E. Mitchell, in Farm and Fireside.

A LASTING EFFECT.

This Evidence Should Prove Every Claim.

Relief from the pains and aches of a bad back is always welcome to every backache sufferer, but to cure a lame, weak or aching back is what's wanted. Cure it so it will stay cured. It can be done. Here's the strongest evidence to prove it.

Mr. H. P. Smith, blacksmith, of Elm street, Amesbury, Mass., says: "Mrs. Smith, from a cold which settled in her loins, suffered so severely from backache that she was unable to attend to the ordinary household duties, often finding it impossible to even make a bed for three months. I had read a great many statements of residents of Amesbury who positively declared that Doan's Kidney Pills had cured them of backache and other symptoms of kidney complaint. This led me to make some inquiries, and as a result Mrs. Smith took a thorough course of the treatment. It cured her. It is so long ago that I am confident the results are permanent. We never lose an opportunity of advising others who suffer from either weakened or over-excited kidneys to procure Doan's Kidney Pills, and we know of scores in and around Amesbury who have taken our advice and were not only surprised but gratified at the benefits received."

Jack's Triumph.

He told her she was sweeter than the petals
of the rose,
He told her she was fairer than the lily;
She pouted and pretended to turn up her pretty nose,
And she answered: "Jack, I pray you,
don't be silly."

Another who was richer and who knew much more than Jack
Came wooing the sweet maiden who had pouted;
He looked upon her fondly, but she only turned her back—
The love that he bestowed on her she flouted.

The man who had the riches and the brains forgot to say
That she was like a rose or like a lily;
Jack came again and flattered her in his old, foolish way,
And she took him, still protesting: "Don't be silly."

Fame comes at last to those who've sorest

The sails ne'er feel the breeze until unfurled.
The flame of genius flutters on unknown,
Then meteor-like illumines all the world."

An Editor's Life Saved by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

During the early part of October, 1896, I contracted a bad cold which settled on my lungs and was neglected until I feared that consumption had appeared in an incipient state. I was constantly coughing and trying to expel something which I could not. I became alarmed and after giving the local doctor a trial bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the result was immediate improvement. After I had used three bottles my lungs were restored to their healthy state—B. S. Edwards, publisher of the the Review, Wyant, Ill. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Remedy for the Hornfly.

The hornfly is becoming troublesome in some sections, and the Kansas experiment station reports that they have found the following mixture to effectually prevent them from troubling the agricultural college herd: Two quarts fish oil, one pint crude carbolic acid, two ounces of oil of tar, one ounce oil of pennyroyal, one quart kerosene. All except the kerosene can be obtained at any good drug store, and the cost is but 85 cents a gallon. Put it on with brush, cloth, or in fine spray from atomizer, about once in two or three days. The cost is from one-half to one cent a head each day, and these flies and all others will carefully avoid it.

When to Buy Mill Feed.

At this time of year millers need all their spare store room to hold grain, and will sell bran and wheat middlings much cheaper than they can afford to do later in the season. There is often a saving of two or three dollars per ton, even though the price of grain does not advance if the mill feed needed for winter and spring use is purchased now. If farmers have spare room in their barns that can be kept always dry they can profitably use it for storing bran, though it is very bulky in proportion to its cost, and for that reason room for it cannot be afforded where storage is expensive.—American Cultivator.

The Modern Way

Commends itself to the well-informed, to do pleasantly and effectually what was formerly done in the crudest manner and disagreeably as well. To cleanse the system and break up colds, headaches and fevers without unpleasant after effects use the delightful liquid laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs. Made by California Fig Syrup Co.

If the reader of this should chance to know of any one who is subject to attacks of bilious colic he can do him no greater favor than to tell him of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. It always give prompt relief. For sale by Albert C. Mason.

Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska

How to Begin Farming.

The beginner on a farm usually estimates the cost of the farm as the largest expenditure, but the farm is an incumbrance if the owner has not sufficient capital to derive the most from the land. There is a heavy outlay to be considered for buildings, horses, cattle, wagons, machinery, implements, seeds and labor. The cost for the first year may exceed the value of the farm itself. It is better to begin with a small farm where the capital is limited than to undertake too much and lose all by going into debt.

HOW TO PULL POSTS.

A Difficult Undertaking That Is Made Easy by the Exercise of a Little Stratagem.

We had a lot of old posts to pull and haul off. The ground was dry and the posts came up hard. We at first thought to take a long pole and yank them out by main strength and awkwardness while the team stood by; but decided upon a different plan and took with us merely a good length of chain and a piece of 2 by 8-inch stuff about 30 inches long. Father drove the team and I manipulated the chain, etc. We started down on the right-hand side of and close in the line of posts. In driving past a post he swung the team a little to the right, then slightly to the left, and backed a few feet, bringing left hind wheel of wagon about in line with post and within a few feet of it. One end of chain having been fastened around the axle near left wheel, I hooked the other end around post close to ground, then lifted chain and set the piece of 2 by 8 under it with top end resting against post and lower end resting on the ground some 18 inches from post. As the team started slowly the post started skyward, then fell prostrate and was at once loaded into the wagon. When the end of the line was reached, in a short time, the job was complete and we were ready to drive off with our load of posts.—George T. Pettit, in Ohio Farmer.

VEGETABLE SHOVEL.

Handy Implement for Farmers Where Large Quantities of Root Crops Are Raised.

Where large quantities of root crops or potatoes are raised a shovel like that shown in the cut will be found very convenient in handling the crop. It can be made new from the beginning or made in the way indicated—by screwing sides and a back to a common snow shovel. The thin edge in front slips in under the roots without bruising them, and as they are comparatively light in weight large numbers can be taken up at each shovelful.—N. Y. Tribune.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys, if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

SHORT-LIVED ORCHARDS.

Why Fruit Trees Weaken and Die Sooner in the Western States Than in the East.

One thing that always strikes an eastern man on visiting the west or a western man visiting the east, is the great difference in the size of the trees and the age of the orchards. There are orchards in the eastern states with trees over a century in age that are still bearing. A tree at 25 or 30 is looked upon as just in its prime. In the west ten and 15 years of bearing is about the average life of a tree.

In size they do not grow so that anything but a short foot ladder is required in picking time. Most of the fruit can be reached from the ground or from a wagon. The trees early crack, become decayed in the trunk and the limbs split off. A tree 50 years old is a curiosity.

There is a cause for this which is evident to any thoughtful observer. It is the dry, hot winds and sun that play havoc with our orchards. In the great prairie country an orchard is wholly unprotected from the heavy winds which sweep unrestrained over the level country. The prevailing wind during the hot months is southerly. The limbs with the shading leaves are blown so that the hot sun shines directly on the body of the tree, drying it until the bark checks and peels loose from the wood. Water collects in this crack at the next and at every ensuing rain, and the death of the tree has begun. Decayed and weakened it cannot stand the strain of its heavy top and some windstorm leaves it a wreck, useful only as firewood.

We cannot hope to remove the cause. Our only remedy is in perfection. A windbreak of some hardy trees that can withstand both drought and wind along the south side of an orchard is of inestimable value to the owner. The man who contemplates putting out an orchard should also consider a windbreak.

There is one mistake that is made almost universally in the west. This is setting trees out too thinly. As most orchards are arranged, each tree is isolated from its fellows and must stand alone. Were they put in closer, so close in fact that the limbs will touch or even interlock, it will take a cyclone to injure them. As the wind cannot get a chance at them, each tree is protected from the hot rays of the sun by its foliage; or even if lifted and blown to one side the tree trunk will be shaded by its neighbor.

Even with the best of protection it is doubtful if trees will reach an advanced age in the west in comparison with the east. But there is no doubt that from ten to 20 years can be added to a tree's usefulness by proper protection.—Nebraska Farmer.

FALL PLANTED TREES.

They Have a Number of Important Advantages Over Those Planted in the Spring.

The fall-planted fruit or shade tree has a great advantage over the spring-planted tree. Our summers are hot, pretty much all over the country, and they are pretty long, too. The heat, with the long dry spells that we frequently have, makes the growth of the spring-planted tree very slow and uncertain. But if the planting is done in the fall, the hole dug large and deep, the top soil and suitable fertilizer placed at the bottom, over and among which the roots are carefully spread, and more rich soil added, with the clay subsoil which has been removed in making the hole, poked well about the young tree at the surface, the tree will be pretty well fortified for any kind of weather. The depth and width of the hole will enable it to retain much moisture about the roots, which become well set, and begin growth during the late fall, which is resumed at the very beginning of mild weather in the spring. There is no shock to the tree when the true growing season comes and it is ready to resume its growth. Having tried both fall and spring planting of trees, I shall hereafter, when I have occasion to plant trees, do it in the fall of the year.—Agricultural Epitomist.

Republicans will go to Music hall tonight and the citizens caucus in the Town hall. It looks as if both caucuses would be largely attended, as the friends of the electric road are especially anxious in regard to town officers this year, the various selections appearing to turn upon that issue.

Mrs. St. John of Cottage street, who had been in the Massachusetts General hospital, Boston, since last Saturday undergoing treatment, died in that institution on Wednesday. The remains were brought here the same day and the funeral was held at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Mary's church.

A number of bright-looking Japanese were seen at the station here recently, en route for Milford. They are connected with the oldest spinning company in Japan. One of them is president and the other superintendent of the concern. They are here to study American weaving and spinning machinery.

Deputy Sheriff Fitzpatrick is attending the funeral of one of his official brethren at Hyde Park today, Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Jenney. Many Franklinites will remember him as court officer at Dedham, a gentleman with a full grey beard and afflicted with lameness. He was at one time Hyde Park's chief of police.

William Rockwood has just received his appointment as justice of the peace, bearing the signature of Governor Murray Crane. Mr. Rockwood has served continuously since 1865, and has the signatures of many of Massachusetts' governors as souvenirs. He naturally prizes them highly. The appointment is for seven years.

Middlesex and Norfolk Pomona grange will hold a session here Wednesday, Feb. 28. The forenoon meeting is for members of the grange. At 2 p. m. there will be an open meeting to which the public are invited. The subject of afternoon: Illustrated panorama, chalk talk, "Temperance," by Rev. W. N. Teuney, Swampscott. All are welcome.

The gospel feelingly sung is often more touching and powerful than when preached from the pulpit. The few who were privileged to hear Mrs. C. L. Stewart's wonderfully touching solos at the Methodist church last Sunday morning will be pleased to hear them repeated next Sunday; and all who love sweet singing should endeavor to be present.

Roadmaster G. H. Sullivan has resigned his position with the New Haven road, and accepted a more lucrative one with another road. Last evening his employes gave him a surprise visit, presenting him with a handsome gold watch suitably inscribed, with a neat presentation and acceptance speech. They with other friends here wish him every success in his new field of labor.

Plans are being consummated for a trolley ball league which, if completed, will "catch the town." The idea is to have Franklin, Milford, the two Attleboros, Woonsocket and Pawtucket in the circuit, every town being easy of access by electrics by summer. With such clubs as would be put into those towns there is absolutely no question as to support. Go on with the good work.

F. G. Saylor, of the Saylor Rubber company, is now interested in the manufacture of linoleum at East Taunton, and a company is forming to purchase the unused chemical factory at Walpole, which, with some slight alterations, is excellently adapted to manufacturing linoleum. These goods are made in different grades and are the result of Mr. Saylor's own ideas. There is an excellent outlook for his company.

Mrs. Richardson Metcalf died at the asylum in Worcester Sunday and was brought here for burial Tuesday. She was the second wife of Mr. Metcalf, who died a few years ago at an advanced age, having lived his long life here in his native town, and where he was prominent in church and town matters until the infirmities of age came upon him. Mrs. Metcalf was a member of the Congregational church. Rev. Mr. Sneath officiated at the funeral.

Rarely do Franklinites have an opportunity of attending so meritorious an entertainment as is to be given by the Alden club at Dean academy, next Monday evening, the subject being "Negro Slave Songs and Plantation Folk Lore," by Jeanette Robinson Murphy. The entertainment is a very expensive one, but is borne by the Alden club solely that our people may enjoy something of a really interesting and helpful nature. The hall should be full.

Manager Leathers, of Milford, who has charge of the telephone exchange here, is to have this field thoroughly canvassed shortly with the hope of putting in a good many more 'phones. It is indeed a shame that a town of this size has no more instruments than has Franklin. Doubtless with a good working exchange here communication with our near-by towns would be much more frequent and less "steep" in price. We hope something will be done and that shortly.

A letter received from Supt. A. L. Pierce of the Wallingford (Conn.) electric light plant announces that it is upon a most satisfactory basis, and is one of the finest plants in the state. The Electrical World will shortly produce a number of views of the place. Supt. Pierce feels very proud of being boss of a plant that is having such widespread notice as a successful municipal plant, and its success is in no small measure attributed to his untiring efforts to that end.

President J. G. Ray is one of the best known and most experienced men in the felt trade, and it is a foregone conclusion that he will make a great success of the work he has taken in hand. He was formerly of the City Mills company of Franklin, Mass., one of the concerns taken over by the American Felt company. It may be added that the business of this company will be conducted on the same lines as the American Woolen company, which company has been so successful.—Commercial and Financial World.

Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath preached on last Sabbath morning upon Psalm 43: 3. "Where is Thy God?" In answer to the question Materialism replies "Nowhere," Agnosticism "Somewhere," and Pantheism "Everywhere." The unfortunate fact about the Pantheistic theory is that it identifies God and the universe as one and inseparable. Christianity teaches the omnipresence of God. It declares his immanence but also asserts his transcendance. The Christian doctrine thus provides for a personal God who is free, for a true spiritual worship, for prayer and for the divine providence, which is ever near and helpful. The practical value of this doctrine is evident. We have a God who is not afar off but who is present to help and bless.

On Monday a Unionville man doing business here left his horse to eat his oats in a warm barn and came to the center on the electrics. He made ready to go home after 11 a. m., but missed the car, consoling himself with the thought that it was only an hour more to wait in anticipation of the good dinner his better half was cooking. But for some reason the next trip on the time-table was omitted, and the worthy citizen waited until after 1 p. m. and no car came. Then he started on foot, meeting the car coming toward him on the road, but before it returned he was at home and soothing the bitter pangs of hunger by demolishing the viands of a well-filled dinner table. Now he maintains that when he wants to come to town and be sure of getting home again he will depend on the old hay horse, even if he is a frisky beast less than 25 years old.

A Matter of Principle.

That is the light in which no license should be regarded, and the men who vote "no" on that ground can be relied upon every election. The man who votes for no license and still sees liquor sold, and votes for license next year, only to be disgusted with the evidences of free rum, free fights, not-free streets for ladies, and swings back to no license again, is not voting on principle. He is not to be relied upon, as his vote may be had by either party. Make it a matter of principle that the sale of liquor, illegal or permitted, is wrong and your town will be free and will be kept free.

There's Fish in the Sea.

Three popular young ladies of this town partook of a bountiful spread, prepared by themselves, on Feb. 22. While they were enjoying themselves from a table well filled with bluefish, salads, fancy puddings, fruit, etc., an orchestra in an alcove near by was playing the latest music.

Young men, don't despair, as there are other spinsters besides those seen on the stage Wednesday eve. F.

The Terms Agreed Upon.

The selectmen and the electric road promoters met last evening and arranged the terms of the franchise, subject to one or two slight alterations, and it is now given out that the franchise will issue within a few days, as the selectmen desire to finish up their part in the matter before going out of office.

Richardson's Market.

Last week we advertised a sale of roast beef and cleaned up every pound. The public got good worth for their money. This week our line of chickens, fowls, turkeys, meats, vegetables, etc., has been selected with unusual care, the price being as low as the lowest and the quality as high as the highest. We can't be beaten on canned goods. Try our butter.

Unappropriated Blossoms.

There was an abundance of expectancy on Wednesday evening before the curtain rose at the Opera house to know what the "spinsters" who really wanted a man would do to get one, and before the entertainment closed everyone's curiosity was satisfied, as there has been no such yearning after helpmates on the part of the twenty young ladies since the days of "Patience."

A large heart pierced with Cupid's dart hung from the centre of the stage, to which all the maidens deferred with becoming longings, and placards adorned the walls announcing the club mottoes, "While there's life there's hope," "The greatest of these is love," and "Love all men." As the spinsters assembled they were called to order by Miss Frances King, the president, in fitting words, their opening chorus being "Just One Man," sung with passionate fervor.

The members then responded to their names with appropriate quotations, showing the unappeased longings of their mature hearts, and the reports of the various officers were read and accepted. The market report by Miss Bowers was received with special demonstration, purporting to be an exact synopsis of the matrimonial condition of the respective "eligibles," including the widowers, the young "bloods" and even the "buds." The parties, many of whom were present, bore the "hits" apportioned out with remarkable stoicism.

The proposed trip to Oklahoma, where men were said to be a drug in the market, was warmly debated by Mrs. Duprez and Miss Macdermot, the sisters deciding in favor of the "clinging vine" in preference to the "new woman." Miss Crocker sang a solo which had unrequited love as its burden, and Mrs. Bachelor's original verses were in a similar strain.

The announcement of Prof. Makeover's arrival with his wonderful "remodelscope," which was to work startling transformations, making each one who tried it into whatsoever might be wished. Of course all were ready, and successively the spinsters were introduced to the modern transmogrificator.

They were "evoluted" into a soprano soloist, Miss Myrtie Whiting; into a violinist, Miss Alice J. Grover of Mansfield; into an elocutionist, Miss Cobb; into a male quartet, Messrs. Hosford, Hartshorne, Sherman and Rich, who, by the way, did remarkably fine work; into a baritone soloist, Roy Hartshorne; into a coon singer, Charles Bent. A dog put into the machine came out a string of sausages. The advent of a lady of large proportions finally broke the "machine." This paved the way very nicely for the introduction of Mr. Cosseboom and Miss Snow in the torch swinging, which is always well done and always well received.

John Cosseboom, as the professor, was excellent and completely filled his part, and the dignity and self-possession of Miss King justified the fitness of her selection to preside over so hysterical a body. Charles Whitaker assisted in running the machine acceptably.

The music was furnished by the Philharmonic orchestra, composed of Miss Bertha Rezee, L. W. Newell, George Farrington, Alphonse LeClair and Mrs. Mabelle Tracy and was of an unusually high order.

The audience was large and responsive and the local hits were appreciatively received. It was given under the auspices of the St. John's mission, for which Rev. Mr. Miner had worked indefatigably, and the treasury of the mission will be augmented by a very gratifying sum in consequence.

The Financial Benefit.

No theory is more often advanced than that of financial profit to a town through license, and that is the weakest argument that can be brought up. Else, why stop with the sale of liquor? Why not legalize other evils that are known to exist, but are usually spoken of sub rosa? If it's money that is needed, make out a list of permissable things and put them up for sale to the highest bidder. There is just as much color of right in licensing one evil as another. Why stop with liquor?

Special Revival Service.

This evening at 7.30 there will be another evangelistic service at the Methodist church. Short sermon by the pastor, S. A. Cook. Subject, "Divine Commands and Human Qualifications." This service will have in it a message for the sinner as well as the saint. Come and receive a blessing.

For a clean shave and a good hair cut go to Ochee's barber shop.

A Practical Discourse.

Rev. F. B. Sleeper gave his second sermon Sunday evening in the series on "The Prodigal Son." His theme was "The Temptations." He dwelt on the awful danger of sowing wild oats. Many young people think it impossible to reach a large and strong manhood until they have run a career of wildness. Habits of evil are thus formed that are very difficult to overcome, and many thereby are dragged down to ruin.

The prodigal in the "far country" is no worse than the prodigal at home. In the former case he is out of the way, where he cannot harm those who have been his nearest and truest friends. In the latter case he disgraces the home that kindly offers him protection and insults those who have known him from boyhood by his habits of wickedness.

There are four characteristics of this evil: (1) The infidel prodigal, who cares not for God or man. (2) The profane prodigal, poisoning the air with his blasphemy. (3) The intemperate prodigal, ruining himself and seeking to ruin others by strong drink. (4) The vile talking and vile acting prodigal. Such people hold nothing in life too sacred for them to contaminate. Their only purpose and pleasure in the world is incarnate wickedness, and when deprived of this their existence becomes an accursed vacuum.

Such men fearfully cheapen themselves in the sight of God and angels and holy men. The debauchee cannot look you honestly in the eye, but if possible will slink out of sight. His own soul condemns him. He has disgraced and ruined his manhood. He hears the decree concerning himself that he knows is just: "He is joined to his idols of wickedness; let him alone." If the influence of the prodigal could be confined to himself alone the evil would not be so great. But this is impossible; it goes on to future generations. Edward Bellamy's doctrine of "Atavism" in his book, "Looking Backward," is essentially true. The whisper of earth seems to affect the distant stars; and so the words and deeds of men of wickedness send their poison through the centuries that are to follow.

Free from the Law.

The case against Messrs. Worthley and Shattuck of the New Central hotel, charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell was concluded before Judge Doe in the district court on Tuesday afternoon, both defendants being found not guilty. Mr. Worthley was immediately rearrested on the charge of keeping a hotel without a victualler's license. He was put on probation, the claim being that he had inadvertantly allowed it to lapse, having once had such license.

Martin, the "spotter," from Boston, proved to be a most disreputable fellow, and his testimony was practically worthless from his own admissions and reflected not a little discredit upon the prosecution for assuming to rest a case upon such an untrustworthy source. Attorney Martin disclaimed all knowledge of the man, and recognized the valueless nature of his testimony fully as much as did the defense.

Same Here.

The make you rich man, soliciting advertisements for a thing that will be seen only by the people who pay to get into it, is finding patrons in Great Barrington, judging by the stay he has made here. Those who miss him need not despair. There'll be other chances for "blowing in" money along directly. Persons wishing to experiment in that line will always find rat holes waiting to be filled with water.—Great Barrington Courier.

Notice to Voters.

The Registrars of Voters will be in session at town officers' rooms

Wednesday, Feb. 21, from 7 to 9 p. m.,
Saturday, Feb. 24, from 12 m. to 10 p. m.

Emerson's Market.

On a turkey, chicken or fowl we can just suit you. Our list of "green stuff" is as complete as is to be found in Boston, radishes, lettuce, celery, dandeliona, spinach, etc. Of course, we have meats of all kinds, and we'd like to show you our brand of canned goods, the famous "Brunswick." Emerson, the Franklin marketer.

COMMUNICATIONS.

[The editor assumes no responsibility for matter under this caption. This column is entirely at the disposal of the public, avoiding, as far as possible, trivial and controversial matter.]

To THE EDITOR:—I believe it is the duty of every true citizen to uphold the liquor officer in his efforts to free the town of liquor. But—do we uphold him in allowing his imagination to hold such sway as to accuse anyone of buying liquor on the simple ground of having been seen to come out of the Central House office?

Has one not the privilege to step into the office upon an errand, (which I am free to tell anyone) without having a summons read to him a few weeks later to appear as witness on a liquor question?

As I have always voted for no-license, and have felt as interested as any voter could in this line, it seems to me rather unjust to be forced to appear as witness in a liquor case, of which I know as little as Queen Victoria herself.

We do not for a moment doubt the good intentions of our worthy officer, but we trust in the future he will curb that powerful imagination a trifle, and not allow himself to mistake breakfast coffee for liquor again.

A. J. GILMORE.
Franklin, Mass., Feb. 21, 1900.

The Money Goes Easy.

Many laboring men, if liquor is to be had easily, will spend $2 or $3 a week. What man of them can afford that outgo? What family can do without that which the $3 would buy? What storekeeper can let that sum be charged off against profit and loss? That is a practical view of it, and just that state of affairs will exist if the town votes license. Families, are you ready for it? Merchants, are you ready for it?

Coming March 3.

Bartlett's American Band of Providence, composed of the leading soloists of the best bands, including Gilmore's and Reeves', will appear at the Opera house on the above date in a grand concert, assisted by Miss Ada M. Greenhalge, soprano, and Miss M. I. Stewart, contralto, late of the Manhattan company, with illustrated songs. This will be one of the finest classical and popular musical concerts of the season. E. A. Scott, formerly of Gilmore's band, is the solo clarinet and bassoon player with this company.

Christian Citizenship Meeting.

The union meeting at the Universalist church Sunday evening will take up the general topic of "Christian Citizenship" and the different pastors will speak. The proposed Curfew by-law and other measures needed in Franklin will be discussed and the meeting will be of special interest. Let there be a large attendance.

Republican Caucus.

The Republican voters of the town of Franklin are requested to meet in caucus at Music hall on Friday, Feb. 23, 1900, at 7.30 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for town officers.

The town committee will be pleased to receive and consider any nomination for town offices upon written request of ten Republican voters.

Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska.

Preparing for Dewey.

Dewey days in New York will also be flag days, according to the Philadelphia Press: "It was said by the professional decorators that it would be impossible for New York city to be more completely swathed in flags or bewildering gay with bunting than it was during the presidential campaign of 1896. But it is probable that that beautiful spectacle of the fall months of 1896 will be surpassed on the occasion of Admiral Dewey's visit to this city. The decorators and the dealers in bunting and flags have already exhausted the supply in this city, and are sending throughout the United States either to buy or borrow. The city will be one vast, magnificent banner, and some of the artists who have been engaged by the committee on the scope and plan are of the opinion that this feature will be even more impressive than the proposed Dewey arch. Some idea of the magnitude of the expenditures for the celebration may be gained by the statement that already $300,000 has been secured by municipal and state appropriation and private subscription, and that it is expected that as much as $200,000 more will be raised. All of this money will be for no other purpose than decorating the land and water parade and the official entertaining of Dewey and other formally invited visitors."

There are few women who would prefer a comfortable competence to great wealth. The reason for this mistake in judgment, says the National Magazine, can easily be traced to a prevailing ignorance of the trials and tribulations surrounding a life of affluence. A rich woman is in many respects to be pitied; not entirely because she runs an especially poor chance of getting into the Kingdom of Heaven, even as the camel does in entering the eye of the needle, but principally because she is by right of her inherited or acquired wealth the center of multifarious, perplexing affairs, and the object of considerable persecution. The very rich woman seldom knows a restful, irresponsible hour, unless it comes in sleep. In America there are three distinct varieties of rich women—the one who spends money socially, the one that spends philanthropically and the one that does not spend at all.

At the old settlers' annual meeting at Shelbyville, Mo., the proprietors of a refreshment stand put up a sign offering "all the lemonade you could drink for a nickel." A lank farmer lad, apparently in the last stages of consumption or something equally unpleasant, walked up and laid down five coppers. The vendors thought they had a snap, says a local exchange, until the large glass was filled and emptied 19 times, when the customer was handed his money back and requested to complete the slaking of his thirst at the town pump. The sign was then removed.

An old sea captain writes to the Philadelphia papers and asks that the weather bureau be given credit for saving millions of dollars' worth of property and hundreds of lives in the recent hurricane that came up through the West Indies and along our eastern coast. Warned by the weather bureau, some 2,000 vessels remained in the safe harbors along the coast and escaped the fate that met many that paid no attention to the warning and put to sea.

Here are some of the terrible things which, according to a funny exchange, are likely to befall a delinquent. Last week a delinquent subscriber said that he would pay up Saturday if he lived. He's dead. Another: "I'll see you tomorrow." He's blind. Still another one said: "I hope to pay you this week or go to the d—l." He's gone. There are hundreds who ought to take warning by these procrastinators and pay up their subscription now.

THE WEIGHT OF HOGS.

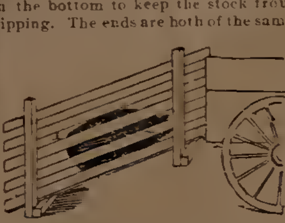
Packers Now Prefer the 150-Pound Animal to the Heavy Porkers of Other Years.

We are told and impressed by the authorities in the provision trade that there is no possible chance that heavy hogs will be in favor for a considerable time, if ever again, says Texas Stock Journal. This view we are informed is based upon the requirements of consumers and the retail and export trade. Formerly a packing hog was heavy at 350 to 450 pounds; now packing hogs are considered heavy at 250 pounds. Packers get all the lard they can possibly handle without buying a single lard hog. The best marketable weight now is about 150 pounds, and the best all-around porker does not exceed 225 pounds, although that weight is too heavy to-day to sell well. Farmers who make their hogs too heavy to suit the buyers must expect to get low prices, as the light weights bring the most money. The sides are manipulated into breakfast bacon, canvased and sold for eight to ten cents per pound, shoulders converted into "California hams" and retailed for ten cents per pound; the hams are small and sell readily for 12½ cents, and some with an extra finishing touch retail for as much as 15 cents per pound. Then, isn't it strange, taking into consideration the above facts, that our farmers and feeders will continue to feed after their pigs are thoroughly ripe for market, while with every breath the packer is saying to them: "If you feed another feed, I'll dock you." What is to their interest, the same is to our interest. Then it behooves us to reach out for quick, growthy, fatten-at-any-age pigs, and six months after the pig is farrowed turn him over to the packers, who in return will pay you more than if you had fed it seven months, so far as profit is concerned.

LOADING LIVE STOCK.

A Device That Is Easy to Handle and Is Rapidly Adjusted to Suit Any Wagon.

The accompanying illustration shows a device for loading hogs and sheep that are too heavy to lift. The figure represents one side only. The bottom is a two-inch plank one foot or 16 inches wide, or as wide as the wagon box, if you want it, with slats nailed crosswise on the bottom to keep the stock from slipping. The ends are both of the same angle, so that when set up on the hind end of the wagon it will fit the box, and the end on the ground is perpendicular. By means of a few portable panels we can load stock almost any place where there is a fence for one side. The device can be adjusted to suit the wagon, unlike one that is stationary. We have scales, and a breeding pen for pigs, and it comes handy to unload sows, and at the scales for loading fat hogs and sheep.—A. S. Forsman, in Ohio Farmer.



LOADING LIVE STOCK.

The Bees in Winter Quarters.

Bees should be kept in a temperature ranging from 42 to 45 degrees above zero, and the hives should be dry. The light should be excluded as much as possible, and the hives should not be exposed to sudden changes of temperature. An ample supply of honey should be left for the support of the bees during the winter. It is not necessary to put the hives under cover until winter approaches, and if the colony in each hive is not strong, it will be of but little service until it recovers in the spring. Too much warmth in winter is not conducive to success.

The Element of Beauty.

The element of beauty should not be lost sight of in the breeding of poultry. Certainly the good-looking hen is not likely to lay any more eggs than the unsightly one. Nevertheless, there is a real value in having a flock uniform in color and marking, and withal beautiful. The young especially are stimulated by the beauty of the fowls to take an interest in them. This interest may develop into something of value to the ones that are moved by it.—Farmers' Review.

Advantages of Rotation.

The value of rotation of crops in preventing plant diseases has been strikingly shown in some experiments with egg-plants. One plat of ground had been grown with this crop for three successive years, when the crop was compared with that of another plat on which eggplants had been previously grown. Rot was prevalent on the old path. There were five times as many sound fruits upon the new as upon the old land. The percentages of decayed fruits were only 16 per cent. against 61 per cent.—Farmers' Review.

STARVED HAIR

Slow growth of hair comes from lack of hair food. The hair has no life. It is starved. It keeps coming out, gets thinner and thinner, bald spots appear, then actual baldness.

The only good hair food you can buy is→ Ayer's Hair Vigor

It feeds the roots, stops starvation, and the hair grows thick and long. It cures dandruff also. Keep a bottle of it on your dressing table.

It always restores color to faded or gray hair. Mind, we say "always."

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

"I have found your Hair Vigor to be the best remedy I have ever tried for the hair. My hair was falling out very bad, so I thought I would try a bottle of it. I had used only one bottle, and my hair stopped falling out, and it is now real thick and long."

New Corn Makes Cholera.

The fact that new corn and hog cholera get ripe about the same time every year leads many pretty good hogmen to believe that feeding new corn, or rather green corn, makes what hog cholera we have. While we no doubt would have plenty of cholera if none of the corn was fed until thoroughly ripe, there is little doubt that the careless feeding of green corn has sent many a porker to an untimely end. A great many farmers allow their hogs to go through the summer with no feed and then when new corn comes there is at once an anxious effort manifest to make up for lost time and to get the hogs ready for market in the shortest possible time, which is by no means always the best for the hogs or the owner.—L. O. Waylance, in Prairie Farmer.

Working Young Horses.

A colt should be thoroughly broken the winter before he is two years old, and should be driven occasionally, both singly and with another horse, to keep in practice what he has learned, as well as to furnish the exercise required to keep his muscles in good condition. If put to work it should be only of the lightest character, and especial care should be taken at first not to gall the shoulders where the collar presses. All the work a two-year-old colt will do without injury costs about as much as it is worth in extra care given to the young animal that it does not injure him.

Good Horses in Demand.

For good horses there will always be a good price going, for if a man cannot sell them in this country, he can sell them in some other country, and the dealers in that country are only too glad to send their representatives to the United States to buy them; but it is only horses of great excellence that they will always surely buy, and to raise this sort should be the aim of every breeder, no matter what sort of stock he has his money in. For one really high-class horse there will always be two buyers.—Rural World.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she could not live till morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night. "All thought she must soon die from pneumonia, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, saying it had more than once saved her life, and had cured her of consumption. After three small doses she slept easily all night, and its further use completely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all throat, chest and lung diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Regret.

As one should lightly rugged ways descend,
O'er trailing tangled vine and hidden snare,
And in her arms a brimming jar should bear,
Till quick misstep half of its wealth should spend
On barren rocks, and evermore should bend
Her long regretful glances back to where
Her treasure so was lost, with little care
For what was left, or where her steps might tend—
So thou, O Heart! who mournest waters sweet,
Thy cup hast wasted in unheeded ways:
Who gropest onward, turning wistful gaze
Forever back, unguiding still thy feet,
Though over treacherous path thy footstep strays,
And ever grows thy treasure's waste complete.
—Annie Steger Winston, in S. S. Times.

Working, Waiting, Hoping.

There are no easy ways that lead
To heights held by the great:
But what of toilsome paths if one
Has found out how to wait?

There is no road to anything
Worth having here below
Where climbing is not lonely work
And difficult and slow.

But he that strives in loneliness
Is paid e'en at the start
For all the years of toil and all
The aches that reach his heart:

For he would never choose the way
Up o'er the toilsome slope
Had Heaven not been kind enough
To favor him with hope.

SONGS BY THE BARDS.

Col. Funston, of Kansas.

Oh, Funston, Col. Funston, here's your country's birth to you:
There isn't anything on earth, it seems, you cannot do!
You've invented ways of fighting that can discount shot and shell,
As, for instance, your great method of assault by Kansas yell.
You are little, but the measure of your fighting force is great,
And for fording streams, we wager you're without a duplicate.

When you learned the art of swimmin' in that "old-time swimmin' hole,"
Where the sunshine dripped and tingled through your very heart and soul,
You were storing up a handy art to have in other days—
And it's brought you, Col. Funston, to the hero's wreath of bays
For your swimmin' with a purpose, with the old flag o'er your head.
As your pistol picked a pathway for the livin' through the dead.

When the Tagals heard your warwhoop and your ringin' chorus swell,
As you leaped upon the trenches with your reef-upliftin' yell.
Your country also heard it, and they've heard it round the world
Wherever Valor's flag of glorious purpose is unfurled.
You've won the nation's plaudits in your own peculiar way,
And you've won it like a soldier, in the forefront of the fray.

You're a mighty good example of the men from out the west,
With a heart of dauntless courage buttoned up within your breast.
There are others who are daring, but to make the foeman run
Seems to strike your understanding like a dandy piece of fun.
You're a credit, sir, to Kansas—to the red and white and blue:
Oh! Funston, Col. Funston, here's your country's health to you!

Her Little Game.

Two years ago we played upon
The graded tennis court,
And, since it kept me near to her,
I found it splendid sport;
I used to hunt the balls she lost,
And, oh! 'twas sweet to see
Her happy look when I contrived
To let her vanquish me.

Last year we rode upon our wheels
And talked of hubs and spokes
And frames and handle bars and laughed
At stupid cycle jokes;
I used to pump her tires up
And clean her chain, and she
Would render ample payment in
Sweet smiles bestowed on me.

This year we flirt upon the links.
Our lanterns are unlit;
We talk of foozles, tees and cleeks
And cannot play a bit;
I wonder when the thing will end;
When next year comes will she
Still, as the cat plays with the mouse,
Be playing on with me?

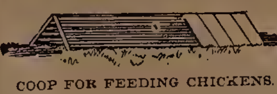
THRIFTY FALL CHICKS.

How to Build a Coop That Will Protect Their Feed from the Greedy Older Flocks.

Last year I raised 300 chicks, but none of them grew and matured so rapidly as the late hatched September brood, and I think it partly due to their generous feeds of cracked corn. Finding that these September chicks were crowded from the feed boards whenever the older flocks were fed, I placed in their yard one of the coop runs, a triangular frame of laths, used earlier in the season to confine mother hens near their coop. I have a dozen of these runs. They are the length of a lath and allow little chicks free ingress and egress, while the mother can but put her head through the slats. The open end of the run I placed against the yard fence and a dish of cracked corn was constantly kept inside which the larger chickens could not reach. The little fellows quickly learned, when hungry, to dart between the slats of this run and eat their fill, safe from the greed of the grown flock. After snow came the run was placed in henhouses, the space between laths increased to allow free passage of this half-grown brood and the dish of cracked corn constantly kept replenished.—Clarissa Potter, in Farm and Home.



COOP FOR FEEDING CHICKENS.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

The Java fowls are the same size, shape and about the general make-up of the Rocks, but they mature earlier, commence to lay earlier, and lay more eggs.

Changing quarters during the laying season will check egg-production. There is nothing gained by it if the fowls are always accommodated with clean quarters.

Give your fowls lime. Bury a few large lumps of lime in the moist earth where the hens frequent. Allow the lime to project a little above the surface to attract them. Lime in the shape of old plaster is also excellent.

Do not forget that the hatchet is the best remedy for sick fowls, but do not apply it in very mild cases. A little cold in fowls may terminate in roup, but a free use of coal oil applied to the nostrils, mouth and throat will usually keep it in check.

The male birds are half the flock. Scarcely anyone now thinks of going through the poultry season without stocking up with thoroughbred roosters of the variety they prefer, or the different varieties, if they prefer an assortment. It is truly wonderful the change that can be made on any flock thus.—National Rural.

Care of Young Chicks.

Never keep any more feed before young chicks than they will eat up clean, when confined in brooder, but after you let them outside the brooder always keep dry grain food in the brooder, in a little trough, so as to entice them to return to the brooder, their only home. See that their feed trough in brooder is full before sundown. Chicks must not be overfed, especially when young. Chicks must be kept warm. Chicks must be taught correct habits in the first days of their youth. Chicks must have more attention than wheat or corn. These rules apply to chicks, ducks and turkeys.—Agricultural Epitomist.

The Cause of It.

"I noticed a decided coolness between you and Blanche last night."

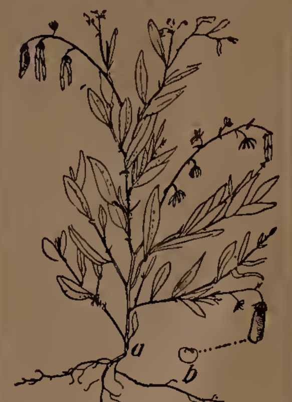
"Yes; she sat on one side of her cousin from Boston and I on the other."

FARM & GARDEN.

THE RATTLEBOX WEED.

Its Poisonous Constituent Is Unknown, But Resides Both in Its Leaves and Seed.

The Latin name of this weed is Crotalaria sagittalis. It is popularly known as rattleweed and wild pea. A government bulletin has this to say of it: It is a hairy annual three to eighteen inches high, with simple undivided leaves one to two inches long and small yellow pea-like flowers appearing in July. The seed pods are about an inch long when mature and are nearly black. They are much inflated, and, as the walls are stiff and thin and very resonant, they make excellent miniature rattles when the seeds have become detached from their fastenings inside the pod. The rattlebox is native in low sandy soils from the Atlantic westward to Minnesota and eastern Kansas. It is also found in New Mexico. It is common in Connecticut, New Jersey and North Carolina, and in some years is very abundant in bottom lands along the valley of the Missouri, in South Dakota and Iowa.



RATTLEBOX PLANT.
A, Whole Plant; B. Section of Seed Pod—Both One-Third Natural Size.

The poisonous constituent is unknown, but it resides both in the leaves and in the seeds. Horses, and sometimes cattle, are killed by eating grass mixed with the plant. They are not poisoned so often by eating the plant in the fields. Public attention was first called to the poisonous nature of the rattlebox by Dr. Stalker, of Iowa, who, in 1884, while investigating the cause among horses in Iowa, was led to believe that it was mostly, if not altogether, attributable to this plant. Experiments were made that proved the supposition to be correct.

The percentage of rattlebox in meadow hay will be much reduced if the fields are burned over when the seeds mature the preceding summer. The growth of perennial grasses will not be materially affected thereby.

THE BEST PAYS BEST.

Farmer Who Grows Something Better Than Can Be Found in the Market Makes Money.

The great difficulty in making farms pay is that most farm crops cannot be assorted into good, better and best. They must be sold at so nearly a uniform price that there is no money in it. In stock growing and in fruit growing such wide differences in value can be made that it is possible to charge the very rich, who always want the best, whatever the best is worth more, and if it be not too easily produced, than this. So long as a man grows only for the universal market, he must sell at prices which even the poorest can pay. But let him grow something better than can be found in the market, and he can get enough higher prices to pay him double for all his extra trouble. This is the secret of getting rich in all kinds of business. Money is to be got from those who have it, and not from those who have it not. Does this forget the poor? Not at all. The struggle to improve quality is always changing its ground. The best of one year is thus placed within the reach of all a few years later, and another best has taken its place.

Barring accidents from untimely frosts, it is the best fruit that pays the most profit and that can be grown most cheaply if the average of years is considered. The labor of spraying with insecticides and with fungicides to make the fruit fair, and the further labor of thinning it, produces so much more fruit every year that it can be sold with profit at rates within the reach of all. The very rich will still get the best and pay for it, but the poorest will get more and better fruit than they ever before enjoyed.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

How to Retain Fertility.

A farmer may be successful and grow large crops, yet become poorer because the land has lost its fertility. Everything sold from the farm is taken from the land, and the supply must at some time become exhausted. Rotation of crops, plowing under of green food and the saving of manure will assist in retaining fertility, but nevertheless much leaves the farm that is never returned unless the farmer buys something in its place. Fertilizers should therefore be used on every farm in order to keep the farm to its highest degree of fertility.

Leghorns and Brahmas do not thrive well together. So far as can be done, have the flocks uniform.

FEEDING THE BEES.

If This Task Is Not Performed Properly Weakening of Colonies Is Sure to Result.

Feeders must be arranged so the bees can get the sirup properly. Ordinary receptacles will not answer, unless partitions or floats of some kind are used to keep the bees from drowning, which they will do in open pans, etc. Wooden feeders are the best, and a thick piece of board guttered out in deep grooves one-half inch wide, with partitions left, which may be very thin, or a heavy block of wood, with holes bored not quite through and filled with the same, answer very nicely. A good frame of old, tough honeycomb may be filled with the sirup from some distance above it with something like a common sprinkler, except that the holes are larger. This drives the sirup to the bottom of the cells, and expels the air, and when filled it may be turned over without the sirup running out, and the other side treated likewise.

All feeding should be done in the night time with the above kind of feed; that is, the feed may be given the bees late in the evening, between sundown and dark. If given them during the day it will cause a great uproar among them and may result in robbing and fighting generally. Upper stories should be used to place the feeders, and should be closed so that bees cannot pass in or out of the same from above.—A. H. Duff, in National Rural.

How to Destroy Vermin.

Do not try to poison rats until you first bait them. To do so place choice food where they can get it. After awhile they will cease to be suspicious and will anticipate the regular time for feeding. After they have found out that you are their best friend, go to a drug store and get some phosphorous paste. Give them a double mess of food with the phosphorous paste well mixed in, and the chances are that you will kill everyone in the neighborhood. Lice, however, must be fought at all times, as they multiply rapidly, and delay is in their favor.—Farm and Fireside.

Owes No Man Anything.

Sheep are unlike all other stock, if decently managed. A good sheep can never die in debt to a man. If it dies when weaned it has consumed nothing. If it dies the first winter the wool will pay for its keep up to that period. If it lived to be sheared once, it brings its owner in debt to it, and if the ordinary course of wool production and breeding goes on, that indebtedness increases with great rapidity as long as the sheep lives. If the horse or steer dies at three or four years old or the cow before breeding, the loss is almost a total one —Free Press, Ontario, Canada.

Clover Stimulates Growth.

There are more elements for producing growth in clover than in corn, as clover is richer in both lime and nitrogen than corn. The feeding of corn and clover, or a variety of food produces better results than when only a single kind of food is allowed, because there is then a balance in the elements required for support and less waste, the animal making more growth of bone when young and increasing more rapidly in weight when matured.

By sprinkling a little salt on obnoxious weeds the sheep will be induced to completely destroy them at some stage of growth, which, without their aid, would be extremely difficult to eradicate.

Making Use of Weeds.

A crop of weeds that are nearly matured, but which have not produced seeds, is one that will pay if it is plowed under. Even weeds can thus be put to good use if rightly handled but the farmer who allows a single weed to produce seed multiplies his work in the future. There is no waste of time in killing weeds, as no work on the farm pays better if future labor is considered.

How Salt Helps Fertility.

While the soda and chlorine of salt have no manural properties, there is often a decided effect from using salt as topdressing for land that has organic matter. Only very small amounts are used per acre, and thus the salt hastens decomposition, and this sets free whatever carbonic acid gas or ammonia the organic matter contains. Salt is usually thought of as a preservative. It is so when in amounts large enough to pickle what it is applied to. When carbonic acid gas is liberated, that acts as a solvent on the inert potash and phosphate that the soil contains, thus often serving in place of those minerals at much less cost than if they were bought and applied.

The Husband—Haven't I told you again and again that I want you to trade at Fales' Grocery Store?

Wife—That's all right, but I saved a cent on a dollar's worth of sugar at another store.

Husband—That may be, but you said yourself that the sugar somehow didn't seem to sweeten the food like other sugar.

Wife—So I did; I forgot that. Tell Mr. Fales' man to stop here on his rounds tomorrow. His Groceries are good enough for me, after all.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 17. FRANKLIN, MASS., TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1900. SINGLE COPIES 3 CENTS.

Norfolk C. E. Union.

The February meeting of the Norfolk C. E. Union which was held at the Congregational church at Walpole last Thursday proved one of the very best ever held by the union. The attendance at both afternoon and evening sessions was remarkable considering the extremely inclement weather. At once on entering the church the visitor was impressed with the hospitable atmosphere of the house itself, and with the additional warm greeting from the pastor and his people all were made to feel perfectly at home and glad to be there. The profuse decorations of our national colors with which the organ and altar were draped were exceedingly attractive and effective, and deserve special mention.

The exercises by the Juniors of the church showed conscientious work on the part of those having them in charge and gave evidence of a most flourishing society. The only speaker of the afternoon was Rev. W. J. Minchin of Wrentham, his subject being "Our Country's Glory." Mr. Minchin touched upon the subject of our nation's peril, but dwelt at length upon the names of Washington and Lincoln, men to whom we own much of our country's glory. His remarks were made in a most earnest manner and the audience could not fail to feel the force and power of his words.

The consecration service was marked by a deep spiritual sentiment and was a helpful and inspiring service. Next followed the conference of committees and the social hour, the latter taking place in the vestry at the well spread tables which the hospitality of the society had provided to meet the needs of the inner man.

After a half hour's praise service by the choir and congregation and a solo by Mrs. C. L. Stewart, the speaker of the evening, Rev. E. I. House of Dorchester was introduced, and in a few exceedingly witty introductory remarks at once won the attention and interest of his audience. The theme of Mr. House's oration was "My Country and I," and not only did the speaker wax eloquent over his subject, but the power of his words came home with force to the hearts of every loyal Christian citizen present. Altogether the convention was in in its character most inspiring and uplifting and a blessed season of enjoyment and profit to all who were present. L.

"Fritz In a Mad House."

Just about ten years ago Lottie Gilson appeared in New York city on the stage of Tony Pastor's theatre and made what is known as a "howling hit." She received encore after encore, and the following day the New York World gave to her the credit of being the most magnetic artist before the public and christened her "The Little Maget." In a tour of the continent Miss Gilson appeared with great success at the following places: In Europe, Hamburg, Colon, Leipsig, Dresden; Prague, Geneva. She was a tremendous success in Great Britain, and appeared at the Crystal, London, Tivoli, Oxford and Royal Holborn, London. In Paris she appeared with great success at the Foles Berge. All through the German Empire Miss Gilson sang her songs in German, and so won the hearts of these lovers of music that she was spoken of by them as the American gestinger. She then returned to America and late last season joined hands with J. K. Emmet, known throughout the country for his impersonation of the ever popular series of plays, entitled "Fritz." Their success was instantaneous, and this happy combination of mirth and music bids fair to become one of the strongest aggregation in the country. Surrounded by a company of incomparable players, Miss Gilson and J. K. Emmet will appear at the Morse opera house March 3 in a careful revival of the famous comedy success, "Fritz in a Mad House," with Mr. Emmet in his character of "Fritz" and Miss Gilson as "Collie Parker." Seats on sale at Dana's.

A Rich Treat.

Invite your friends to attend the illustrated lecture to be delivered by Rev. T. J. B. House of Boston on Sunday evening, March 4, at the Opera house, of which the Cambridge Chronicle says: "On the evening of April 6 the Cambridgeport W. C. T. U. had the pleasure of listening to Mr. House's illustrated lecture. The hall in which it was held was full to overflowing and a number were obliged to go away, unable to obtain seats. A minister who was present said 'It was the best piece of missionary work that had been done in Cambridge for some time.' Another said, 'Such lectures do more good than it is possible to tell.'"

William Rockwood this year declined a renomination as assessor after about 20 years' service in that capacity and as collector of taxes. His long experience was a means of valuable aid on the boards where he served, and he was renominated at the Republican caucus in spite of his request not to use his name.

A NOTABLE LIFE ENDED.

[CONTRIBUTED.]

The lives of few men are so interwoven in the life of a community as was that of Joseph Gordon Ray in all that pertained to the business, social and moral life of the town of Franklin. The news, therefore, of his unexpected death last Saturday morning came as a shock to the whole community, which lost in his death its leading citizen. For some days he had been ill, but seemed to be returning to health, and even on Saturday morning expressed himself as feeling much better. The end came very suddenly and painlessly about 7 o'clock, the cause being an affection of the arteries of the heart, called arterial sclerosis. The shock of his death shadows the whole town, bringing sorrow to a wide circle of relatives and friends, as well as to those who knew him only as the upright, public-spirited citizen. He was the last of three brothers whose names have been for years prominently identified with the manufacturing interests of Massachusetts and Rhode Island—men who were the pioneers in this vicinity in the manufacture of woolen goods. His two older brothers were James P. Ray, who died in 1894, and Francis B., who died in 1892.

Mr. Ray was born in Mendon, now East Blackstone, Mass., Oct. 4, 1831, the son of Joseph and Lydia (Paine) Ray. His education was obtained in the schools of his native town, with one year in the public schools of Nashua, N. H., and his fifteenth year in the schools of Walpole, N. H. He began to work in the mill of his brother, James P., in Unionville, at an early age. In 1850 he was employed by his two brothers in their mill in the same village, and during his first year of service started the first "rag-picker" and manufactured the first "shoddy" in this section. The next year he became a member of the firm, now taking the name of Ray Brothers. In 1860 Francis B. retired and the business was then carried on for many years under the firm name of J. P. & J. G. Ray. By successive purchases they added to their original plant at Unionville, the Bartlett mill in Woonsocket, the North Bellingham mill, and in 1870 built their first mill at Franklin, which was followed by another in the same place in 1877. These holdings were the beginning of what later became the Rays' Woolen company, so long and so well known to all Franklin people. In 1876 they purchased also the mill of the Putnam Manufacturing company, Putnam, Conn., and with others the City Mills, Franklin. Beginning with lower grades of work in both cotton and woolen goods, they have advanced to the highest grades and their goods have won an enviable name in the markets of the country. In recent years others have been associated with Mr. Ray in his mill business, and very recently the woolen mills have passed into the control of the American Woolen company, and the felt mills, with which he was associated, have become a part of the American Felt company.

With the lapse of years his business interests grew wider and wider and the mere enumeration of those concerns with which he was connected will show how far his business insight reached, and in how many interests he was a leading and active spirit. He was president of the American Felt company, an organization which is due largely to his foresight and energy; and also vice president of the American Woolen company, one of the largest corporations in the country; president of the Milford, Attleboro and Woonsocket Street Railway company; formerly president and large owner of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Railroad company; president of the Franklin National bank; director of the Boston and Montana Copper company; vice-president of the National and Providence Worsted company; director of the Old Dominion Copper company; director of the Citizens' National bank of Woonsocket; director of the Woonsocket and Pascoag railroad; director of the Charles River Woolen company, now operating the North Bellingham mill; large owner in the Woonsocket Electric Light and Power company—all these positions and many others made his business life an unusually active and far-reaching one.

With these large business activities he still had time always to be interested in everything that pertained to the well-being of the town in which he lived. He resided in East Blackstone until 1861, and for several years was assessor and chairman of the selectmen. At the age of 28 he represented this town in the House of Representatives and was the youngest member of that body. Removing to Unionville, he first began that active interest in the life of Franklin that has continued from that day to this. In 1870 he bought a place in Franklin proper, a part of the old Emmons farm, and built the house which he has occupied till his death. He represented this senatorial district in the legislature of 1869 and was a delegate to the national Republican convention held in Chicago in 1884. He was a member of Excelsior lodge, A. F. & A. M., of this place and also of the Woonsocket commandery.

JOSEPH GORDON RAY.

He married in 1854, Emily, daughter of Col. Joseph and Anne Rockwood of Bellingham, who, with two children, Lydia P. and Mrs. A. D. Thayer, survives him.

It is rare to find a man who so thoroughly exemplified the qualities of a good citizen as did Joseph G. Ray. For more than forty years he has been actively identified with everything that would make for the prosperity of the town and its citizens. No man has been more earnest in seeking to bring business to the town; no man has given steadier and wiser support to home enterprise than he. He has been the trusted counsellor and the financial supporter of every considerable activity in all these years. In company with his brother, he entered upon the building of railroads that should connect Franklin with outside points, not because he was sure of financial profit, but because they seemed to him to be a public benefit. He had only recently become the owner of the Franklin Water Works in order that this corporation might be under the control of those interested rather than under the control of outsiders. If we study any phase of town development, we are sure to find his money, his hand, and his heart behind the work. He was early interested to bring the Worcester County National bank, then located at Blackstone, to Franklin, and through his efforts a congressional act was passed allowing this to be done and changing its name. He has been president of this institution since the death of James P. Ray and has been active also in the Franklin Savings bank and the Co operative bank. He was also president of the Franklin Library association and the Franklin Cemetery association. Though averse to holding public office, he gave to every detail of municipal affairs his time and attention as a good citizen should. Officials looked to him always for advice and support and never failed to find in him a firm supporter. The moral welfare of the town was even closer to his heart, than its financial prosperity, and his time and money were given freely to anything and everything that looked to the uplifting of the community life. He was a politician in the best sense of the word, active and earnest in his Republicanism and a generous contributor to the success of that party through all his life. He never sought office and even declined to become a candidate for congressional honours, but his voice was a potent one in the councils of the party, and few men in Massachusetts were more influential in his own quiet way than he. His word of recommendation has been a powerful influence in appointments and elections—a word that was given only with caution and foresight. He had an eye single for the best good of his party, his town and his country.

As a business man Mr. Ray had exceptional qualities. The mere mention of his official positions indicates how widely his business abilities were in demand. His success in these varied directions were due to qualities inherent in the man himself. He was a hard worker, desiring always to master thoroughly every enterprise in which he embarked. He was gifted with a marvelous memory for the details of a business that enabled him to keep ready in his mind matters which would baffle most men. His success was helped, too, by a wonderful foresight as regards business conditions; there have been few changes that his alert mind has not anticipated, and thus he has been able to take advantage of conditions rather than to follow in their wake. A man of sterling integrity and business honor, he has expected and generally found the same qualities in those with whom he had business dealings and those whom he has trusted as subordinates. He has been an indefatigable worker always and his business successes have been due to this as well as the other traits mentioned. With all his success he was never a man who begrudged success in others. In fact it may be truly said that he was always glad to see others succeed and to help them in any way that he could. In quiet, unostentatious ways he has helped many young men to start in life, giving them means to enter on business, and his wisest counsel. If he could help any man who was in financial trouble, or who needed the benefit of his advice, it seemed a pleasure to him to lend a helping hand, and there was no trait of envy or jealousy in any of his business dealings with his fellows. It certainly is not true of him, as it is of so many, that success made him hard and intolerant of those who fail in their endeavors. His name stands as a synonym of business honor, business fair dealing and business charitableness, as well as of business [illegible].

To the Universalist church in this community Mr. Ray was always a loyal and devoted friend; its interests were always dear to his heart. Ever since the church was established he has been actively engaged in its work in every department and has been its most generous supporter. For many years he has been a member of the church organization and has given to it constant service. As chairman of the parish committee and trustee of the church fund he has served the parish wisely and well, and it will miss a consecrated and generous friend. His interest extended to the denomination at large, in which he has been a leading laymen, giving freely of his counsel and of his means to support the undertakings of the general church.

Dean academy has had no stauncher friend than Mr. Ray. As the counsellor and helper of Dr. Dean, he was actively interested in the inception of the school and was a member of the building committee. From that time to the present hour his zeal has neither flagged nor wavered. In the darkest times of its history he has always supplied courage; in times of financial trouble he has been the stay and support. It is hardly too much to say that Dean academy would not exist today if it had not been for his wise and devoted friendship. His name will be indissolubly connected with the school. Few can realize how much time and effort he has put into its work. Busy as he was, he was ready to give his attention to the smallest details and to spend money freely in anything that pertained to the well-being of the academy. The administration of the school, the investment of its funds, the care of its buildings, the welfare of its students have been constantly on his mind and heart; it was his expressed desire to be useful to it in every way possible. He took much pride in it and was such a friend as few institutions ever have.

Few men had so large a circle of friends and it will be as a friend that the community at large will best remember him. There was a large-heartedness about him and a kindliness toward his fellowmen that drew all toward him. It was natural to turn to him for help or for advice and no deserving person ever went to Mr. Ray for either without coming away satisfied that in him they had a kind friend. The instances of this kindness are innumerable and no one but himself and the recipients of his help can tell how wide-reaching was his benevolence. Many a young man has been helped in his education; many a poor family has received aid and comfort; many business men have been started in life by his influence or support. If any man found himself overwhelmed with financial troubles, it was Mr. Ray's counsel, or loan of money that tided over the crisis. With a life brimful of activities, he found time to listen patiently to every call that came to him and listened as if your trouble was his trouble. All classes of people found in him a trusted counsellor. He had a remarkable knowledge of men and insight into character and to a marked degree was a lover of his fellowmen. This made life always worth living to him and made him love to live and to do. It can be said of him as was said of Longfellow that when "men came to his door, his love met them at the threshold."

> "His greeting smile was pledge and prelude
> Of generous deeds and kindly words."

It was this aspect of his life that brings his death close home to so many hearts of our community. He was never weary of doing for his neighbors and friends. To know the need was to him a call of duty. One of his last acts was of this nature. Reading in the SENTINEL during his sickness, of the settling of the foundation of the local Catholic church and the need of repairs, and knowing how much effort the Society had put into their new building, he sent a generous and unsolicited check to Father Lee. This is but one instance of many similar good deeds. We mourn for a kind, true friend:

> "For the warmest of hearts is frozen,
> The freest of hands is still;
> And the gap in our picked and chosen
> The long years may not fill.
> No duty could overtask him,
> No need his will outrun;
> Or ever our lips could ask him,
> His hands the work had done."

It was in the home and the home life that Mr. Ray lived most. Even those outside can realize how strong were the ties of love and loyalty that bound him to the home circle. Home and family were sacred to him and to them he gave the best of his heart and life. Keen as is the loss to the community and deeply as we miss the honored man and the kindly friend, our loss is little in comparison to that of those who were nearest and dearest to him. To that home and its inmates, the hearts of the whole community go out in loving sympathy in this their great sorrow.

> "Such was our friend. Formed on the good old plan—
> A true and brave and downright honest man!
> Loathing pretense, he did with cheerful will
> What others talked of while their hands were still.
> His daily prayer—far better understood
> In acts than words—was simply DOING GOOD.
> So calm, so constant was his rectitude,
> That by his loss alone we know its worth,
> And feel how true a man has walked with us on earth."

Condolence.

The officers and directors of the Franklin National Bank desire to express their deep sorrow over the death of their president, the Hon. Joseph G. Ray. His sudden removal from the activities of earth and from the position in our bank which he so ably held for many years plunges us into the deepest grief. While we can no longer avail ourselves of his rare advice, or follow his wise counsel, we rejoice that his brilliant example will remain with us forever. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family and contribute our note of sadness to the vast chorus of grief that follows him in his departure from the busy scenes of earth.

DIRECTORS FRANKLIN NAT'L BANK.

The death of the Hon. Joseph G. Ray came as a stunning blow to the trustees of the Benjamin Franklin Savings bank, upon whose advice they had always leaned in the management of its affairs.

To his fidelity to the trust committed to him, and his wise counsels, has been largely due the safety of its funds.

Most highly esteemed as a courteous gentleman, a true friend, and a wise counsellor, we, his associates, wish hereby to express our deep grief at his sudden loss.

Alden Club Postponement.

The entertainment to have been given at Dean academy last evening by Jeanette Robinson Murphy has been postponed.

It seemed neither fitting nor possible to allow it to take place there on the evening preceding the funeral of our most prominent citizen, and one whose life has been so interwoven with the academy. I had neither time nor strength to call or attend a board meeting, and so assumed the responsibility of postponing the program, feeling that our club members would be in harmony with me. It will be given later, as soon as details can be arranged.

Republican Caucus.

One of the largest assemblages in a long time met in Music hall on Friday evening, unusual interest being manifested in the selection of candidates. Chairman Chapman read the call and the meeting selected Bradley M. Rockwood as presiding officer and J. E. Barber as secretary.

Immediately upon opening Attorney Ruggles desired to know why certain names handed to the committee were not placed upon the ballot. Mr. Chapman, speaking for himself, said the committee had acted according to its best judgment in presenting the names to the party. Mr. Ruggles insisted that a preceding meeting had instructed the board to do so, but Mr. Chapman replied that the board did not so interpret it, but had simply requested it. The matter rested there.

The electric road matter appeared to have been made the direct issue. Word had been passed around that Dr. Abbott and Mr. Clark were pledged to the road and Dr. Gallison was considered favorable, owing to his action on the present board; therefore, the voters cast for them the bulk of the votes.

C. F. Nye, E. D. Daniels, W. C. Sherman and C. B. Johnson were appointed tellers, and after about an hour's work reported as follows:

Selectmen—
*Alfred Clark, Jr.,	97
*E. C. Abbott,	85
*J. C. Gallison,	81
Amos P. Woodward,	48

The Fitchburg Sentinel's Report.

"At 6.45 Thursday evening crowds were waiting for the gates to be opened at the Opera house, and at 7.45 the house was was filled to its utmost capacity. Nothing that has been said in praise of Mr. House's lecture is too strong. The views are simply life-like in their clearness. The beautiful wife, the sad-faced child, the unfortunate drunkard are real, living characters as they are brought before the audience. As for the dissolving views nothing approaching them in beauty has ever been seen in Fitchburg."

Do not miss hearing Dr. House at the Morse opera house on Sunday evening, March 4, at 7.30 o'clock. All seats free and no collection.

The Lowell Morning Citizen Said:

"An old story was told in a new way at Huntington hall last night by Rev. T. J. B. House. Many plans have been tried by the advocates of temperance to extend the work, but that used by Mr. House is, in its way, unique. He makes no direct appeal or exhortation, but tells a story, a tragedy of every day life, and illustrates it by stereopticon views from life."

Everyone should make a special effort to attend this lecture which is to be delivered at the Morse opera house Sunday evening, March 4, at 7.30 p. m. Admission free. No collection.

TENNIS BALLS

Are of two kinds; the ball that is used in playing the game, and the dancing party which is often given at the end of the tournament.

Some people contend you cannot make a good cup of tea without a tea ball, but we know that if you use Chase & Sanborn's package teas you can make good tea by any of the approved methods.

This is because you have good tea to begin with.

Poor teas cannot result in a healthful, delicious beverage, no matter how carefully you try to brew them.

With Chase & Sanborn's package teas you are sure of getting the best that money, skill and experience can produce.

It makes no difference whether you try their Kohinoor, which is a fine breakfast tea, the Orloff, a Formosa Oolong with a delicate lilac flavor, or the Orange Pekoe, with its rich wine-like body.

Inasmuch as these teas are sold only in pound and half-pound air tight Tea Lead packages you are sure of getting the genuine article, with all its natural strength and freshness preserved.

One pound makes over 200 cups.

Baling Clover in the Field.

It is claimed that clover hay may be baled in the field, but the experiments made are not sufficient to show the benefits derived compared with storing clover in the mow. The clover is cut in the morning, after it is free from dew or rain, and when well wilted the hay tedder is used, so as to give it every chance to cure. In the afternoon the hay is baled and hauled to the barn. If this method is practiced care must be exercised in having the hay properly cured and in just the proper condition for baling, as baled clover is more liable to heat than timothy or other kinds.

ITALIANIZING BEES.

Fall is the Best Season for This Work as Queens Can Then Be Had Cheaply.

Autumn is the best time to Italianize bees. Queens can be secured at half price during the fall months, and by thus changing queens we have the advantage of the Italian stock the following spring. We can successfully introduce queens during the fall months as long as the weather is warm enough to handle bees. At the price queens can be bought for now it almost pays to requeen every colony that has queens over one year old, with young queens of the present season's raising.

Young queens introduced now will produce a good supply of late bees that will withstand the winter and, as a result, will come out strong in the spring. Young queens will, as a rule, lay a good supply of eggs during the fall months, when old queens will cease laying entirely in midsummer unless there is an unusual flow of honey late in the season or they are supplied with feed.

The usual course pursued in changing queens, or introducing the same is, first remove the old queen; and it is preferable to place her in a cage and preserve her until the new queen is safely introduced and laying. If any mishap occurs to the new queen the old one can be returned. In frame hives it is an easy matter to find the queen by simply lifting out the frames and carefully looking them over; the queen being much larger than the worker bees, is readily detected. In other hives that are not movable frame, or in common box hives, it is not impossible, but they may be Italianized also.—National Rural.

Some farmers have wives whom they work like slaves, and soon these once fair specimens of God's work grow gray and wrinkled. If the drudgery continues, death follows and the farmer is left wifeless. There is something in this life to work for besides money. Wealth is a nice thing to have, but health is far greater and more necessary. A man or woman in good health is a millionaire though penniless. At the rate some farm women go about their endless tasks they are quite likely to lose the latter and miss the former. Their should be rest, recuperation and enjoyment in the farm home. It can be made the happiest place on earth if its owner so elects.—Farmers' Voice.

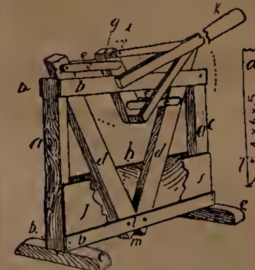
HANDY GRIT MACHINE.

Where Large Flocks of Poultry Are Kept One Will Be Found a Wonderful Convenience.

It can be built any size and any lumber will do. The construction of the machine can be easily studied out from the illustration. My crusher is made up as follows: Two supporters, aa, each four feet six inches long, of 4x4 inch lumber resting on board supports, c, two feet long and six inches high. Nail on the four cross pieces, b, four feet long, since 1x4 inches. Make the two crushing arms, d, each five feet long and of 4x6 inch lumber. The lower five inches are leveled off so that the two arms work together something like a hinge. Just above the beveled part attach an iron plate, h, 4x6 inches and one-quarter inch thick, against which the stone is crushed. Make a hole, l, in the lower end of each crusher arm for an iron pin. The smaller cut at the right shows the details of the crusher arm. There must be space enough at m to let through the fine crushed stone.



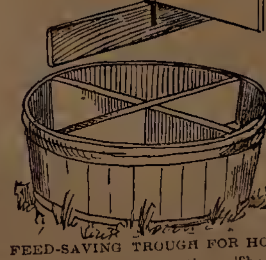
POULTRY STONE CRUSHER.

The handle part is made as follows: The central block, gg, is of 4x4 inch lumber and two feet long. It is attached by a bolt through the middle of the handle, k, which is five feet long and strengthened by side pieces fastened to the main block by tight bolts at i, passing through small blocks 2x2x2 inches at g. The four connecting strips, e, are of 1x2 inch stuff bolted at one end loosely to g, but at the other end tightly to d. The machine is now complete except to nail boards, jj, on the sides to keep in the stones.—American Agriculturist.

OUT-OF-DOOR FEEDING.

Description of a Trough That Is Sure to Keep the Hogs from Crowding Each Other.

Where several hogs are quartered in an orchard or other pasture they must be fed out-of-doors. To keep each one from crowding and fighting his neighbor when eating, make such a trough as is shown in the illustration.



FEED-SAVING TROUGH FOR HOGS.

The bottom part of a barrel is sawed off and two narrow strips of board are fitted together and nailed firmly into the trough, as in the drawing. A flour barrel can be made to answer this temporary purpose, but a trough from a stouter barrel will prove more lasting. — American Agriculturalist.

"It Micht Ha' Been Waur."

When failures becloud the blue of your sky
And troubles begin in torrents to pour,
Just think of the floods that others have whelmed
And say to yourself: "It micht ha' been waur."
—You're drenched but no droon'd; it micht ha' been waur!

When out on life's sea your vessel is wrecked,
Beyond the relief of a humanly shore,
Cling fast to the spar God's put in your hand
And say to yourself: "It micht ha' been waur."
—Some haven't a spar; it micht ha' been waur!

When Death, blanching Death, stalks into your street
And knocks with appalling hand at your door;
Hold fast to the hope God's put in your heart
And say to yourself: "It micht ha' been waur."
—What if you'd nae hope! It micht ha' been waur!

And when you shall stand before the great Judge,
Who'll open the book and scan your life o'er,
May He in His love forgive where you've tried,
And say to your soul: "It mich ha' been waur."
"Gang ye wi' the sheep, it micht ha' been waur!"

—John H. Finley, in Chicago Interior.

June.

The bumblebees delve in the thick red clover,
Tousling and tumbling it over and over;
The far sun shines and the winds go by,
And a sparrow-hawk poises above in the sky.

There is little to learn from the flight of the swallow,
Who leads where his gathering comrades follow;
The stream runs slow and the hills are high,
And the sparrow-hawk poises above in the sky.

And a clear, sweet note from the ground is ringing,
Where a bird in the silence now is singing;
Like drifts of snow do the white clouds lie,
And the sparrow-hawk poises above in the sky.

In the pasture's breadth is a brown song-sparrow—
There's a rush of wings like a whistling arrow—
Forever and aye must the sweet notes die,
And a sparrow-hawk poises above in the sky.

—Ernest McGaffey, in Woman's Home Companion.

Compensation.

O little curly head of mine, you play about all day,
You've many a lark out in the park while I must work away;
You never have a single care to mar your childish joy—
Your little sphere is far more fair than mine was as a boy.

O little curly head of mine, there are no cows that you
Must go to bring just when there's something else you'd rather do;
There is no churn for you to turn, no hoeing to be done,
No pump to work, no wood to burn that you must chop, my son.

O little curly head of mine, it sometimes grieves me that
You should be shut up here in town to languish in a flat,
But still there are no briers here to scratch your legs to-day—
There are no weeds to pull, my dear, when you would rather play.

—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

When Virtue Triumphed.

There was a man who tried to do
The very best he could;
He held that being rich was not
As fair as being good;
Sly tempters tried to pull him down,
Their schemes were all in vain;
He would not turn from righteous ways
For power or for gain.

Full many a snare was laid for him
By men of evil minds;
He passed unsmirched through troubled scenes
Of many various kinds;
Where others would have faltered he Still held to honor's course,
Unhindered by chicanery,
Unterrified by force.

He was a good man through and through,
A better never was;
He always scorned unlawful means,
No matter what the cause:
With honor as his watchword he
Pursued his righteous way,
And won out at the end, but, but ah!
This man was in a play.

IT'S NO USE—

A man simply can't make any sort of success in business if he's tortured with backache.

That means if his kidneys are out of order.

Backache is really kidney ache.

It is one of the first indications of kidney disease. It's bad enough of itself, but it leads to a great deal worse.

Unless it is stopped.

How?

Doan's Kidney Pills

There's not a form of kidney trouble that this wonderful little remedy will not cure, and the people stay cured.

Mr. John C. Melloon, grocer and provision merchant at the corner of Bridge and 7th streets, Lowell, Mass., says:—

"In the spring of 1896 I was forced, from severe pain in the back, to procure Doan's Kidney Pills at Ellingwood & Co.'s drug store, at the corner of Merrimack and Central streets, and take a course of the treatment. It was speedily followed by absolute relief, and up to date I have not had a symptom of a return."

RHYTHMIC RAYS.

May.

The blackbirds follow slow behind the plow,
Or whistle from the maple's swaying bough;
The robin builds her nest among the leaves,
And countless swallows twitter 'neath the eaves.

The plowboy walks behind his smoking team,
And guides aright the plow's unwieldy beam;
The coal-black furrows rising fall and break,
And lie like billows in his journey's wake.

The woods have flung their banners to the world—
Green flags of leaves to every wind unfurled;
And in the fields, by thicket and by fence,
The rabbits hide in grassy cover dense.

Pertly and saucily the old cock quail
Whistles "Bob White" from off the topmost rail;
And when the evening flutters out her cloak,
From roadside ponds the deep-voiced bullfrogs croak.

And jingingly along the country lane,
With broken chords of rustic, rude refrain,
As sinks the sun from his high, ruddy dome,
In Indian file the cows come trooping home

A little dog bayed at the moon one night,
But the moon didn't seem to care;
And other dogs heard the little dog bay,
And, smiling, each trotted upon his way,
Thinking: "What a fool is there?"

A man sat down and grumbled at fate,
But fate didn't seem to care;
And other men heard what he had to say,
And, scoffing, each passed and pursued his way,
Saying: "What a fool is there."

A Song of Truth.

Life is not long enough for idle dreaming,
For sighs sent out to unresponding hearts;
Soon have the shadows fallen, all too soon
The light of life departs.

'Tis sweet, I know, to sigh of hopeless longing;
To sing of broken hearts and vanished beauty,
But, after all, life in its truest meaning
Is conscientious duty.

—Annie L. Perkins, in Washington Star.

An Editor's Life Saved by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

During the early part of October, 1896, I contracted a bad cold which settled on my lungs and was neglected until I feared that consumption had appeared in an incipient state. I was constantly coughing and trying to expel something which I could not. I became alarmed and after giving the local doctor a trial bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the result was immediate improvement. After I had used three bottles my lungs were restored to their healthy state.—B. S. Edwards, publisher of the Review, Wyant, Ill. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

"The Better Part

Of valor is discretion," and the better part of the treatment of disease is prevention. Disease originates in impurities in the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood. People who take it at this season say they are kept healthy the year round. It is because this medicine expels impurities and makes the blood rich and health giving.

All liver ills are cured by Hood's Pills. 25c.

I'm just as proud of Dewey as a feller well can be,
No Rockerbilt or Vandergould can like him more than me;
No millionaire in all the world, no matter what his mun,
Can take more pride in Dewey and the things that Dewey done.

But they have much the best of it makin' Dewey think
That they're the only pebbles when it comes to meal and drink;
They're askin' him to dinner, and a-blowin' in their stuff
In wads so big you'd hardly think the world could hold enough.

They're sendin' swords out to him that are made o' solid gold,
Enough to fill his cabin and to stock his bloomin' hold;
They're buyin' city houses and a-givin' 'em to him,
In such a way as I should think would make his thinker swim.

But I—I ain't got nothin' for to show him what I think,
But you can bet I'll not set by and get the rinky-dink!
An' what I kin do I will do, and sort of kinder teach
These millionaires they're not the only pebbles on the beach.

So I have written Dewey just a single little line

A Boston teacher had carefully explained to her class the meaning of the word "happens." "Now," she said, "if there is anything you do not understand in what I have been telling you, just raise your hand."

Not a hand was raised. "If you understand how it should be used, who can give me a sentence with this word 'happens' in it?"

Quickly a hand was raised, and an eager voice called out: "My mother wears happens in her head."—N. Y. Truth.

Inevitable.

If all the girls would love you,
And smile as you pass by,
Would clouds ne'er form above you,
To hide the distant sky?
Ah, yes! If you were treated
To boundless love, my friend,
You'd think that you were cheated,
And search on till the end
For some cold-hearted creature
Who, after she was found,
Would ne'er relax a feature
While you were mooning round.

Not Good for Ensilage.

A small experimental silo was filled with cut turnips and heavily weighted. The material contained 9.5 per cent. dry matter. The experiment was tried in mid-winter, with cold turnips and in a cold room. There was no appreciable rise in temperature, and all went well for about two weeks when the mass gave way and fell in. There was too little dry matter, particularly of a fibrous nature, to hold together the mass. The result was as expected and the moral is, Don't.—Vermont Station Bulletin.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood. If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

RAISE GOOD HOGS.

Well-Bred Rangy Animals Are the Most Ready Sellers and Bring the Best Prices.

If a person who knows anything at all about hog feeding was given a chance between a hog that would gain 23 pounds in six weeks and one that would gain 90 pounds in the same time on the same feed, he would not be long in choosing. During the past ten months the Kansas experiment station has fed 190 hogs that were bought of the farmers in the vicinity of Manhattan without regard to breed or breeding, just as they were, thrifty and weighing in the neighborhood of 100 or 125 pounds. This class of hogs is used because those experiments are for the highest benefit of the farmers, and by taking the stock they raise we stay within their conditions. A few conclusions may be drawn from the following facts taken from observations of feeding 80 head of hogs which were just finished. These hogs were nearer of the same age than size, and ranged from the long, big- boned bacon hog, to the short-boned chunk, according to the care or carelessness of the farmer who raised them. First, as to point of gain: The comparisons are between hogs fed the same in every respect. The best and poorest five out of twenty have the following showing: Best five, weight at beginning of test 596 pounds, gain 416 pounds, 70 per cent.; poorest five, weight at beginning of test 579 pounds, gain 235 pounds, 40 per cent. This was for a period of 42 days, and from observations made from week to week, this difference of gain from a little over one pound to practically two pounds a day was largely due to the breeding. A short, small-boned chunk will make good gains for a few weeks and then stop. It will be fat and ready for market, while a well-bred rangy hog will fatten and continue to grow and make good gains for a much longer period. Then as to the demand of the market: The three-rib shoulder is now one of the most profitable cuts that is made for export trade. Hogs from which these cuts are made must be large and muscular, long and rangy. The short, small-boned chunk will not answer the purpose. The bacon hog is also of the latter description and brings the best price on the markets. Well-bred rangy hogs make the most profitable gains, are the most ready sale and bring the best price on the market. — J. G. Haney, in Prairie Farmer.

Producing Early Peaches.

Mr. J. H. Hale, the great American peach grower, is reported to have said that he gets peaches two weeks earlier by the following method: In the middle of the growing season put a strong wire around a large arm of a tree and twist it fairly tight. This checks the flow of sap and causes fruit buds to form early and in great number. The fruit on the branches of this arm will ripen two weeks earlier than that on the untreated branches and will be much more highly colored. But this part of the tree will be so weakened by the treatment that it should be cut away after fruiting, that new shoots may come and take its place. Thus one large arm or limb of a tree may be forced each year.

Sunning the Dairy Pails.

The good old practice of sunning the dairy pails should not be forgotten, even though in many cases we have laid aside the shallow pans. The sun is a microbe killer of the first magnitude. He not only kills the microbes, but so thoroughly dries out the pails and other utensils of tin that the process of rusting is stopped. Wooden pails and utensils are also improved by being submitted to the solar rays. This of course should be done in the open air, where the atmosphere is not poisoned or impregnated by foul odors, and where the wind can have a full sweep.—Farmers' Review.

THE CLOSING SCENES.

A Remarkable Clerical, Floral, Musical and Personal Tribute Paid.

> "This was a man; God send us more. To poverty and humble station born, he knew no bar to progress. By toil he carved his way to manhood's strength. when Fortune saw his efforts, smiled and led him on. With counsel wise, discretion keen and action prompt, his place amongst the foremost men he took and held; none said him nay. Of kindly nature, generous withal, a smile, a word of cheer, and aid substantial oft he dealt to sufferers' needs. His face, his form, his deeds will ever live in hearts appreciative and full."—PIERSON.

To no one in Franklin has ever a more fitting tribute of respect, esteem and love been paid than that to Joseph G. Ray on Tuesday. The general cessation of business, both manufacturing and mercantile, the closing of the schools, the large number of mourning friends and acquaintances at the house and church, the magnificent floral remembrances, the touching music, and the tender yet glowing words of the reverend gentlemen, all combined to make it a testimonial rarely paid to one holding absolutely no official position, but to one whose hold upon the hearts of all was simply that of a friend and brother gone.

From 12 o'clock till 1 at the house an opportunity was given to the operatives in the different manufacturing establishments with which he had been connected to look upon his face once more, a large number availing themselves of it. A number of intimate friends gathered there later for a prayer by the Rev. Dr. Hodge, a musical selection by Mrs. H. R. Jenks, and reading the Scriptures by Rev. Mr. Selleck.

At 2 o'clock the ceremonies began at the church. So large was the number of those who desired admission that every seat was taken, and many were obliged to wait upon the outside. The body was borne into the church by the bearers, Messrs. F. P. Chapman, George R. Winsor, A. B. Palmer, Joseph P. Bassett, Charles F. Nye and Charles Stewart, the honorary bearers being Charles J. McKenzie, Lester L. Burrington, George W. Wiggin of Franklin, Albert W. Smith of Providence, Matthew Luce, William Manning, Richard Bolles of Boston, William Bloodgood of New York city.

Succeeding the dirge by Organist Martin the scriptures were read by Rev. Dr. Hodge, the Harvard quartette chanting the responses meanwhile. During the service they sang with exquisite tenderness, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Meet Me There," "Passing Out of the Shadow" and "Into the Silent Land," moving the hearts of all with the beautiful sentiments and the perfection of melody.

The remarks of Rev. Dr. Hodge and Rev. Mr. Selleck, which we append, came direct from the heart and appealed in an especially forceful manner to all the listeners, as they recalled the wonderful influence which Mr. Ray had exerted upon all with whom he came into contact, in a business way, socially or politically. Not a few who listened had been the recipients of his generous benefactions, and the remembrance of his kindly deeds, done unostentatiously and without regard to the praise of men or a personal reward, appealed not less forcibly than did the words of the speakers.

As to the arrangements within the church, these were in charge of Wm. A. Wyckoff, who had been connected with Mr. Ray for nearly forty years as confidential clerk, and to whom was accorded the especial privilege of performing this last loving service for the deceased. Although the Masonic fraternity did not have charge of the funeral, they were represented by George R. Winsor, the worshipful master, who rendered efficient assistance and counsel, and to whom no little credit is due.

The ushers were Messrs. Herbert W. Thayer, Nathan C. Nye, Fred H. Bartholomew, Fred L. Davis, Charles Frazer and George F. Grant. Notwithstanding the large number present, distinguished guests from out of town, friends and others, so perfect had been the attention to details that the occasion was marked by the entire absence of friction or anything which might mar the deep solemnity of the services.

Those present will never forget the magnificence and elaborateness of the floral display. Most of the pieces were costly and beautiful in the extreme. Professional florists from Boston arranged them in most attractive groupings as to harmony of colors and blending of tints, the entire platform being a profusion of conservatory products in emblematic funereal designs. So complete was the display that individual mention would be impossible, and simply destroy the floral picture by which the eye was enchanted and the mind impressed. Two of these pieces, elaborate and beautiful creations of floral skill, touched the hearts of the family in a peculiar manner, as they were contributed by the former employes of Mr. Ray, evidencing their feeling toward the deceased and their tender sympathy toward his loved ones.

At the close of the services the body was borne to the grave, where the exercises were simple and brief, the burial service being read by his pastor, Rev. Dr. Hodge, and prayer being offered by Rev. Mr. Selleck. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Sneath of the Congregational church. The remains were interred in the family lot on Central street.

We cannot refrain from referring to an incident which spoke comfort to aching and sorrowing hearts, just before the body was removed from the church. None but the family remained. Suddenly a beam of sunshine came through the window, softened and mellowed by the colored glass, and falling full upon the casket glorified the face of the sleeper with a touch of almost divine radiance and life-likeness. Thus was their last fond farewell hallowed by the memory of that sweet rest into which no cares or perplexities of earth could ever come.

REV. DR. HODGE'S ADDRESS.

We endeavor to give the substance of Dr. Hodge's remarks. We cannot wholly reproduce that which was spoken, not only so extemporaneously, but with so much of earnest and tender feeling. Dr. Hodge said in substance:

"It is peculiarly difficult for one who has known Mr. Ray as a pastor of this church must have known him to choose the words most fitting on an occasion such as this. There is so much to say; such crowds of thronging memories come pressing in on mind and heart; he touched so many interests, many of them high and sacred, some of them tender and precious, all of them good; one can recall so many deeds of courtesy and kindness, so many things which tell us what he was to these torn and sorrowing hearts, to this community and the world, that one knows not how to choose the things most appropriate to be said now. There is much, however, of which I must not speak. Those who have known him best will understand that of the help he has given, the encouragement bestowed, the sympathy shown in times of misfortune and trouble to so many of those about him he would have no word here spoken. It would seem a betrayal of his confidence to say all one's heart would dictate on such an occasion, even, as this. There are some things, however, which cannot be forbidden since they are the natural characteristics of this man's life. They are the testimony of the years of his pilgrimage. So, while were we to say all that respect and friendship might prompt we should see the sun go down upon our unfinished testimony, it may be permitted me to speak, all too poorly, of that which beyond all question he has been.

"Mr. Ray was a successful man. Make your definition of success just as high and just as broad as you please, he yet fulfilled it. Make it include not only the accumulation, through honorable and manly struggle, of this world's goods, but also the building up in full measure of no elevated character, the living of a broad and useful life; make it involve a just and true concern for the things of the spirit, and yet one can well say he lived a successful life. The man was more than all his possessions. Great as has been his success as a business man, intense as the battle with the world has been, he was not absorbed by it. One does not know how he found time, with the many business cares that pressed upon him, to do so many things, care for so many things, to live so much upon the spiritual side, the domestic side, the social side. But we all know that he did do this. For many years a member of this church, always present if possible at its services on Sunday, its interests lay very close to his heart. He found time to think about and serve the church; to interest himself in the cause of education, to take a loyal citizen's interest in politics, in whatever moral reform our modern life demands. And this large success in life was his own achievement. He succeeded in life in large ways and with large results, not because of any fortunate accident, not because he began life with any advantage, but by his own native energy and force of character.

"He began his fight with the world at eight years of age, a time when most of us are thinking nothing about it and do not have to think about it; and from that time on, by his own sagacity, prudence, wisdom, force of will, he has been making his large success. He was a strong, firm, positive man. We knew where he stood, in religion, in politics, in his relation to reform in society and state. I have said this devotion to a strong man's work did not absorb him, as it does so many smaller souls. With all this interest in a man's work he was social, generous, courteous, kind. He took an interest in men. Hating what was low and unworthy, he loved his friends; he greeted all, rich or poor, high or humble, with the same grace and courtesy and kindliness. He was in truth a gentleman. I know that as I say this each one in this great audience will call to mind that kindly and pleasant smile, that unfailing remembrance, that cordial grasp of the hand which we, alas! shall now experience no more in this world from him.

"O, there is so much of which I must not speak! There are so many tender and sacred things, so many things that must rest still in the sweet silences of friendship; yet how can one pass over in wholly unspoken remembrance what he was in his own domestic life. God help one who would respect all the privacies of the home life to say without indelicacy the brief, inadequate word it seems permitted one to say about the home life of this dear friend. His home was to him the very centre of the earth. Never was the warfare of life so hot and so intense that his greatest interest was not always there. His own were so much to him, notwithstanding his interest in so many! He was, as he deserved to be, greatly beloved. And that is what makes it so hard to let him go from amongst us. That is what makes these mourning hearts realize so deep and so lasting a sorrow. His home was indeed a home. The atmosphere of it was good, and high, and hospitable, and sympathetic.

"He loved life. He knew how to enjoy this world and did enjoy it. His was a knightly nature. There was so much to lose in his departure, how can we be comforted? But it is comfort to feel that he has been all this. It is comfort to have this large, strong, gentle, tolerant, useful life to think of and to remember. He is not all lost to you, dear friends. Such a life as this cannot perish even from the earth. Its beneficence will spring up like flowers of spring in fulness of blessing. His man's work will speak for him for many days. Even in the midst of deepest sorrow, even when our sense of loss seems deepest and most abiding, even amidst many tears we know we must be thankful to have known him. It makes the sorrow deeper to remember all he was, but it gives it an undertone of blessedness. And then we are able to look to the strength of a comforting faith, beyond.

"The book, indeed, is closed, but the last chapter here is not the conclusion. The sequel is beyond. Let his life be not only an encouragement, an example in its interest in the highest and best things of life, and in its generosity and courtesy and goodness, but also a bond of silent influence drawing our hearts up to the immortal life. There shall we be with him. There, not here, shall we know all that this good life means, all the potential glory of it. In the inevitable mingling of love and sorrow, hope will be ennobled and transfigured into the sweetness of serenity and trust. Not here shall we see him more—here there is no abiding city—but there we shall know this precious, dear and kindly soul again."

REV. MR. SELLECK'S ADDRESS.

It is a sad privilege to participate in these services. My relations with our friend have been at times somewhat intimate, and I am grateful for being permitted to stand here today and lay the flowers of my esteem and love upon his bier. No man could be taken out of this town whose going would affect so many interests, and whose departure would be felt by so many people as a personal loss. He has led a wonderfully useful life; and if a man's strength may be measured somewhat by the lives he draws around him and by the responsibilities he sustains, then was Mr. Ray a very strong man; and I am thinking today of his enriching life,—of the ways in which he has helped multitudes of his fellowmen by reason of the great business enterprises which he has so successfully carried on. To a large extent the social and industrial welfare of this community has rested upon him; the government has been upon his shoulders; and God has used him, with all his talents to benefit the world. We had hoped that he might have several years in which to enjoy the fruits of his labor, and to do some of the many things it was doubtless in his heart to do. But God has kept him at his task and his unfinished labors are left for others to complete.

But it is not chiefly of these things that I want to speak. The sense of loss, which we all feel, and which Dr. Hodge has so well expressed, weighs us down. I want to lift a little, if possible, the overhanging shadow—to let the cloud grow thin which spreads above us, so that we may feel that the eternal sunshine is upon it. I want to speak as a Christian, in order that we may not sorrow as those who have no hope. For we are the children of God, who loves us with an everlasting love; and this world is not our only home, our only abiding-place, in our Father's great house. This faith grows stronger and clearer with me every year; and so I think of death as merely going through an open door, through "the gates ajar," into another of those rooms or mansions; or it is merely passing through the valley of the shadow, up onto the sunlit heights of the morning land." I will not try to follow out this thought, for I do not wish to speculate about it; but I do believe that our dear friend has been lifted out of the limitations of the physical life and set free into the beauty, glory and joy of that blessed world which is our eternal home.

"I am going to prepare a place for you," he said to his life-companion just a day or two before the end. Let us believe this; let us think of the circles of acquaintance and love that await those who go from us; and, oh, how many friends have been gathered out of this community into that bright realm within the last few years! They are not dead, but living and loving, growing and rejoicing amid the fair scenes of that better country. Let us think of them thus; let us lift up our eyes to see them there walking in the light; and today, as we lay gently away in the bosom of mother earth this worn out body, let us hear the voice of the Spirit saying unto us, as the angel spake on that first Easter morning, "He is not here, but is risen."

Among some of the prominent gentlemen present from out of town were the following: From New York: Schuyler Ingham, Matthew Hinman, Frank H. Southwick, A. B. Fletcher, Robert E. Weise, William L. Nichols, Edward M. Andrews, Hermann S. Rawitzer, David Kaplan, Morris Herrman; from Boston: Eben Draper, A. S. Bigelow, Edward S. Grew, Edward P. Ricker (also of Poland Springs, Me), Homer V. Resolutions of Franklin Post, No. 60, G. A. R.

First—Resolved, That the death of the Hon. Joseph G. Ray of Franklin is a sorrowful reminder that we have lost not only a zealous and patriotic citizen, but a sincere and liberal friend of our Order, manifested by his kindly regard for our welfare and his liberal and frequently repeated pecuniary aid and other generous and valuable gifts.

Second—Resolved, That in further expression of our regard the Post flag is ordered to be placed at half-mast during his funeral services.

Third—Resolved, That our sincere sympathies be tendered to his bereaved family.

Fourth—Resolved, That these resolutions be entered on the Post records and that an official copy be sent to his family and also published in the FRANKLIN SENTINEL.

At a regular meeting of Franklin Post, No. 60, G. A. R., on the evening of Feb. 26, 1900, the above resolutions were unanimously adopted.

A Wise Precaution.

A case of scarlet fever appearing at Dean it seemed wise to close the school for the spring vacation at once, instead of two weeks later. Accordingly, the students left for their homes on Wednesday morning. There is but one case and that not a severe one. The patient, Miss Myrtis Lougee, is improving.

Of Vital Importance.

The lecture in High school hall this Friday evening by Miss Lelia A. Flagg on "child culture" promises to be both interesting and valuable. The lady has spent a great deal of time upon the subject, and is thoroughly posted. She handles facts and theories in a most capable manner and makes it especially helpful to all. She should have a large hearing. The admission is fifteen cents.

Washburn's Minstrels.

Those who attend the performance of "The Great Southern Minstrels" at the Morse Opera House on Tuesday, March 6th will find it an effervescent fountain of joy and incessant laughter. The comedians are all up-to-date, and they make you laugh in spite of yourself. The entertainment is full of superb vocal and instrumental numbers, the comedians are bright, witty and funny, the dances are revelations of what can be done in artistic ensemble. The sketches are refined and new. The songs of the quartette and the soloist are rendered in such an effective and brilliant manner that they always succeed in gaining the enthusiastic applause of the auditor. The specialties are of the best, and most marvellous, that an unstinted outlay of money could procure. The costumes are rich and gorgeous in the extreme, and the special scenery magnificent. In fact, it is a clean bill of fare and a splendid antidote for a fit of the blues.

Emerson's Market.

On a turkey, chicken or fowl we can just suit you. Our list of "green stuff" is as complete as is to be found in Boston, radishes, lettuce, celery, dandelions, spinach, etc. Of course, we have meats of all kinds, and we'd like to show you our brand of canned goods, the famous "Brunswick." COMMUNICATIONS.

[The editor assumes no responsibility for matter under this caption. This column is entirely at the disposal of the public, avoiding, as far as possible, trivial and controversial matter.]

MR. EDITOR:—I was very much surprised at the action of the Town committee in leaving off certain names from the Republican ballot. My remembrance was that the caucus a year ago voted that the committee place upon the ballot such names as were asked for by ten Republican voters, and I also notice that the call published in the SENTINEL requested that any petition must have ten names signed. Could not the committee "consider" a name unless ten men requested it? Was not the word ten used because the caucus had voted it? As the committee is a creature of the voters I cannot see how a request differs from an order. The committee may have acted in its best judgment, but hardly in accordance with its instructions.

ONE OF THE SIGNERS.

Citizens' Caucus.

The Citizens' caucus was held Friday evening in the town hall with the following result: Selectmen, Alfred Clark, Jr., Jeremiah McCarthy, Amos P. Woodward; overseers of poor, F. M. Richardson, Bernard W. McCabe, C. Milton Allen; assessors, Eugene F. Ware, L. J. Kelley, George W. Bacon; constables, William Redpath, J. B. Fitzpatrick, Silas W. Nickerson; clerk, O. T. Doe; auditor, P. A. Woodward; treasurer, Nelson E. Newell; tax collector, E. H. Sherman; school committee, James W. Desmond; board of health, Marston Sanborn; town committee, C. R. Russell, chairman; J. N. Blanchard, secretary; Everett S. Messenger, Bernard W. McCabe, John B. Collins, Edward S. Richardson, C. E. Moody, M. J. Feeley, Herbert F. Monroe.

License Will Increase Business.

Startling as it may seem license will increase business. It will increase the business of the rum seller; it will increase the business of the overseers of the poor; it will increase the business of the hard-working woman who has as she can do as it is to make both ends meet, with the small wages, large families and many bills to pay; it will increase the business of the rum drinker; he will find much business about the streets at night, in the saloons and elsewhere that he would not have under no-license; he will have more business at brawling, rioting, money-spending and bill-evading than ever before. It will improve every business that is disreputable, dishonest and illegal, but no thinking man for a moment can believe that it will make honest, legitimate business about town any better. It does not elsewhere and it cannot here.

Needham Chronicle.

"The stereopticon lecture of Rev. T. J. B. House on "An Every Day Tragedy in City Life," at the Town hall Sunday evening, was well attended and proved to be one of the most effective presentations of the evils of intemperance that we have ever heard. It made a deep, and we trust a lasting, impression on the minds of the audience."

Everyone should listen to Dr. House at the Opera house Sunday evening. Go early to secure seats.

Special Evangelistic Service.

At the Methodist church this evening, at 7.30, there will be a special revival service. These services from week to week are proving of great interest and benefit. This week the pastor will preach a short sermon on the subject, "The Mission of Christ, and Our Attitude Toward it." A general and cordial invitation is extended.

Not Withdrawn.

In view of the statements that have gained credence that I have withdrawn as candidate for selectman I desire to state that as the town committee has seen fit to place my name upon the ticket, and it having received the support of the caucus, I see no reason for withdrawing, and if elected shall do all in my power to serve the town faithfully, without fear or favor, and enforce the law. Thanking you for past support, I remain,

Very sincerely,
J. CUSHING GALLISON.
Franklin, Mass., March 2.

A Personal Statement.

In justice to myself I desire to deny the rumors about town that I am in favor of license. I have always voted for no license and propose to continue so doing, and my vote and influence may be counted on for an honest enforcement of the law.

AMOS P. WOODWARD.
Franklin, March 2.

Richardson's Market.

Recently we advertised a sale of roast beef and cleaned up every pound. The public got good worth for their money. This week our line of chickens, fowls, turkeys, meats, vegetables, etc., has been selected with unusual care, the price being as low as the lowest and the quality as high as the highest. We can't be beaten on canned goods. Try our butter.

Having relinquished my Boston business, I can hereafter be found at my office daily from 8 to 6 o'clock.

FRANKLIN NEWS.

Next Sabbath will be temperance Sunday and all the pastors are to preach on this theme. No license has the unqualified support of all of the churches in Franklin. Is not this a very strong argument in its favor. What all of the churches conscientiously desire must be quite right. It is a splendid good company to be in. Do you doubt it? Or will you vote with the bummers.

Arrangements have been made for Rev. T. J. B. House to deliver his illustrated lecture "An Every Day Tragedy in City Life," for the special benefit of the children, at 5 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, at the Opera house. A thousand tickets have been distributed in the schools so every child should have one. Any who may have been skipped can be supplied by calling at the Opera house at 4 30 o'clock.

The sumptuous private palace car, Robert E. Lee, in which travels the celebrated organization known as "The Great Southern Minstrels," which appears here next Tuesday evening, is said to be the finest railway carriage ever constructed for any kind of an amusement enterprise. Its beauty of design and elegant furnishings are only on a par with everything else pertaining to this modern leader of burnt cork opera.

Those who were present at the Y. P. C. U. meeting at the Universalist church last Sunday evening enjoyed a rare treat in the address of Charles Stewart on "Professional Ideals." Mr. Stewart pointed out the ideals, higher than those of wealth or power, which, fulfilled, alone constitute the successful man. He illustrated his definition of success in many practical and forceful ways. Those who heard him will be glad to hear him on any future occasion when he may be induced to speak.

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen Murphy, who died on Monday, took place yesterday morning from St. Mary's church. Rev. Father Lee celebrated a requiem high mass at 10 o'clock, and the services were attended by a goodly number of friends of the deceased, who was one of the earliest members of St. Mary's parish. The interment was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery. The bearers were Henry W. Granger of Franklin and Patrick Markey, James S. Dunn and Michael Reilly of Pawtucket, R. I.

William Splain of Cambridgeport was arrested in Bellingham last Monday by Officer Bishop and Motorman Henry Simler of the M., A. & W. Street railway for raising a disturbance on the Franklin car. He was arraigned in court Tuesday morning and fined $5 and costs for disturbing the peace and $5 and costs for fighting. Conductor Daniel Colton, Motorman Simler and Officer Bishop testified that he was using profane language in the car, and when told to stop by the conductor began fighting. He attacked the conductor and it took three men to arrest him.

The Good Citizenship meeting at the Universalist church on Sunday evening was well attended and very helpful. Music was furnished by Messrs. Sherman and Hartshorne and Misses Crocker and Whiting. Dr. Hodge spoke upon the effect of no-license in town, and especially upon Dean academy and the necessity for a clean home. Mr. Sleeper spoke of the curfew law, the dangers of the street at night; Mr. Cook upon the youth taking the place of the drunkards and the influence of woman, and Mr. Sneath spoke upon the necessity for a good law and its enforcement. Every one felt encouraged and strengthened by the earnest words.

Important to Orient Bicycle Owners.

Broken or worn parts will be replaced at actual cost, the owners being notified before such expense is incurred.

VARIETIES OF WHEAT.

Not Much Difference in the Yields from the Six Kinds Standing at the Head.

The comparison of new and standard varieties of wheat by the Pennsylvania State College Agricultural Experiment station has been continued through the present season. The six varieties giving the highest yields were:

	Bushels.
Royal Red Clawson	26.8
Forty-Fold or Gold Coin	26.81
Dawson's Golden Chaff	26.4
Century	25.71
Rochester Red	25.4
Reliable	25.14

Twenty-two varieties were tested, the average yield being 22.02 bushels. There was an average difference of 3.12 bushels between the smooth and bearded varieties, in favor of the smooth. About one-fourth of the grain was winter killed, which accounts for the small average yield, it being only about two-thirds of our usual crop. The average yield of straw was 2,450 pounds and the average weight per bushel 62.04 pounds. Turkish Red was the poorest variety, yielding 15.37 bushels of grain and 1,590 pounds of straw. The yields of ten varieties that have been tested for nine and ten years show no tendency to run out except a slight decrease in the yield of straw.

A bulletin giving a complete record of all the varieties for a series of years is in preparation and will be distributed free of charge.—Enos H. Hess, in National Stockman.

From Potatoes to Rye.

The land that was devoted to potatoes this year should be seeded to rye, limed in the spring and corn grown on the same land next year. Such a plan gives the land two weedings and cleans it thoroughly. It is also an advantage not to grow potatoes on the same land oftener than one year in four as a precaution against disease. Rye should cover all land that is plowed in the fall, as it prevents loss of fertility, and when turned under in spring it will add fertilizing material to the soil, the lime being used to neutralize any acidity that may exist.

TESTING THE SEEDS.

Department of Agriculture Tells Farmers How to Make a Germinator at Home.

Most seed dealers now make germination tests before putting their seeds on the market, and extensive work of this class is done by the department of agriculture. Consumers will also find it much to their advantage to test the viability of seeds, but as a rule they have the impression that seed-testing requires elaborate apparatus and some complicated scientific process to conduct it successfully. That this opinion is inaccurate is shown by the homemade germinator seen in cut, reproduced from Circular No. 18, issued by the division of botany, United States department of agriculture. A piece of moist flannel is placed on a plate, the seeds put on the flannel, a second piece of moist flannel being laid over them, and a second plate is then inverted over the whole. A certain number of seeds should be carefully counted out, and the germinating ones removed and counted as fast as they appear. In testing crimson clover, if the seed is good, 80 to 90 per cent. should sprout within three days. The government seed expert, A. J. Pieters, especially advises tests before sowing crimson clover. Most failures with it are due to old seed, but even fresh seed may be of poor quality. This seed should test 85 to 95 per cent. viable.

LICE HERDED BY ANTS.

Parasites Pastured on the Roots of Peach Trees for the Honey Dew They Furnish.

Many Ohio peach orchards have been suffering from the attacks of the wood louse or aphis, as it is more correctly known, and complaints were sent in from all over the state to the agricultural experiment station at Wooster asking what should be done to get rid of the pest. The lice were found on the roots of the trees, where they had stripped off the bark in order to get at the sap more readily. The authorities tried a number of insecticides, but without success, for whenever the insecticide was strong enough to kill the lice it also killed the tree. And, after a long series of experiments, the conclusion has been reached that the only way of getting rid of the lice is to exterminate the ants which carry them about, for without the aid of the ants the aphis will be utterly unable to get to the roots of peach or any other trees.

The aphis occupies a queer place in the insect world, for the ants, Lasius Americanus, use them for milch cows, herding and caring for them very much as a man tends his cattle. In the fall the ants collect the eggs of the aphides, carry them to their homes and care for them through the winter. As soon as spring opens and the eggs hatch out, the ants start out to find suitable peach tree pastures. The younger and more tender the tree the better. The ants burrow down into the ground close to the bark of the tree and then run a series of galleries out along the roots. After the galleries have been completed the ants carry the young aphides to the pasture ground, and, gnawing away the bark on parts of the roots, place the aphides around the edge in order that they may suck the sap freely. Here the the lice are kept prisoners for the terms of their natural lives, the ants taking turns at herding them and keeping plenty of fresh roots exposed.

Of course, the ants do not go to all this trouble without reward. From the back part of the abdomen of the louse project two glands which produce sugar or honey dew, as it is called. This is greedily devoured by the ants, and the lice are carefully tended in order that they may produce as much of it as possible.

The depredations of the lice are not confined to the orchards. The corn fields also suffer. The ants burrow down to the roots of the corn stalks and place the lice there just as they do on peach trees, and the crops suffer in consequence.—N. Y. Sun.

Cucumbers for Pickles.

Pickled cucumbers are sold by count, and the small ones are generally preferred. Hence close picking and frequent picking, so as to prevent any from growing too large, is necessary to secure large crops. Sometimes, however, a stray cucumber will hide under the leaves until it has almost ripened its seeds. It is astonishing how this lessens the yield of the vine. Yet it is not to be wondered at, for the perfection of seed in almost all plants exhausts their vitality very rapidly. The cucumber vines should be handled carefully so as not to loosen the roots which some of them send into the soil from the joints. These are great helps to the vine. If the vine is turned up to see what is under it some of these rootlets will be destroyed.

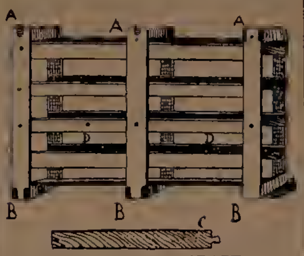
HANDY HAULING CRATE.

Convenient When a Single Hog, Sheep or Calf Has to Be Moved or Carted Away.

It is often convenient to have a crate in which to haul a single hog, sheep or calf. It is not necessary to have it so large or so heavy but what it can be easily lifted into the wagon, or even taken in the light wagon, where the animal to be hauled is not too large and heavy. The frame should be made of 2x4's, strengthened by rods and bolts.



MODEL STOCK CRATE.

Four-inch slats are nailed horizontal on the inside of the sides, and perpendicular on the end. Three slats, dropped from above and retained in position by the mortised end, will retain the animal when inside.

The crate is about 3 feet wide, 4½ feet high and 5 feet long. The three frames are mortised at top and bottom, and have a rod (A) at top, and at the bottom two 2x4's are bolted at B. The floor is spiked down to these. The slats are nailed on from the inside to prevent crowding off. To give strength, substitute a 2x4 in place of slat (D) which should be bolted to the frames. The slats for retaining the animal are made of 2x4's. They are made to slip down between the rod and outside 2x4 brace across the top of the rear frame, the bottom of the slat (C) mortised to fit a square hole cut on the floor and the top held in position by a pin fitting into holes bored through the top of slat and braces of frame (E). The cut shows the crate complete.—J. L. Irwin, in Ohio Farmer.

GRANULAR BUTTER.

How to Produce an Article That Will Keep Well for a Considerable Length of Time.

The following method is employed for making butter which it is desired to keep for a considerable time. When the butter has reached the granular condition in churning, that is, when the particles are about the size of barley grains, the buttermilk is drawn off and ice-cold water added. The butter is then washed with cold water and removed from the churn to a stone jar without packing or mashing the grains. The jar is then filled with brine. This brine will soon dissolve some of the casine in the butter and so acquire a cloudy aspect. A change of brine will leave the second solution clear on the butter. A plate should be used to cover the butter, allowing the brine to come up over it. The brine, of course, intermingles freely about each granule of butter throughout the mass, which will preserve for weeks in this way. It can be taken out any time and worked into rolls or prints. If too salty it may be washed out with clear water.—Guy E. Mitchell in Farm and Fireside.

Have You Heard Of It?

You may have heard about SCOTT'S EMULSION and have a vague notion that it is cod-liver oil with its bad taste and smell and all its other repulsive features. It is cod-liver oil, the purest and the best in the world, but made so palatable that almost everybody can take it. Nearly all children like it and ask for more.

looks like cream; it nourishes the wasted body of the baby, child or adult better than cream or any other food in existence. It bears about the same relation to other emulsions that cream does to milk. If you have had any experience with other so-called "just as good" preparations, you will find that this is a fact.

The hypophosphites that are combined with the cod-liver oil give additional value to it because they tone up the nervous system and impart strength to the whole body.

PLAIN COMMON SENSE.

Really Nothing Else Is Required to Raise Healthy Calves Under Ordinary Conditions.

In all my experience I never lost but one young calf while it was sucking its dam. That was many years ago when Hungarian grass first put in an appearance with us, and the hay fed to the cow killed the calf, writes a contributor to Homestead. The milk caked in the calf's stomach. My experience has always been to restrict the feed of the cow for two or three weeks before calving, and if this is properly done I think there will, as a rule, be no scours in the calf. The fatter the cow the more care is necessary. I have had cows come in that were fit for the butcher's block, and have allowed the calves to take all the milk they would, and this, too, without harm to them. When the cow is not on grass I feed hay, and not too much, with no grain whatever for at least a week before calving. I also give a little wheat bran every other day for the sake of its regulating effect. Let the cow get a little hungry at this time, and it will not hurt her, while it will benefit the calf. This way of feeding with me has always got the cow and her milk in such a condition that the calf can have all it wants of it, and I only take away what is left. Sometimes the calf may be a little constipated, and when this is so feed more bran and all will come right. With me the question has not been so much the quantity as the quality of milk that makes the healthy calf. I invariably leave the cow and calf together for the first week or two.

During the month of May the cow should be on the grass, but as calving time draws near she should be in the stable at night. In June, when the grass should be at its best, look out for milk fever. If you have a lot where the grass is short and not too plentiful, that is the best place for her. The main idea that I would impress is when the cow is fat and has been fed high for about three weeks before calving, the rich feed must be taken away or scours in the calf will follow. You may think it an epidemic or call it what you will, but I am satisfied this is the cause that kills many a calf and what will kill one will kill more. I think the idea here advanced applies to horses and hogs as well. As to the sheep, I know nothing about them.

"Catch the opportunity." By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla now you may build up your health and prevent serious illness.

WRENTHAM.

Mrs. Edson W. George died at her residence on South street Tuesday morning after a short illness of two days. She was apparently in good health on Sunday morning when her husband left for church. On his return he found her suffering considerable pain and from that time until Tuesday morning she grew rapidly worse. An operation was performed on Tuesday, but she did not rally from the result of it. The immediate cause of death was the rupture of a blood vessel. The deceased was in her 33d year and had only been married about 11 months. Mrs George had been a resident of Sheldonville for 10 years before her marriage and was a woman beloved by all who came in contact with her and was highly esteemed in the neighborhood as an exemplary Christian woman. The funeral was held on Thursday, Rev. Wm. J. Minchin conducting the services.——Miss Matilda Cottrell, who has made her home with Herbert Bennett for four years, died at his residence Saturday of old age. The funeral was held on Tuesday, Rev M. J. Minchin officiating. The deceased was the oldest resident of the village, being in her 97th year. Miss Cottrell had no immediate relatives in town, a nephew who resided in Cumberland being her only surviving relative.——The Holly club met Tuesday afternoon with Miss Alice Carpenter. The subject under discussion was the poet Bryant. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Charles E. Brown and the subject is on "Local History."——The ladies of Trinity Guild held their postponed supper in the banquet room from Thursday to Friday night. It took the form of a Washington tea, the ladies wearing appropriate costumes of "ye olden tyme." The menu consisted of salmon and vegetable salad, cold ham, bread and butter, tea and coffee, vanilla and chocolate ice cream, Washington pie and Lafayette cake.

The Drs. Gallison are deeply interested in a new hospital which is planned for Milford for the benefit of the towns of this section. It is really a much-needed institution, and the project will doubtless have the aid of all the physicians of this neighborhood, as the electric road will open easy and rapid means of communication with our sister town.

There is a movement started to have the north common renovated, as the band stand and seats placed there some years ago have been nearly destroyed by boys or other persons intent on malicious mischief. Unless some means of protection to property and punishment of those who seek to destroy it can be put in force it is not worth much to have the park beautified.

All are welcome.

Some time ago it was announced that real estate owners near the center were preparing for a land boom on the line of the electric railway. The land has been surveyed and the prospective settlement looks exceedingly well on paper. As a matter of fact the locality has many natural advantages which money can make available to embellish the town and afford artistic delight to human souls.

The members of Middlesex and Pomona grange met here Wednesday in Central Square hall with a good attendance of members. There was a morning session, opening at 11 o'clock, for the transaction of business, and at 2 p. m. there was a public meeting, when Rev. W. N. Tenney of Swampscott gave an illustrated lecture on "Temperance" before the members and a goodly number of their friends.

Base ball is awakening hereabouts. In North Attleboro LeStage has become identified with the team either as manager or captain. It was decided that the Attleboros and North Attleboros play a series of seven games for the championship. Four games won are to decide the issue. The games between the clubs are scheduled for July 7 and 21, Aug. 4 and 18, Sept. 1, 8 and 15, providing one or the other of the nines has not won four games.

A series of Lenten services will begin in the Universalist chapel Thursday evening of this week, when the Rev. Dr. Bollee of Melrose will preach. Dr. Bollee will be remembered as having preached one of the ablest sermons in the series last year. He is one of the most scholarly men in the country and has recently been appointed to the chair of English and American history in Tufts college. The service will be at 7.30 and will be followed by a special church meeting.

All honor to the senior class at Brown university, of which Fred. V. Hussey is a member. The class has just voted not to have any intoxicating liquors served at the class banquet. The present senior class is the first to totally disapprove of the custom. This is really a step in the right direction. While the banquets have never degenerated into drunken revels by any means, yet there are always some students in a class to whom a little liquor acts as fuel to the fire and "wine inflames them."

The electric car barn at Unionville is nearing completion. The big steel girders, in waiting for which there was a long delay, are in place and the roof has been built over. The roofers are this week putting on the finishing touches. The windows will be put in in a few days, and then when the wires are strung overhead the shed will be ready for occupancy. It will probably be all completed in two weeks, and a place for the cars now in the open at the Millerville car barn will be provided.

There was a slight hitch in the Medway electric matter before the Medway selectmen last week, but it was speedily adjusted and the franchise granted. The board of railroad commissioners have also granted the company the right to cross the New Haven's tracks at grade at Medfield. This means that the last thing in the way of double-track car service between Milford—and possibly Franklin—and Forest Hills is done away with, and the early summer should see passengers traveling over twenty miles of track without change of cars.

Capt. J. B. Crocker arrived in town on Saturday, after a most successful cruise, taking ice to Martinique and returning with a load of lumber, which is now discharging in New York. He will remain here about a week. He is arranging for a new and larger vessel, which will be ready in the summer, and will admit of his doing a larger coastwise and foreign business. His present boat, the Charles L Davenport, is of 1,500 tons burden, while the new boat will be 2,000. There is an almost unprecedented demand for vessels, and he has no difficulty in getting cargoes. He thinks he got back into the business at just the right time.

Officers Connor and Hutchinson were assaulted by a railroad man named Smith on Sunday evening, an altercation having arisen over an order of the night police for Smith to "move on" as he was standing in front of the Opera house at the close of the temperance lecture. Officer Connor received a black eye and Mr. Hutchinson's face was bruised. Smith was placed in the lockup and later bailed out. He was tried this forenoon before Judge Doe, Attorney Ruggles appearing for the defense. After hearing the testimony the court adjudged the accused guilty and imposed a fine of $30 for assault on the officers and $1 for loitering.

Charles L. Stewart went to Boston last week as a witness in the case of John McGinnis of Medway, on complaint of Omifrey Andozenjenzlsl, a Polish resident of the same place, for false pretences in the sales of property. It was charged that Mr. McGinnis sold to the former a house and small piece of land in West Medway for $700, $500 of which the complainant paid to him. McGinnis claimed to own the property, but simply had a bond for a deed from the Franklin Savings bank. The bank sold it to another party and he had to leave the place and lose the $500 that he paid McGinnis. The court found McGinnis probably guilty and ordered him held for the grand jury in the sum of $2,000. He recognized with sureties.

Norfolk Lodge No. 257 N. E. O. P. had the pleasure of receiving twenty seven new members at the regular meeting last Wednesday evening. The work was finely executed by the officers of Puritan lodge of Cambridge. They comprised one of the best degree teams in the state. At the close of the initiation the visitors and members were escorted to the dining room of Hotel Briggs. The committee of Norfolk lodge took charge of the kitchen and dining room and served a turkey supper, which was very appetizing and enjoyed by all. After refreshing themselves the party returned to the hall where dancing was enjoyed until the midnight hour. The following visitors were entertained: Grand Warden James H. Flint, Grand Treasurer Daniel Frazier, Grand Trustee J. Albert Richardson, Deputy Grand Warden Mary E. Bucknam, twenty three members of Puritan lodge of Cambridge, seven members of Neponset lodge of Norwood.

A most entertaining lecture upon "Child Culture," by Miss Leila Flagg of Roxbury, was given in the High school room last Friday evening, under the auspices of the Mothers' Section. Being connected with kindergarten work, Miss Flagg was thoroughly conversant with her subject and appealed to the sympathies of all in that idealistic training for children. Illustrations were given of the "finger plays" adapted to the understanding of the very little ones, and of the "motion songs" for those a little older. These were especially melodious and could not fail to create a taste for the best in music. Other subjects dwelt upon were: The love of Nature developed by the study through observation of the birds and flowers; the encouragement of the taste for humor in the child; the sense of reverence aided by music and art; and the necessity for parents to guard against a misuse of the love-force. A piano duet by Mrs. Talbot and Mrs. Chilson, and several sweet lullabyes and kindergarten airs sung by Miss Flagg, accompanied by Miss Marion Gould, were delightful interspersions.

Having relinquished my Boston business, I can hereafter be found at my office daily from 8 to 6 o'clock.

A Glorious No-License Victory.

Even the friends of temperance were astonished at the magnificent expression of the voters on the matter of no license yesterday, and the good work that has been done the past few weeks has borne glorious results. Franklin is further away than ever from the curse of the liquor traffic. Out of a total vote of 639 over 400 registered their protests against the sale of liquor in this fair town of Franklin. Thirty-eight failed to vote, for which neglect of an honest duty they must answer to their own consciences.

Now that the voters have so emphatically registered their determination in this matter it remains for the selectmen to see to it that the will of the voter is carried out. The board is thus assured of a vigorous public sentiment that will sustain any and every effort to reduce the sale of liquor in this town to a minimum, and the board, and the board alone, will be held responsible, as the liquor officer is simply the agent of the board. Franklin can congratulate itself that the board is composed of men whose views on the liquor question are so pronounced. Individually and collectively they stand for temperance and their hands will be upheld.

Messrs. Gallison and Clark have been found tried and true men, and honestly earned a re-election, an honor which would have willingly been accorded Mr. Hosie had he desired to stand. Mr. McCarthy is a strong acquisition and is not new to the work, as he has served with manifest acceptance upon a previous board. This is everywhere acknowledged a good working board, and Franklin ought to enjoy an era of good government, wise legislation and practical results. The following is the result of the balloting:

The vote on the license question resulted: Yes, 199; no, 402. Majority against license, 203.

	Total	Yes	No	Blanks	Per cent.
1898	565	203	306	50	54
1899	626	246	317	63	50
1900	639	199	402	38	62

The extreme closeness of the votes for some of the officers may lead to a recount, which, if permitted, will work no injustice to anyone. The vote was an unusually large one, 639, as against 626 last year and 565 in 1898. As near as can be ascertained the Democratic vote is about 210, and the Republican about 425, though party lines were quite generally eliminated, a number of the candidates being supported by both parties. The polls were kept open an hour later, till 5 o'clock, and the adjourned meeting will not be held till March 19, instead of March 12, giving a better opportunity for the committee to consider the various articles. Prof. L. L. Burrington presided. The committee is as follows: George W. Wiggin, Horace W. Hosie, George E. Emerson, Joseph P. Bassett, Henry E. Ruggles, George R. Winsor, Harry T. Hayward, Charles Stewart, Charles F. Nye, Jeremiah J. McCarthy, Lawrence J. Kelly, C. Milton Allen, Fred P. Chapman, Bradley M. Rockwood, George W. Bacon.

Repairs Completed.

I am now ready for business again and hope to give more prompt attention to orders than I have been able to in the last two weeks. I shall have waiting orders ready within a few days. Thanking patrons for their patience,

Respectfully yours,

TYPEWRITING done at THE SENTINEL office.

An Enjoyable Affair.

Notwithstanding the storm last Thursday evening there was a goodly company assembled at the Franklin house to celebrate the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Briggs. Guests were present from Attleboro, Providence, Middleboro, New Bedford, besides many from Franklin and Unionville. The tables were very daintily set, calling forth the admiration of all, laden with salads, fancy crackers, olives, Neapolitan cream, cakes, macaroons, candy and coffee. Miss Crocker poured the coffee and Miss Sherman served the cream. W. S. Johnson was master of ceremonies and H. W. Thayer and N. C. Nye were ushers. Charles Frazer, Carl Emerson and Walter Hancock also assisted as waiters. Mrs. Tracey and Prof. Spence furnished excellent music, and Mrs. Stewart and Miss Whiting sang solos and duets very acceptably. Many beautiful gifts were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Briggs as testimonials of esteem and regard. The occasion was essentially social and pleasant.

Mr. Briggs was born in Rochester and Mrs. Briggs in Middleboro, their marriage taking place in Attleboro, where where Mr. Briggs was a jeweler, their home being the old Briggs homestead in Norton, where their daughter, Amy Pierce, was born. Previous to coming to Franklin he was engaged in farming. They came to the Franklin House just twelve years ago the first of March, that day also being the anniversary of their marriage. He has had charge of the hotel six years and was at the Hotel Briggs for three years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Briggs are highly esteemed, and Miss Briggs is an active worker in all benevolent and church affairs.

The SENTINEL on behalf of many friends hereby extends hearty congratulations at the successful passing of the twenty fifth milestone.

Memorial.

Dr. Charles Kingsley was born in East Machias, Me., March 6, 1869. He fitted for Bowdoin college at Washington academy, but on deciding to study medicine he gave up the college course, and spent three years with a preceptor. He then attended Jefferson Medical college in Philadelphia, from which he graduated in March, 1891. In July of the same year he located in Franklin, and at once became a member of the Thurber Medical association, of which he remained an active member up to the time of his death. He also became a member of the Massachusetts Medical society in 1897. He married Miss Mary Elliott in 1892. He remained in Franklin until January, 1896, enjoying a large practice, which was also very laborious. At this time his health gave out, and he sold out his practice and took a much-needed rest of six months, a part of which was spent in travel. He then located in Marlborough, where he remained until his death, which took place on Dec. 27, 1899.

Dr. Kingsley was one of the most valued members of our society. A thorough physician, of good intelligence, having a large measure of native good sense, he was decided in his own convictions, while at the same time respecting those who differed from him. His presence at our meetings was always helpful to the members, and he was always ready to do his part. He was president of the association in 1892-3, and delivered the annual address in 1895, taking for his subject "Heredity and Education."

Cheerful, vivacious, a pleasant companion and associate, he was sincere and honest and free from jealousy. In his profession not superficial, but inclined to go to the root of things, and willing to extract help for his patients from any source, he was respected, appreciated and loved by his brother physicians with a sincerity and tenderness not soon to be forgotten.

Resolved, That in the untimely death of Dr. Charles Kingsley, the Thurber Medical association and the general brotherhood of the medical profession have sustained an unusual loss. Thus stricken down upon the threshold of professional life, with bright prospects in his immediate future, his developing talents and thorough equipment seem an inscrutable loss. In this apparently severe dispensation we discern the ways of a power and knowledge far beyond mortal ken. To us of limited vision, the shaft seems untimely broken. We bow in reverent submission to the will and decree of One who sees us as never man sees, and whose inscrutable way leads upwards and onwards to vistas far too glorious for mortal sight.

Resolved, That with heads bowed in reverent submission, we commend our brother's ashes to waiting dust, and his weeping relatives to the unfailing source of consolation, while his professional brothers mourn with them his untimely departure.

Are You Going?

The entire performance of "The Great Southern Minstrels" this evening is reported to be entirely novel in conception and execution from start to finish. The musical excellence of the first part is shown by the names of such vocalists as Tommy McKenna, the celebrated boy baritone; Chas. P. Van, S. J. Bennett, Joseph Le Clair, A. L. Comstock, W. B. Fretse and Paul Hickman. The olio as presented by this company is also said to be a skillful kaleidescopic melange of great worth and merit.

Minstrelsy is well liked here and the promise of anything new in this popular amusement is a pleasure looked forward to with a great deal of anticipation. "The Great Southern Minstrels" come heralded as being up to date and of a novel order, as well as the most complete and largest entertainment on the road.

Sure to Do Good.

The Opera House was packed to the doors and many were obliged to stand at the illustrated temperance lecture by Rev. T. J. B. House on Sunday evening. In straightforward, earnest language the speaker described the course of the young man downward through drink, and his final reformation through conversion, the subject matter being appropriately accompanied by views especially taken for the purpose. He held the closest attention of the large audience, the truthfulness of the story appealing to all who listened. Mrs. Chas. L. Stewart and W. C. Sherman sang a number of duets with effectiveness and rare musical expression. In the afternoon over 500 children saw the pictures and heard the story, and it is hoped a lasting impression was made upon their youthful hearts.

Forged Without Hands.

The skill of "Jim the Penman" seems very ordinary by the side of that of Charles L. Borg, who confessed, a few days ago, to Post Office Inspector Joseph Farrell, of Chicago, that although he has no hands, he forged a postal money order. The prisoner explains the fact that he forged without hands by his skill in writing with a pen or pencil held in his mouth. All the movements necessary to good penmanship he is able to make with his head. He can even put in the flourishes, it is said, and to the astonishment of his friends inscribes in this way these chirographic horrors—birds and fishes and scrolls—of which writing experts are so proud. When evidence which came to his notice pointed to the handless man as being guilty of forgery, the post office inspector was loth to believe the statement, but when the man was arrested he gave an exhibition of his "mouth-writing" which astonished his captors and led them to believe he might be culpable. His confession is said to have followed the charge.

It is quite the fad nowadays to study "bird life." This is one of the after effects, no doubt, of the birdless bonnet movement. The out-of-door clubs are becoming numerous. The middle-of-the-winter season will be spent in reading up for the spring and autumn practical studies, when the members actually "take to the woods," and study the birds in their native homes. The method of study is to start early in the morning with an instructor who has become learned in bird lore and can tell all about any twittering little creature that is courageous enough to light on a bough near enough to be observed. The plumage of this bird, its habits, its quality of song, its particular style of nest building and all of its little life are unfolded to the wondering student.

Perry Hutchinson, of Marysville, Mo., recently went out into his hog pasture on a visit of inspection. Down near the creek he found an old sow with a litter of pigs and near her was lying the dead body of a huge wildcat which had been killed by the sow in fair fight. Perry says that while he was looking at the strange sight the old sow said: "Woof!" whereupon he lit out for a fence. That old sow had a perfect right to say "woof" or anything she pleased.

Some humorous things are found in petitions to congress, but the assertion of Daniel M. Page, of Missouri, is delightful in its way. Mr. Page says: "At the battle of Corinth I was surrounded by 8,000 Yankees, but I bravely escaped and was never again captured." For his bravery in thus eluding the Yankees, Mr. Page wants to be restored to his rank and title of first lieutenant in the regular army, which he held before the war.

A poor widow who was arrested in Wilkesbarre, Pa., charged with assaulting a constable, won much sympathy in the courtroom when she said that the officer, in levying on her household good on a landlord's warrant, tried to remove her baby from its cradle and take the cradle. The jury found her not guilty and placed the costs on the constable, and the justice of the peace who issued the warrant. The court struck off the latter clause.

"Hell and Who Will Be There" was the title of a sermon delivered recently by a Colorado Springs minister. It is understood that he is still hiding from the people whose names figured in his discourse.

A Rossville (Kan.) woman died lately just after filing a suit for divorce. What a warning this should be to other women who are wincing beneath the chafing of the marital harness.

Nature's Efforts.

My friend's colored maid came in one day after her regular weekly outing, looking as if she had enjoyed herself.

"Well, Susan," said my friend, who is sympathetic, "I suppose you saw all the pretty things in the stores downtown?"

"No'm, not z'actly. I ben lookin' at de handiwork ob de Lawd."

"Indeed? So you took a little trip to the country to see the fields and flowers?"

"N'm; no, indeedy. I be'n at de dime museum. They has a hairy boy there and a two-headed man." — Waverly Magazine.

As It Soon Will Be.

"Seeing is Believing."

When you see people cured by a remedy, you must believe in its power. Look around you. Friends, relatives, neighbors all say that Hood's Sarsaparilla, America's Greatest Medicine, cleansed the blood of their dear ones and they rise en masse to sing its praises. There's nothing like it in the world to purify the blood.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Not what you pay for Coffee, but what Coffee pays you.

There are two values to every article, — what it costs and what it's worth.

Cork costs 8 cents a pound, but if you are drowning half a mile from shore, its value would be "not what you pay for cork but what cork pays you."

You are not drowning, but you are using up strength and vitality in your daily work. You are getting back that strength and vitality in part from your morning cup of coffee.

It makes little difference what you pay for it; the important question is "What does it pay you?" You can see the strength you have, but you can't see the increased strength you would get if you drank

CHASE & SANBORN'S
"High Grade"
COFFEE.

This is a fact! You can easily test its truth. It will cost you one pound of coffee — that's all!

The Title of Dowager.

The title of "dowager" seems likely in the near future to become obsolete. Queen Victoria's eldest daughter was the first to resent the title of dowager, and is now known by virtue of a royal decree as "Empress Frederick." Queen Wilhelmina of Holland has been much disturbed by the idea of her mother being looked upon as an old lady, and has caused to be published a decree commanding that henceforth the former regent is to be styled, not "queen dowager," but "Queen Emma of the Netherlands." Even the old empress of China, wishing to be in the fashion, has consented to this reform.—N. Y. Herald.

Laws Against Miscegenation.

Marriages between persons of negro descent and whites are prohibited and punishable in Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia and West Virginia. Marriages between Indians and whites are void in Arizona, Nevada, North Carolina, Oregon and South Carolina, and between whites and Chinese in Arizona, Nevada, Utah and Oregon.—Chicago Chronicle.

Domesticated Ostriches in Africa.

Ostriches have only recently been domesticated in South Africa. Only 80 were in captivity in 1865; ten years later there were 21,751 being cared for in Cape Colony, and in 1897 237,960. The true wild bird still exists north of the Vaal and Orange river, but is eagerly hunted for its feathers, which demand a higher price than those of the domesticated brethren.—N. Y. Sun.

"The Noblest Mind

The best contentment has." Yet, however noble in mind, no man or woman can have perfect contentment without physical health. The blood must be kept pure and the stomach and digestive organs in good order. The best means for this purpose is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It promptly cures all blood humors and eruptions and tones up the system.

The favorite cathartic is Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

Beauty Is Blood Deep.

Clean blood means a clean skin. No beauty without it. Cascarets, Candy Cathartic clean your blood and keep it clean, by stirring up the lazy liver and driving all impurities from the body. Begin to-day to banish pimples, boils, blotches, blackheads, and that sickly bilious complexion by taking Cascarets,—beauty for ten cents. All druggists, satisfaction guaranteed, 10c, 25c, 50c.

Women love a clear, healthy complexion. Pure blood makes it. Burdock Blood Bitters makes pure blood.

A wheelman's tool bag isn't complete without a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil. Heals cuts, bruises, stings, sprains. Monarch over pain.

CELERY KING
NATURE'S CURE

A Young Girl's Experience.

My daughter's nerves were terribly out of order. She was thin and weak; the least noise startled her, and she was wakeful at night. Before she had taken one package of Celery King the change in her was so great that she could hardly be taken for the same girl. She is rapidly growing well and strong, her complexion is perfect, and she sleeps well every night.—Mrs. Lucy McNutt, Brush Valley, Pa.

Celery King cures Constipation and all diseases of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Sold by druggists. 25c and 50c.

Pedigree.

"Horses and human beings are very different in some respects," remarked Mr. Rale Byrd, as he shut up a turf guide.

"Of course," was the answer; "for instance, people have two legs and horses have four."

"That's not what I was thinking of. You take a horse with a pedigree and he is expected to get out and raise a dust and do something. But it's sort of different with human beings."—Washington Star.

Expensive Shirt.

Rivers—Why didn't you let Throggins brag about his three-dollar shirt if he wanted to? What was the use of your telling him that the shirt you are wearing cost you $3.50? You know you never paid more than $1.50 for it.

Brooks—That's all it cost in the first place, but I've had it washed at least 20 times, at ten cents per time. I wasn't going to let him crow over me.—Chicago Tribune.

A Paying Experiment.

Loving is a paying business,
  More than hope fulfills.
There's my wife, with love intense
Once I paid her compliments—
  Now I pay her bills.

Bridge Burned with Electricity.

A novel method of destroying a wooden bridge has recently been tried with complete success. Weighted wires are placed across certain beams and heated by means of electricity; the wires burn their way through the wood, aided by the weights, and the bridge falls.—Chicago Chronicle.

Running No Risks.

George—The ring doesn't seem to fit very well, Clara. Hadn't I better take it back and have it made smaller?

LIES vs. FACTS

No man wishes to buy a pig in a bag, and no one places confidence in the advertisements of Scale makers which SOUND improbable. "Something for nothing" can never be had, and when you see Scales advertised so indefinitely as to leave a BIG percentage for the imagination; investigate carefully.

Some people are fair-minded, and to them we refer the Scale question. Actions SPEAK louder than words, and when you find a genuine article made of good material FOR a fair price is it not better that the facts in the case should be looked into by fair-minded men for THEMSELVES before buying any kind of a Scale?

CAMP FIRE STORIES

IN LIBBY PRISON DAYS.

When the Hardships of Warfare Were Such as Are Not Known Now.

John J. Walker, who is now justice of the peace and police magistrate in Wilkinsburg, Pa., enlisted in the Seventh Pennsylvania volunteers, but later joined the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth, in which he was captain of company E.

"Squire McMullen was in the bodyguard of Gen. Patterson when we first marched toward Philadelphia," he said "and I shall never forget one remark he made.

"We were crossing the Potomac when McMullen turned around and shouted to us: 'Boys, if you can't get any horses here in Maryland you had better go back to Philadelphia.'

"I served considerably over four years in the army, was at Antietam, Gettysburg and the Wilderness, but I must say that no experience that I had in any battle can compare with the horror of the 11 months I spent in Libby prison.

"I was captain of company E in the Wilderness, and some of us had managed to get a little too far ahead.

"It was in the second day's fight, and the rebs, after wounding a good many of us—and unfortunately I was one of that number—managed to cut us off from our comrades and make us prisoners.

"We, none of us, knew exactly what was going to become of us, but finally I was sent to Libby prison.

"No man who did not live through that hell can realize the horror of it; no man can have enough command of language to express what we went through.

"When I went into that prison I was a big, strong man and weighed 192 pounds; when I came out 11 months later I weighed 117 and was a physical wreck.

"There were about 2,500 of us in the place at the time, and the famous tunnel through which some escaped was built while I was there.

"All of the men, unfortunately, could not be trusted. They were all members of the union army, but some were traitors, and if they had learned of the work that was being done on that tunnel would immediately have betrayed the conspirators and delivered them up.

"It was a pretty anxious time for those of us who were in the secret.

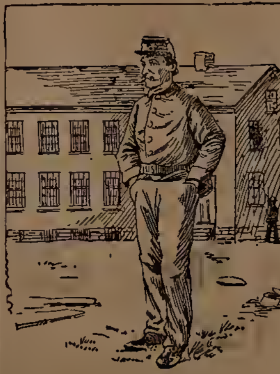
"Discovery meant certain death for all of us, but to stay where we were seemed also to be death, and so we had, as we thought, simply a choice between two evils.

"When the tunnel was finished the men drew lots and those who were lucky enough were permitted to join the escaping party.

"My luck was against me, and I was compelled to remain where I was.

"Each morning the guards used to come in and announce the men who had been exchanged by calling out their numbers and leading them out.

"My number was 218, and never in my life shall I forget the thrill that went through me when after 11 months I heard the guard call it out.



LIBERATED FROM LIBBY PRISON.

"When I got out of that prison and saw once more the skies above me and felt once more the sunlight and the fresh air around me, I was the happiest man in the world, and I can say to-day that though I have had many blessings in my life, and have many things for which to be thankful, the happiest day I ever spent was the day I was liberated from Libby prison.

"I have a nephew who was with the Tenth Pennsylvania at Manila, and when he came home I asked him how he liked soldiering.

"'It was awful, Uncle John,' he said; 'it was simply awful. They treated us well and fed us the best they could, but the meat was not always as fresh as it might be, and some of the other food could have been improved on.'

"I had to laugh at that. These men who, I believe, are just as brave as any of us were, complain because their meat is not always fresh.

"Why, in the army of the Potomac I don't believe we had beef three times a year, and even when we did get it it was not always recognizable.

"No, the boys who went out to this Spanish war were brave enough, no doubt, but after all is said and done they were 'feather-bed' soldiers.

"When they have four or five men killed they call it a battle. If we didn't have half a dozen men killed before breakfast we concluded that the 'rebs' had overslept themselves.

"And, besides that, these boys had no Libby prison."—Philadelphia Press.

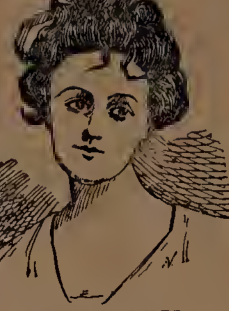
PRETTY MAY GOELET.

Rich American Girl May Decide to Become the Wife of Young Prince Henry of Orleans.

Miss May Goelet, who, it is reported, may some day be the wife of Prince Henry of Orleans, is one of the richest heiresses of New York. When she reaches the age of 25 Miss Goelet will come into possession of $20,000,000 left her by her father, the late Ogden Goelet. As the wife of a royal prince of France she could use her immense fortune with more advantage in a worldly social way than if she were to marry any other nobleman, not royal, in all Europe.

Young Prince Henry is the heir of whatever glory remains to the royalty of France. He is the eldest son of the Duc de Chartres, but in spite of the fact that his blood is as blue and as kingly as that of any king in the world he is a poor man—a fact which many tradesmen in Paris and other continental cities know to their sorrow. Henry has been long looking for a wife who would supply him with funds. Everybody knows this, and everybody knows, too, that he has been "paying attention" in the most assiduous fashion to the beautiful young New Yorker. The Goelets live in fine style in superb apartments at a hotel in the Place Vendome. They have been entertaining in a lavish manner, and at every one of these affairs Prince Henry has been the principal guest and has never attempted to conceal the fact that he has eyes only for Miss Goelet's beauty and for none besides.



MISS MAY GOELET.
(American Heiress Who May Marry Prince Henry of Orleans.)

French royalty is at low ebb, and thrones are not eager to ally themselves with dead hopes. So it came about that when Austria declined to pay Prince Henry's debts by such an alliance with one of its princesses the possible French king turned to the untitled but fabulously wealthy American girl.

One fact that seems to strengthen the theory that a royal wedding is in sight is found in Mrs. Goelet's preparations to buy a beautiful home in Paris, where, it is said, she will live permanently. Is it not possible, people are asking, that Mrs. Goelet has an ambition that her fascinating daughter shall outshine Comtesse Castellane, who was Miss Anna Gould? But Mother Goelet may not succeed, even if this theory be true, for Miss May has a will of her own, and may not be persuaded to marry for social glory.

Prince Henry is as rollicking a young man as Europe contains. He is much younger looking than his age and way of life would lead one to fancy, and he has been the source of much anxiety to his father, who in 1895 had his son declared a bankrupt. The prince is 32 years old.

NEW VESSEL COVERING.

Its Inventor Is Modest Enough to Expect That It Will Revolutionize Ship Building.

A Canadian inventor from Toronto, who evidently believes that nature's methods are the most perfect to secure any given end, has patented a covering for vessels, which it is expected will revolutionize the maritime industry, and particularly the construction of yachts and other speedy craft. This consists of a disposition of the material so as to conform, as nearly as possible, to the scales of a fish. Many of the mechanical and engineering problems of the day are found to have been solved long ago by nature, but even so this proposition to follow nature and cover a ship with scales is rather startling, to say the least. The inventor claims that great speed may be obtained by following this construction, which consists essentially in covering the hull with small plates of any suitable material, arranged like shingles, so as to overlap each other. Perhaps the twentieth century cup defender will be built on such lines, but why nature in her perfect work did not make whales with scales is another question.

Werner's Dictionary of Synonyms & Antonyms, Mythology and Familiar Phrases.

A book that should be in the vest pocket of every person, because it tells you the right word to use. No Two Words in the English Language Have Exactly the Same Significance. To express the precise meaning that one intends to convey a dictionary of Synonyms is needed to avoid repetition. The strongest figure of speech is antithesis. In this dictionary the appended Antonyms will, therefore, be found extremely valuable. Contains many other features such as Mythology, Familiar Allusions and Foreign Phrases, Prof. Loisette's Memory System, 'The Art of Never Forgetting,' etc., etc. This wonderful little book bound in a neat cloth binding and sent postpaid for $0.25. SHELDONVILLE.

Charles E. Nash has bought the Holman place on Arnold street.

B. M. Follett will shortly move his family into the house owned by Alfred Nash of Charlestown.

Rev. E. E. Harris was unable to return to his studies at the Newton Theological school last week on account of a sprained ankle.

Like a thunderbolt from a clear sky came the news on Tuesday afternoon of the death of Mrs Edson George of Wrentham. The deceased was well known and highly respected by all here, having been a resident of this place for eleven years before her marriage, less than a year ago. Much sympathy is expressed for the husband, brother and aged mother, who are left to mourn her loss

It is very hard to stand idly by and see our dear ones suffer while awaiting the arrival of the doctor. An Albany, (N. Y.) dairyman called at a drug store there for a doctor to come and see his child, then very sick with croup. Not finding the doctor in, he left word for him to come at once on his return. He also bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which he hoped would give some relief until the doctor should arrive. In a few hours he returned, saying the doctor need not come, as the child was much better. The druggist, Mr. Otto Scholz, says the family has since recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to their neighbors and friends until he has a constant demand for it from that part of the country. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

An Octopus Plague.

A correspondent writes as follows from Rivage de Questichou, a small watering place on the coast of the Cherbourg promontory: "For the last two or three months this coast has been visited by a perfect octopus plague. They have ruined the fisheries, and many men have laid up their boats in despair. They devour everything, even the crabs and lobsters and oysters and all shell fish. The other day a man employed at the large oyster beds near here told me he had that day found one that had eaten 18 oysters that tide. The shore is strewn with octopi, and the other morning along high-water mark I counted 68 in a distance of 200 yards. A friend here measured one, and it was 5 feet 7 inches across the tentacles, but there are far larger ones than that. Some of the suckers are as large as a two-shilling piece. They are most loathesome beasts. Unless the cold winter destroys them there will be no bathing next summer along the coast."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Where the Hand-Organ Is a Favorite.

One place at last has been discovered where the hand organ grinder is appreciated. It is the Congo Free State, and the people there are so fond of the music that the missionaries have turned it to excellent account. When they first went there they found that the natives had a decided antipathy to the marital yoke, but they overcame it by announcing that at every wedding a hand organ should play. The innovation was accepted with enthusiasm, and the rush to the hymeneal altar was tremendous. So infatuated were some couples with the music of the ceremony that they insisted upon being married daily for several successive days. The Congo Free State appears to be the organ grinder's paradise, and if widespread publicity is given to the fact, it may induce an emigration in that direction, which will not only multiply marriages in that region, but relieve this from the tortures of the much-abounding barrel organ.—Chicago Tribune.

The Editor's Mistake.

Editors have their troubles. One of these men who presides over the destinies of a western newspaper is mourning the loss of two subscribers. No. 1 wrote asking how to raise his twins safely, while the other wanted to know how he might rid his orchard of grasshoppers. The answers went forward by mail, but by accident the editor put them into the wrong envelopes, so that the man with the twins received the answer:

"Cover them carefully with straw and set fire to it, and then the little pests, after jumping in the flames for a few minutes, will be speedily settled."

And the man with the grasshoppers was told to "give castor oil and rub their gums with a bone."—Columbian.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Hints for the Ladies on the Modes for the Winter Season.

Stylish young women are wearing with their winter shirt waists of silk, satin or cloth, in cream, cherry-red and other colors, the stiff stock of our revolutionary ancestors seen in miniatures and in larger portraits. The style has been repeated not quite literally, but effectively, in black satin, to wear with every sort of waist, in black and white effects and in pretty bright color melanges, with gray, tan and similar waists of neutral fabric. It has the appearance of a scarf carried twice around the neck and tied in a bow in front above the high collar band, which is stiff enough to keep the folds of the bias silk or ribbon in place.

There is nothing in practical millinery this season that is more stylish, unobtrusive and ladylike than the toques and English walking hats, particularly in black, with their fashionable decoration of sable plumes. Another satisfactory and becoming choice is the medium-sized round hat with all lace, buckle and floral garniture eliminated, and nothing used but velvet loops and full, handsome ostrich feathers. Those shown in the shops for conservative wearers are notably attractive, as they present no erratic dents or startling outlines, neither do they swoop low on one side of the face and curve to the top of the head on the other after the style of some of the astonishing but very fashionable shapes now worn. When not wholly straight and flat of brim the hats arch gracefully on each side above the temples, and this slight lifting allows for some artistic bits of decoration under the brim just above the waves of hair —a becoming touch of color always relieving the dull, somewhat heavy appearance of a black hat, particularly with a woman of pale or dark complexion. Exception, however, can very often be made in ordering a black velvet hat, which is almost invariably improving in its effect.

This year there appear to be quite as many attractions among exhibitions for the matron as for her youthful daughter. She has no need, therefore, to look longingly upon the dainty, exquisite gowns, wraps and picture hats not meant for her, when the rich materials and stately, elegant garments are quite as attractively and far more appropriately set forth for her special benefit. All the prevailing styles can with perfect propriety be worn by gray-haired women if the fabrics and shades are carefully toned and selected. Single rich colors and but few decorations are the best choice for elderly women, and it is well to add that careful attention to the minor details of the toilet and extreme neatness are the very first requisites in the attractive ensemble of a toilet or costume for young or old.—N. Y. Post.

Under Certain Circumstances.

"Do you think a young man should marry on a small income?"

"Oh, I can see no objection to it, if he has reached an understanding with her father."—Philadelphia North American.

A Solid Foundation.

Mrs. Parvenu—But, I'm sorry we don't belong to one of them old families.

Mr. Parvenu—Never mind, Maria. We'll found a family, and we'll found it on rocks.—Brooklyn Life.

The Midnight Stew.

Yeast—Do you ever take your wife home a stew in a box when you're out late at night?

Crimsonbeak—No, I don't have to; I generally find her in one when I get home.—Yonkers Statesman.

"What was the date of your marriage?" asked the friend of her childhood days.

"Which one?" inquired the emotional actress.—Chicago Post.

The no-license vote Monday was a surprise to a good many, but proved what has long been claimed, that when a large majority expressed their preference in the matter it would show that the sentiment against the open saloon was not an uncertain factor.

This quarantine is funny business, says Uncle Silas. Everybody that is in when the flag is unfurled is kept in and everybody that is out is kept out, except the doctor, who goes in and out and everywhere like en immune. Each day now makes the prospect of filling the icehouses less certain, and while there is a chance left that a cold snap will come and continue long enough to help the icemen out of their trouble, it is only a chance. The lumbermen have improved the winter and much wood and lumber for this section will come into the market as the result of the winter's work. During the past three months the straw goods business has not had the snap and go that makes it highly beneficial to employes, although a considerable amount of goods have been produced. The prospect for spring building is good, but the greater amount of promise in this line of trade is at Unionville.

Will Interest His Friends.

MONTROSE, COL.

MY DEAR FRIEND JOHNSON:—The improvements in our church building we have made include a new Sunday school room, infant class room and kitchen; a tower sixty feet high and a new furnace. The total cost is about $1,600. Among the many improvements is the new pulpit set for which my Franklin Y. P. S. C. E. gave us the money. This has given us a very neat and convenient church building and we all rejoice in its completion.

This has been one of the pleasantest winters so far that I have ever seen. Since the middle of December we have hardly had a cloudy day, and the temperature has not been down to zero any time this month. A day or two ago I went down to the postoffice and saw a man without coat or vest on, another in his shirt sleeves, and overcoats are but very few. While the people on the Eastern slope have had a considerable amount of wind, we have had none, and I presume it is true that the climate in this valley is as pleasant as in any part of Colorado. The days are simply perfect.

I am feeling nicely and enjoy my work in the West very much. I can do as much as I ever did without fatigue. I weigh as much as I have in ten years and look upon myself as a strong man.

Yours truly,
C. W. LONGREN.

Franklin Is Interested.

For a number of months experiments have been going on at the A. D. Thayer mill by John M. Hathaway of New Bedford making linen cloth, from flax waste or spike-cylinder thrash straw product from Mr. Hathaway's patents. A company has been formed called the National Flax Fibre Co., of which Mr. Hathaway is superintendent The company is negotiating for the purchase of all of the town of Slatersville, R. I., the estimated value of which is over $500,000.

It will turn out linen goods, such as toweling, table cloths, etc. The flax comes from the far northwest, where the company has several fine fibre mills for preparing the raw material. The company comprises Franklin, Boston and New Bedford citizens. Mr. Snyder of Boston and Franklin is manager of the syndicate. Supt. Hathaway says the syndicate will acquire other properties and is capitalized at $10,000,000.

The plan, if fully carried out, is a good one, as the waste used is obtained from the West and can be bought very cheaply. In some sections the farmers burn this waste to get rid of it. Supt. Hathaway hopes to have the mills at Slatersville so that they will be turning out linen toweling and crash some time in April, and that 500 hands will be employed.

Again We'll Roast You.

The success of our last sale of roast beef leads us to try again, and this time we can beat our former price. We offer for Saturday 500 pounds of fine roast beef for 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 cents per pound. This is an unheard-of price for such roasts. Further, we have a fine line of fresh-killed native veal and pork, home made sausage, all the vegetables in the Boston markets, canned goods in soups and vegetables, choice creamery butter, famous coffee, in fact, everything you want. RICHARDSON, the Marketman.

An Interesting Address.

An audience that filled the Universalist chapel listened last evening to a fine and helpful sermon by the Rev. John Clarence Lee, D. D., late president of St. Lawrence university. Dr. Bolles, who was to have preached, had sent a telegram saying he was not well enough to preach and Dr. Lee had been secured at short notice. Dr. Lee spoke from the text "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." He spoke of various misapplications of the doctrine of the text; the millennial idea of the kingdom of God which was most prominent in the first three centuries; the monastic idea of the kingdom; the Protestant mistake of conceiving it as an after death kingdom to the exclusion of this world, in the main, from its reign. He said the kingdom of God is here. It is realized, first, individually, by each one making his own life holy, and this is an expansion of the truth that was in monasticism, and was in many souls realized under that form of religious life; and then in the social coherences of men. He looked for a time to come when it would not be said that "the love of money is the root of all evil," but when each man striving for gain, for an earthly immortality, for power, would have a living interest in other men.

Dr. Lee's sermon was full of the spirit of an earnest and manly religion, of which he himself seems to be such a modest and engaging example. The sermon next Thursday night will be by the Rev. F. A. Bisbee, D. D.

Will Bloom in the Spring.

The silver mine in Sheldonville is to be opened up again in the spring as the owner still thinks there is evidence of a rich deposit in the mine. It is under the management of very successful business men who do not usually put money into wildcat enterprises. During the last summer for a period of three months ver. extensive borings were made at considerable expense to endeavor to satisfactorily determine the vein. Seven holes were worked, from 40 to 317 feet deep. In the number six hole a large zone of mineral was struck, 130 feet wide, in talc and red granite, which assayed $6 4-100 per ton. This ore is low grade but there is such an extensive body that it may pay handsomely. The extensive outcropping or volcanic blow up, as some call it, which is some 200 feet wide by 5 feet thick, the crystaline matter is very heavily mineralized. It assays from $5 to $80 in gold, from 23 to 360 oz in silver and from $10 to $28 in copper, which is a good showing for New England or even in the West.

It has been demonstrated that there is quite a deal of ore, also cheap fuel, proximity to two railroads, good roads, plenty of timber, etc., which will reduce the expenses of mining to a minimum.

Mrs. Mary C. Freeman.

Mrs. Mary C. Freeman, widow of the late James M. Freeman, for most of his life a resident of Franklin, and one of its most respected citizens, passed from this life at Dorchester Saturday last and was buried at Franklin cemetery on Tuesday. Most Franklin people will recall the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman a few years ago, which brought together so many friends and testified of the great esteem in which both were held. Mrs. Freeman was a woman of gentle and quiet ways and even disposition, estimable in character and unassuming in manner. Both Mr. and Mrs. Freeman were members of the Universalist church and Mrs. Freeman was for many years a very active worker in the Ladies' Social circle of that church. Since Mr. Freeman's death Mrs. Freeman had resided with her daughter and son-in law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Baker, at Dorchester. Pleasant as her home there was, and much as was done to make her last days happy she was not sorry to pass on. She missed her life-long companion so much, her life with him had been so long and blessed, she dwelt daily with the thought of being with him in the great beyond, and when the call came she was ready.

Rev. Dwight M. Hodge, D. D., her pastor here, conducted the funeral service at Dorchester on Tuesday and spoke of her honorable and womanly life in fitting terms. And so another of the well-known and respected citizens of Franklin has gone to the eternal home.

Special Evangelistic Service.

Tonight, at the Methodist church, at 7.30 o'clock, there will be another special revival service. A short sermon by the pastor; subject, "The Light of Life." All are welcome to come and share the blessings of this hour.

Mrs. Charles Rand is meeting with excellent success in selling the "Life of Moody, the Chapman edition. Before this was published Mr. Moody's son wrote Mr. Chapman that he considered him just the man to write of his father, as they had been associated so long. Although the son has also written a book his relations with Mr. Chapman are still cordial and pleasant. Mrs. Rand will call and show the book if you desire.

In Memoriam.

Joseph G. Ray had almost lived out the allotted three score and ten years. They were years full of industry and fruitfulness. One of the most beautiful residential towns in New England is a constant reminder of his labors and his interests, telling in its churches, its academy, its factories, its charming homes, its general air of comfort, intelligence and civic pride, in its steam and electric railroads, of the manifold forms in which the watchful interest of Joseph G. Ray for the town of Franklin found constant expression. A keen and successful business man, he could not selfishly close himself to the interests of others, and many young men found his part in their business was that of encourager, counselor and well-wisher as well as financial assistant. Joseph G. Ray will not want for a monument while the town of Franklin remains where he helped place it—an example of the village beautiful, the abode of affluence, taste, culture, religious and intellectual life and prosperity for all classes.—Editorial in Woonsocket Reporter.

Resolutions of Respect.

At a special meeting of the Investment Committee of the Benjamin Franklin Savings bank of Franklin, Mass., held at their banking rooms March 6th, 1900, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

The announcement of the death of the Hon. Joseph G. Ray has brought us the deepest pain, and we wish to testify to our profound sorrow at the great loss which our institution has sustained. As officers of this corporation, in which he was so marked a figure, we feel keenly how much we have lost, and grieve that our beloved associate and adviser has been so unexpectedly summoned from us. We miss and shall continue to miss the encouragement and cheer of his presence and the aid of his wise counsel.

Therefore, resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the family of the deceased in their extreme affliction and assure them of the confidence and esteem in which he was held by the officers and members of this association, for whose best and most far-reaching interests he had ever a watchful eye.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the records of the institution and a copy of them be forwarded to the family of the deceased and also published in the Franklin SENTINEL.

Will You Assist?

The William M. Thayer school is in need of appropriate pictures for its wall decoration. The pupils of the three highest grades have been earning money (about ten cents each) and presenting it to the school. Miss Reilly's room has already purchased a beautiful picture, "Pharaoh's Horses," and Mr. Frazer's room is about to do so; but what is one picture on a large, unsightly wall? To be sure, it relieves part of the bareness of one wall, but three other walls remain. In order that the William M. Thayer school may stand favorably with schools of like grades in our most progressive towns a benefit entertainment will be given in the Horace Mann hall on Friday evening, March 16. The entertainment will consist of two parts. The first will be rendered by the pupils of Miss Reilly's and Mr. Frazer's rooms and the second by some of the best talent Franklin affords. (See Tuesday's paper.) The admission will be only 25 cents. Tickets will be on sale by the pupils Monday.

It is sincerely hoped that there may be a large attendance. The cause is a worthy one. Come and help us by your patronage to beautify our school rooms, thereby sweetening the school environment and transforming the school rooms from homely lesson places to pleasant, restful and truly helpful study halls.

FRIEND OF THE SCHOOLS.

Emerson's Market.

Nobody can beat us on meats of standard quality, whatever the price, and we continue to be the headquarters for turkeys, chickens and fowls that are right in price, in tenderness and flavor. Our pork and veal is secured about Franklin and is "all right." All the vegetables obtainable that will suit you we carry, with fancy print butter, canned goods, etc.

Card of Thanks.

Fidelity lodge, No. 41, A. O. U. W., desires to take this method to publicly extend its thanks to its retiring janitor, John D. Hatch, for his uniform courtesy, untiring faithfulness, as well as his devotion to the order.

By vote of the lodge,
W. G. CODY, Master Workman,
DANIEL MCLAUGHLIN, Recorder.

Repairs Completed.

I am now ready for business again and hope to give more prompt attention to orders than I have been able to in the last two weeks. I shall have waiting orders ready within a few days. Thanking patrons for their patience,

Respectfully yours,
R. J. CALKIN, Depot street.

COMMUNICATIONS.

[The editor assumes no responsibility for matter under this caption. This column is entirely at the disposal of the public, avoiding, as far a possible, trivial and controversial matter.]

MR. EDITOR:—Amid all the rumors of license before election, and the agitation of the curfew law there are some things difficult to understand. For instance, when a man says "I shall vote no-license and for the curfew law" his position is easy to understand. He believes in the home, believes in defending it, believes the best place for children is in the home. But when a man tells me he shall vote for license, and for the curfew law his mental condition is incomprehensible. What! Vote to compel children to go home at a certain time, and then vote to license a man to use all his best efforts to destroy that home? What kind of sense is that? There are homes that are not as safe for the children as the public streets. The man who votes for license is the enemy of the children though he votes for all the foolish curfew laws that ever were invented. I would not be understood as thinking that it is a good thing to let children run wild on the streets, but when government assumes the duties belonging to the parents it is well to consider how the duties are to be performed, and what the effect upon the children is likely to be. As far as my experience goes, children have the same disposition as "grown ups" and resent any oppressive interference with their rights or liberties that older people do. If you desire to incite a people to revolution enact oppressive and tyrannical laws; if you wish to make children rebellious and disobedient restrict their liberties beyond the point where you have any real right to do it, and you will accomplish the work just as sure as human nature is what it is.

Suppose we pass a curfew law, what is to be the penalty of breaking it, and who is to suffer the penalty, the child or the parent? Have we a right to make it a penal offense to be on the public streets without in any way menacing the public welfare? Who is going to enforce the law? One police officer, whose chief duty consists in walking up and down a small part of Main street? Is the police officer going to have the right to walk up to any young man or woman that he thinks is under sixteen and ask them their age? And must they tell him, and what would be the penalty of making a false statement in regard to it? O, but then, "any fool can ask questions," and the idea of reviving an old regulation of the time of William, the Conqueror, when people didn't have an clocks, and a bell was rung to tell them when to cover up their fires and go to bed, makes even a fool want to ask them.

H. B. HASLAM.

MR. EDITOR:—In view of the opinion common among many of the citizens in Franklin that merely an elementary preparation, such as given by the grammar schools, is sufficient for a business course, will you kindly print the following letter?

The commercial teachers of the Boston high schools sent a circular letter to the leading merchants of Boston asking their opinion about the length of years and subjects desirable to be taught. From the many answers returned, one well known as representative of the whole has been selected:

"The prime object of the course should be to fit pupils to prepare for the more general duties of business life, and should be a four years' course. The greater portion should not be given to strictly commercial subjects. English is very important. Less stress should be laid upon the study of literature than composition. French and German, if practicable, should be taught. Algebra and geometry should be included as a desirable part of a thorough mathematical training. Chemistry, physics, botany, zoology, commercial geography may be important, but only a part of a thorough general training. Practical economics, including civil government and commercial law are desirable but not essential, and American or general history should be included."

"THESE are my sentiments, gentlemen, and if you don't lika them—I'll change them," appears to be the present attitude of President McKinley in the Porto Rico tariff matter. Indeed there seems to be a growing sentiment among Republicans that he should not have yielded his convictions and changed his policy after he had positively declared that this island should enjoy the same privileges as the states of the Union. If it seamed necessary to put on a tariff as a matter of principla, one per cent. would have answered. No less a personage and experienced politician than ex-President Harrison asserts that it was both a political mistake and unjust to Porto Rico.

HEALTHY HAIR

A man with a thin head of hair is a marked man. But the big bald spot is not the kind of a mark most men like.

Too many men in their twenties are bald. This is absurd and all unnecessary. Healthy hair shows man's strength. To build up the hair from the roots, to prevent and to cure baldness, use—

Ayer's Hair Vigor

It always restores color to faded or gray hair. Notice that word, "always." And it cures dandruff.

All this time the great railway magnate had sat silent, listening.

"I am asking you, sir," said the young man, reddening, "for the hand of your daughter."

"Brevity is the Soul of Wit."

Wit is wisdom. Blood is life. Impure blood is living death. Health depends on your blood. Disease is due to bad blood. The blood can be purified. Legions say Hood's Sarsaparilla, America's Greatest Blood Medicine, purifies it. A brief story but it tells the tale.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

How to Cover the New Toques and the Materials That Are Now Being Used.

Variety is often attained for toques and small hats by the manner of arranging the material with which the shape is covered, be this velvet or piece felt, or a combination of the two, and is best explained by descriptions of the most typical among the latest models. Our general remark applies to a whole class; the covering is in one piece, say a square or a circle cut out of a square measuring at least double the diameter of the brim. A sailor hat is covered as follows with national blue velvet. One point is placed at the back so that the velvet lies flat on the brim at the back and sides. The center of the square is then folded so as to form two wing-shaped flutes jutting out on either side of the crown; the three corners remaining provide the loops and cross-piece of a large bow for the front. The trimming proper consists of four wings made of green lophophore feathers, two of which are placed beneath the wing-shaped flutes and one behind each loop of the bow. For a toque turned up at the side a circular piece of castor velvet is chosen. The center of this is placed over the low crown, molding it closely; groups of narrow tucks have previously been stitched in the velvet so as to radiate from the base of the crown nearly to the edge of the brim; other groups of tucks—set double as closely together and running in the same direction—begin about five inches further on, so as to adapt this portion of the velvet to the under side of the brim, the plain interval forming a loose bouillonne over the edge. One pale blue wing is placed on the left side against the crown, and a second against the upturned side of the brim, and a little below it is a small pouf of liberty to match. Another way of covering toques is to gather a circular piece of material half way round its outer edge and draw it up nearly to the size of the opening of the crown to which it is tacked, and to leave the remainder to be plaited in a large double box plait; the box plait comes on the left side exactly, or just over the left brow. Once this is accomplished, the covering may be left as it is in a loose sort of beret (when this is the case a smaller circle of material is required), or plaited or fluted more or less so as to adapt itself to the form underneath.

The former style is chose[illegible] toque of pale beige angora [illegible] with mounts made of the h[illegible] wings of the tawny owl s[illegible] among the folds of the box plait; th[illegible] latter for an elegant toque of dahlia-covered velvet. Three folds are formed in the velvet, so as to give the effect of a triple border to the brim, save where the box plait rises in a high crest resting on a pouf of mauve satin. The whole is surmounted by three double dahlias in three shades, running from mauve to purple, fixed to the crown behind the plait.

A piece of navy blue felt, the covering of another toque, is arranged in straight flutes lying on the brim, while the plaited portion of the material slants back over the crown, and in the center of the low pouf so formed is placed a handsome fan-shaped arrangement of small palette feathers surrounding the head of a bird.—Millinery Trade Review.

FAITHFUL MARRIED MAN.

Fear of His Wife Is the Beginning of Wisdom with Him in Rainy Weather.

In one of the most frequented of the haunts of men and the marts of trade there appeared one day a well-known business man carrying with firm grip an umbrella with a slender, oval-shaped handle touched with silver. He clearly had something on his mind.

It was the umbrella. Neither cocktail, funny story, oysters on the half shell, cigars as your mother used to make them, nor any other of the seductive wiles of the electric light contingent could induce him to relax his hold on that umbrella. Finally one of the others, for there were others, asked:

"Hadn't you better put that umbrella down for a minute?"

"Not on your life," said the married man. "I value my domestic happiness too much for that."

"Your domestic happiness!" they cried, all together. "What's domestic happiness got to do with umbrellas?"

"It's this way," responded the married man. "This is my wife's umbrella. I've lost six of my own in the past month, but I borrowed this on the express condition that I shouldn't lose it, and I shan't. No man gets this umbrella, except over my dead body. You hear me?"

And they saw the reason of the strong grip.—Philadelphia Record.

Important Business Change.

Altogether the most important movement in the business world of Boston since the year came in is the change of the great carpet firm of John H. Pray, Sons & Co. to a corporation known as the John H Pray & Sons Company. The real estate owned by the firm changed hands at the valuation of $1,010,000, while the new corporation has a capital of $825,000 fully paid in.

The Pray corporation, as it now exists, is the result of a beginning made in the carpet business as long ago as 1817 by Mr John H. Pray. The growth which succeeding years have shown has been due to the exercise of those qualities of economy, foresight and intelligent effort, which are invariably associated with all conspicuous business success.

For many years past the old firm handled vastly more carpets and rugs than all other Boston establishments combined, and from the very fact of its extensive business has been enabled to keep selling prices always at the most moderate point, since it is well known that the larger the amount of the transactions of any firm the smaller is the percentage of profit at which the business can be successfully conducted.

In changing its form from a firm to a corporation the house is simply following the accepted line adopted by the best business judgment of the day in all large enterprises. Undoubtedly the new corporation will impress itself upon this community more forcibly than ever before, and will extend its already high reputation for straightforward dealing with its customers.

The double turned-down linen collar prevails just now for men and women.

The newest skirts are entirely without lining and worn over silk skirts with frills.

Fetching neck bands of white velvet with applications of heavy guipure lace are being worn.

Stitched bands are much used in trimming tailor frocks and should be lighter in color than the habit cloth.

SING A SONG.

If you'll sing a song as you go along,
In the face of the real or the fancied wrong;
In spite of the doubt if you'll fight it out,
And show a heart that is brave and stout;
If you laugh at the jeers and refuse the tears,
You'll force the ever reluctant cheers
That the world denies when a coward cries,
To give to the man who bravely tries;
And you'll win success with a little song—
If you'll sing the song as you go along!

If you'll sing a song as you plod along,
You'll find that the busy rushing throng
Will catch the strain of the glad refrain;
That the sun will follow the blinding rain;
That the clouds will fly from the blackened sky;
That the stars will come out by and by;
And you'll make new friends, till hope descends
From where the placid rainbow bends;
And all because of a little song—
If you'll sing a song as you plod along!

If you'll sing a song as you trudge along,
You'll see that the singing will make you strong;
And the heavy load and the rugged road,
And the sting and the stripe of the tortuous goad
Will soar with the note that you set afloat;
That the beam will change to a trifling mote;
That the world is bad when you are sad
And bright and beautiful when glad;
That all you need is a little song—
If you'll sing the song as you trudge along!

Mr. Jobson Gets Dinner

WHEN Mr. Jobson got home from his office at five o'clock the other afternoon he found the front door locked. Concluding that the catch had accidentally dropped, he got out his latch key and opened the door. He was surprised to find the vestibule door locked, too. Mumbling something about the inefficacy and imbecility of modern patent locks, he used his latch key on the vestibule door also, and entered his abode. He had hung his coat and hat on the rack before he noticed the queer, lonesome silence that broods over a house the occupants of which are all out. Mr. Jobson was visibly rattled.

"Jane!" he called to his wife, somewhat commandingly from the bottom of the stairs, at the same time muttering something about women who stay upstairs primping all the afternoon. But there was no reply. Mr. Jobson went to the head of the basement stairs.

"Lily!" he called to the black servant. Lily replied not.

"Well, here's a deuced pretty note!" ejaculated Mr. Jobson, spreading his legs out in the hall and looking savage. "What's the meaning of it, I'd like to know? Man comes home from toil and drudgery at his regular daily hour and finds his home as deserted as a northwestern boom town church. Wife gadding the streets, servant off attending some five o'clock tea and parlor social, and no more sign of dinner than of elephant tracks! And I'm so hungry that I could eat a burro stuffed with firecrackers! Now, this is the worst yet. I'm willing to do as much and to stand as much as the next man for the sake of peace and a quiet life, and to keep my home together, but I'll be eternally flibbertgibbeted if this isn't too—"

The situation bore so heavily upon Mr. Jobson's spirits that he couldn't finish the sentence. He set to work thinking out schemes whereby he could exhibit his displeasure. He was in two minds as to whether he would receive Mrs. Jobson upon her return with fiery and sarcastic allusions, or greet her with solemn, martyr-like dignity, displaying evidences of grief and disappointment too profound for adequate expression. Mr. Jobson felt very much abused. He looked around to see if there was any note of explanation tacked to the top of the bureau, or resting on the mantel, or stuck in an easel on the piano. There was no note.

"Nope," mused Mr. Jobson, when he had finished his search; "there's not even a line of explanation. Just a plain case of heartless, callous indifference. And after the way I have toiled and moiled—"

The thought was almost too much for Mr. Jobson's composure. He collected himself, however, with a great effort, and decided upon a course to pursue. At first he reflected that it would be a good scheme for him to write a short, jerky note addressed to Mrs. Jobson, stick it up in some prominent place, and then depart for a wild, tumultuous time of it downtown, returning at three o'clock in the morning in a night-liner and an aggressive frame of mind. But he remembered that the last time he had chosen this method of exhibiting his displeasure over a fancied grievance he had hardly been able to drag himself around for a week afterward.

"Too much of a boomerang that way," thought Mr. Jobson, deciding not to have recourse to the tumultuous plan.

"I know just what I'll do!" he suddenly thought, and he proceeded immediately to put his scheme into operation. He took off his coat and elaborately rolled up his sleeves. Then he descended to the basement kitchen. He lighted all the burners in the gas range, coming perilously close to blowing himself to eternity in the operation, and started in to cook dinner for himself. First he dumped about half a pound of coffee into the pot, and, filling it up to the top with water, put it on to boil. Then he dug around for materials wherewith to make himself some corn bread. He ranged all the materials about him on the kitchen table, and within five minutes he was in corn meal, molasses and other things up to his elbows. He put a great many ingredients in the corn meal, and even looked at the Worcestershire sauce and the cayenne pepper. He managed to get the pan into the oven after 30 minutes of exhausting labor, by which time he was a sight, as, in fact, was the whole kitchen. Then Mr. Jobson carefully sharpened the bread knife and hunted

ASK YOUR DOCTOR!

Ask your physician this question, "What is the one great remedy for consumption?" He will answer, "Cod-liver oil." Nine out of ten will answer the same way.

Yet when persons have consumption they loathe all fatty foods, yet fat is necessary for their recovery and they cannot take plain cod-liver oil. The plain oil disturbs the stomach and takes away the appetite. The disagreeable fishy odor and taste make it almost unendurable. What is to be done? This question was answered when we first made of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Although that was nearly twenty-five years ago, yet it stands alone today the one great remedy for all affections of the throat and lungs.

The bad taste and odor have been taken away, the oil itself has been partly digested, and the most sensitive stomach objects to it rarely. Not one in ten can take and digest the plain oil. Nine out of ten can take SCOTT'S EMULSION and digest it. That's why it cures so many cases of early consumption. Even in advanced cases it brings comfort and greatly prolongs life.

SAILING MADE SAFE.

Ballasting Device Just Patented Aims to Prevent Careening by a Queer Arrangement.

Though scarcely a week passes without the issue of two or three patents for improvements in ship propellers, altering the outline or general construction of the shell of vessels, the lines and propellers of the modern steamer remain practically unchanged. James P. Pool, of Brooklyn, however, has turned his attention to sailing craft, and, as a result, has just patented a ballasting device to prevent careening under certain conditions and enable sailboats to maintain a reasonably even keel under all circumstances. This he effects by means of a ballast buoy or lee-board, that rests on the water, outside of the boat, and which is maintained in a position at right angles to the mast. The latter is mounted by a suitable arrangement to revolve on antifriction rollers. The ballasting buoy is carried at the end of a boom, which is connected to the mast at its base in a fixed position at right angles to the plane of the sail. This buoy is usually a closed, hollow, watertight body of oblong shape and with a rounded bottom which is provided with a small keel. With this arrangement, whenever the pressure of the wind on the sails tends to tilt the mast forward, or to the side, the ballast arm acts to depress the float, and this reacts upon the boat, so as to keep it righted and prevent its careening. In going before the wind, the sail being set straight across the boat, the ballast float stands [illegible] ahead of the boat, and in the [illegible] as described above reacts [illegible] tends to raise its bo[illegible] [illegible]ing down, as wa[illegible] other.
